305-VOTE MARGIN

Whetstone Wins Race For Board In City Runoff

By SARAH LITTLE
Staff Writer

W. E. Whetstone carried 17 out of 23 precincts, collecting a total of 1,646 votes to capture the fifth seat on the Monroe City School Board in a run-off election against Wayne Woods yesterday.

Out of the 2,987 votes cast in yesterday's election, Woods cornered only 1,341, carrying 6 precincts, giving Whetstone a 305 vote lead.

The run-off election was necessary because neither man received a majority of votes in the May 14 first Democratic primary. In the first primary, Whetstone had 3,345 votes, while Woods took 3,096 out of approximately 9,000 votes cast.

Whetstone said in a statement last night that he would like to compliment Woods for the fine race he conducted. He said that he felt Woods had conducted a clean race all the way, and that he was an awfully hard man to beat.

Whetstone said, "I'd like to thank the loyal people that really won this battle for me, because I had to be out of town so much, and they really carried the battle for me all the way.

"I sincerely thank all the voters for their confidence in me, and I assure them that I'll do everything in my power to make them a good school board member.

"I look forward to working with the other four members on the city school board, and I promise them my full cooperation."

ALREADY ELECTED

The 9,000 votes cast in the first primary selected a mayor, street commissioner and four members of the five - man school board. Woods and Whetstone topped eight other candidates in the first race.

Racial Riot Erupts In Street Fight

Racial violence erupted in Monroe late yesterday and three white and two Negro youths were arrested following a bloody fist fight on the railroad tracks near Jefferson and 5th Streets.

Disarmament Heads Talk On Deadlock

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. disarmament experts began a final round of top level talks Saturday on a new formula aimed at breaking the deadlock in the East-West arms conference.

Frederick M. Eaton, U.S. representative at the 10-nation meeting at Geneva, returned to confer with State Department Pentagon, Atomic Energy Commission and other officials on the next Western move.

Eaton lunched with Undersecretary of State Douglas Dillon, who has been acting secretary this week in the absence of Christian A. Herter.

RETURN

Herter will return to Washington from Massachusetts late Sunday and Eaton expects to confer with him immediately afterward. Their talk will be followed Monday by a discussion of disarmament among Herter, Eaton, Chairman John A. McCone of the Atomic Energy Commission, and one or more Defense Department leaders.

The problem which the United States and its Allies are up against is this:

Two weeks ago Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev made public a revised plan of all-out disarmament beginning with prohibition of weapons for delivery of nuclear bombs and warheads and the withdrawal of all troops from foreign bases.

The Western powers in the 10-nation conference have rejected Khrushchev's revision bit by bit while welcoming a greater demonstration of interest on his part in the problems of creating an efficient policing system for any disarmament agreement.

Reply Planned On Algeria War

TUNIS, Tunisia (UPI) — The Algerian Moslem rebel "government-in-exile" announced yesterday it will reply Monday to French President Charles de Gaulle's new truce offer for an end to the 5½ year-old-war in Algeria.

Prospects for an end to the Algerian war, which have blown hot and cold ever since de Gaulle returned to power two years ago, were looking up again in the wake of the French president's proposals early this week.

Tunisians close to the rebel leaders let it be known that Monday's answer will be either a clear "yes" or "no" to de Gaulles invitation to cease-fire talks in Paris.

RAINACH DECLARES

Will Not Pledge To Support Demo

Former state senator W. M. Rainach, Louisiana segregation leader told the Morning World last night that he would not "promise to support the Democratic Party's nominee regardless of who he is."

Rainach made the statement after being informed that Democratic National Committeeman Camille Gravel had said that he (Rainach), Leander Perez and ex - governor Robert Kennon would be challenged as delegates to the national convention in Los Angeles because of a lack of faith in the party.

Gravel said yesterday that he plans to try to prevent seating of the trio "whose records indicate they might balk at supporting the party's nominee."

Gravel, co-chairman of the national party's credentials committee, named Kennon, Perez and Rainach as the members of the delegation to whom he referred.

KENNON OUT

Kennon said that he had withdrawn as a delegate 10 days ago. He led the state delegation out of the national convention in 1952 in a row over states' rights and later spearheaded a Democrats - for - Eisenhower movement in the state.

Gravel said the challenges will be based on "the fact they are not entitled to the presumption that they are coming to the convention in good faith as Democrats because of their previous records and statements on Democratic party affairs."

Gravel, an Alexandria lawyer, said they will be asked to pledge that they will back the party nominees in the November election.

Rainach stated positively that he would not. Perez was not available for comment.

Gravel has twice been voted out of his national party office by the state Democratic Central Committee, but the national party has refused to acknowledge the state action.

Rainach said last night that he is a life-long democrat and "I regard myself as a states' rights Democrat."

"I still plan to go to the convention," he said.

He also predicted that if the

CHINESE REDS, NATIONALISTS

Battle Danger Darkens Strait

QUEMOY (AP) — The danger of a massive artillery battle between the Chinese Communists and the Chinese Nationalists hang over the Formosa Strait. Nationalist air force planes augmented their usual patrols, and the U. S. 7th Fleet deployed, ready for any emergency.

The Nationalist defenders of this island complex off the Red China mainland have threatened to strike back if the Communists launch another heavy shelling. A light assault would be ignored. If the Nationalists do return the fire, it will be the first time they have retaliated in nearly a year and a half.

COMMUNISTS

The Communist blasted the outposts Friday in a massive artillery attack in which they pumped 86,000 shells at the island to show their "contempt and scorn" for the President. The bombardment did virtually no damage to the rock-embedded military installations. But it shattered a hospital, destroyed 83 civilian homes, killed 8 persons, and wounded 47.

Up to about nightfall Saturday the Communists adhered to the curious pattern they set on Nov. 26, 1958, when they announced they would withhold action against the island outposts on even-numbered days. Saturday marked the 292nd consecutive even-numbered day on which the island was spared from gunnery.

U.S. Orders Two Cubans To Leave Country

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States Saturday ordered two consular officials of Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro's government to leave this country within 48 hours. One was accused of being Cuba's master spy in the Miami area.

Undersecretary of State Douglas Dillon in a note to the Cuban embassy said the two are:

Carlos Manuel Lazaro Felix Sanchezy Basquet, designated as an assistant to the Cuban consuel in Miami but described by State Department spokesmen as the "principal Cuban intelligence agent" in that area.

ATTACHE

Pressure Will Fall On Senate

Seventh Week Will See Many Big Bills Eyed

BATON ROUGE (AP)—More pressure falls on the Senate Sunday when the Louisiana Legislature begins its seventh week at 7 p.m.

The House got rid of the 492-million-dollar appropriations bill unchanged from the way administration leaders made the figures. Several other major bills have been shunted to the Senate.

The big money bill landed in the Senate and was rushed to the Senate Finance Committee. Daily hearings on the bill are scheduled at 8:30 a.m. by chairman William J. Cleveland. Crowley, and his Finance Committee.

BILL

House leaders for Gov. Jimmie Davis will come back Sunday night intent on getting passed the governor's bill to clamp down on voter qualifications.

The voter qualifications measure is one of several aimed at reinforcing Louisiana segregation laws. It carries an administration tag, and Rep. T. T. Fields hopes for victory.

The voter qualifications bill fell five votes short of the required two-thirds majority required of a constitutional proposal in a 63-19 vote Thursday. A move to reconsider saved it.

The Finance Committee also has the revived bill to increase expense accounts of Louisiana lawmakers. A special hearing is set for 10 a.m. Monday.

About 40 bills affecting the state insurance law have cleared Senate committees and are ready for floor action. The Senate may spend some time Sunday night pushing them through. Most clarify insurance laws and corporate requirements.

Eight bills to call for repeal of four constitutional blue ribbon boards and replace them with advisory boards named by the governor also are ready for Senate floor action. The bills are favored by Gov. Davis.

Scores of other bills are in from committees also for Senate floor action. They include bills to raise the pay for Supreme Court justices, sheriffs, and registrars over the state.

U.S., JAPAN

Security Pact Treaty Ratified

The ratification was automatic a moment after midnight Saturday and enabled Premier Nobusuke Kishi to even the score 1-1 over his opponents. The leftists had scored when Kishi canceled his invitation to President Eisenhower to visit Japan.

ATMOSPHERE

There was a strange atmosphere as hours ticked off toward midnight.

Then, little by little, they started to go home. At 8 p.m. some 100,000 persons packed the area leading from downtown Tokyo to the Parliament building and Kishi's oficial residence.

At 11 p.m. about 40,000 were left. As midnight came and went, those remaining vowed to keep Kishi pinned inside his residence. At 2 a.m. the crowd was down to 500 and the police guarding them fell asleep.

As for Kishi, it was commonly believed he had decided to remain in his official residence because neighbors around his private home had complained about the demonstrations there and he didn't want to antagonize them further.

Woman Finds Shrunken Head In Mailbox

NASHVILLE (UPI) — How would you like to open the door of your mailbox and find a shrunken head inside?

You'd probably agree with Bob Battle's wife that "it's not a very nice feeling."

Mrs. Battle went to the mailbox Saturday morning to leave a letter for the postman. When she opened the door she saw the head — just a little bigger than a softball, covered with long straight black hair.

It was the real thing. As a matter of fact, it once perched on the top of the neck of a member of the South American Jivaro tribe.

Official Terms It 'Rough'

NAHA, Okinawa (AP)—Scuffling broke out Sunday between U. S. Marines and anti - American demonstrators as President Eisenhower arrived for a brief visit to the Pacific island bastion.

The scuffling was in progress in downtown Nahaas as Eisenhower's auto drove by and it seemed certain that he saw it.

An official of the Okinawa high Commissioner's office said:

"This is pretty rough. Its worse than we expected."

VISIT

Eisenhower spent 20 minutes in the government compound after paying a short visit to the Okinawa Legislature located in the compound.

Then he took the back roads to the air base.

In a brief address to some 1,000 greeters at the airport on his arrival from Formosa Eisenhower said the people of the Ryukyu Islands "have a vital role for the free world in the circumstances of this era."

Arriving on what he called "a mission of peace," Eisenhower said:

"Together we of the Ryukyus and America present to the world a splendid example of the mutual benefits that result when people of good will work toward the common goal of peace and friendship in freedom."

House Returns To Battle On Taxes Tonight

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Louisiana House returns at 7 p.m. Sunday facing a battle over a proposal to grant farmers and others outright exemption instead of the present refund of gasoline taxes for nonhighway use.

President L. L. Lovell of the Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation Saturday touched off verbal artillery aimed at the Louisiana Police Jury Assn.

That would line up farmers against the police jurors, but state tax collector Robert Roland is a third factor involved.

Lovell branded police jury association opposition to House bill 377, granting the exemptions at time of purchase, ill-fated and unwarranted.

"This is not a big farmer problem," the farm leader said in a statement. "But it represents a very real loss in revenue to smaller farmers who can least afford to lose it."

Lovell said he believed the police jury association "has been misled as to the purpose and effect of this proposed change in the law."

He singled out W. A. Breedlove, Natchitoches, executive secretary of the police jury group, saying "I don't think an ill-advised and unwarranted attack would have

FOR IKE IN KOREA

Wild Welcome Slated

BY UPI, AP

SEOUL — This capital city of the Republic of Korea, still scarred and marred by war, yesterday put on its best face for President Eisenhower and prepared a wild welcome by a million people.

Chinese Communist guns thundered their own farewell as Ike left Formosa, opening up with a new barrage on the offshore island of Quemoy.

The Communists had announced they would fire on Quemoy on the President's arrival and departure as a symbol of "contempt and scorn" for him.

The government of caretaker Premier Hugh Chung called out 10,000 police to guard the triumphal route from Kimpo airfield to the Duk Soo Palace and through downtown Seoul to the U.S. Embassy. There was no thought of danger, the police had orders to keep the enthusiastic crowds under control.

A corps of street cleaners turned out to sweep the roadway and whitewash the curbs. Arches blaring the message "Welcome Ike" were raised across the route.

Huge portraits of Eisenhower hung from buildings. American and Korean flags hung on store and housefronts with signs that read, "30,800,000 Koreans Welcome You," and "Good Luck."

The Korean "April Revolution Student Association," a group which took part in the street rioting that ousted the regime of Syngman Rhee April 26, asked permission to stage a demonstration in honor of Eisenhower and against the "pro-Communist" attitude of leftists in Japan who prevented Eisenhower from visiting Tokyo.

The President was to land at 3:45 p.m. (2:15 a.m. edt) at Kimpo where sandbagged revetments still are reminders of the Korean War.

Much of Seoul has been rebuilt since the war ended in 1952. But there remain shattered areas and buildings nicked and pitted by the battles that swirled around them.

The government said it spent $200,000 to spruce up and hang decorations in honor of the President.

The welcoming program was put on a crash basis when cancellation of the Tokyo visit moved up the Korean visit three days.

Originally, Eisenhower was to have come here on Tuesday.

Under the original schedule, the President was to have greeted the American community in Seoul at the golf course. But this has been scrapped.

En route into the city from Kimpo he will stop briefly at the Duk Soo Palace and then drive to U.S. Ambassador Walter P. McConaughy's residence downtown.

IN NEW YORK

'Freedomland' Has Formal Dedication

NEW YORK (AP) — Freedomland—New York's answer to Disneyland—was formally dedicated Saturday. About 25,000 persons jammed the 205-acre amusement park in the Bronx.

Shaped roughly like the United States, Freedomland bills itself as the recreator of 200 years of American history.

In the Midwest, Chicago burns down every 20 minutes.

Mayor Robert F. Wagner, at the dedication, said Freedomland "brings to life the exciting past of this country. Most importantly, it will educate our young people and our older citizens and the newcomers to these shores to the greatness that is America."

Freedomland's designer was C. V. Wood Jr., the Texan who created Disneyland. The park is owned by the International Recreation Corp., headed by M. T. (Ted) Raynor, of Chicago, and Peter De Met, of Miami. The pair has been active in television, producing "All - Star Golf" and "Championship Bowling."

Freedomland cost more than 33 million dollars and owners estimate they must attract two million visitors this season to break even. The gates open officially Sunday.

WINNSBORO (Special) — Talk about fisherman's luck. . . .

Welch said he first missed the billfold after they left the lake and were on their way home Friday night. He said they returned and searched the boat they had used but found nothing.

He returned yesterday and searched the shallow water of the lake, but could not find the billfold.

U.S., JAPAN

Security Pact Treaty Ratified

The ratification was automatic a moment after midnight Saturday and enabled Premier Nobusuke Kishi to even the score 1-1 over his opponents. The leftists had scored when Kishi canceled his invitation to President Eisenhower to visit Japan.

ATMOSPHERE

There was a strange atmosphere as hours ticked off toward midnight.

Then, little by little, they started to go home. At 8 p.m. some 100,000 persons packed the area leading from downtown Tokyo to the Parliament building and Kishi's oficial residence.

At 11 p.m. about 40,000 were left. As midnight came and went, those remaining vowed to keep Kishi pinned inside his residence. At 2 a.m. the crowd was down to 500 and the police guarding them fell asleep.

As for Kishi, it was commonly believed he had decided to remain in his official residence because neighbors around his private home had complained about the demonstrations there and he didn't want to antagonize them further.

Woman Finds Shrunken Head In Mailbox

Mrs. Battle went to the mailbox Saturday morning to leave a letter for the postman. When she opened the door she saw the head — just a little bigger than a softball, covered with long straight black hair.

It was the real thing. As a matter of fact, it once perched on the top of the neck of a member of the South American Jivaro tribe.

NAHA, Okinawa (AP)—Scuffling broke out Sunday between U. S. Marines and anti - American demonstrators as President Eisenhower arrived for a brief visit to the Pacific island bastion.

The scuffling was in progress in downtown Nahaas as Eisenhower's auto drove by and it seemed certain that he saw it.

An official of the Okinawa high Commissioner's office said:

"This is pretty rough. Its worse than we expected."

VISIT

Eisenhower spent 20 minutes in the government compound after paying a short visit to the Okinawa Legislature located in the compound.

Then he took the back roads to the air base.

In a brief address to some 1,000 greeters at the airport on his arrival from Formosa Eisenhower said the people of the Ryukyu Islands "have a vital role for the free world in the circumstances of this era."

Arriving on what he called "a mission of peace," Eisenhower said:

"Together we of the Ryukyus and America present to the world a splendid example of the mutual benefits that result when people of good will work toward the common goal of peace and friendship in freedom."

House Returns To Battle On Taxes Tonight

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Louisiana House returns at 7 p.m. Sunday facing a battle over a proposal to grant farmers and others outright exemption instead of the present refund of gasoline taxes for nonhighway use.

That would line up farmers against the police jurors, but state tax collector Robert Roland is a third factor involved.

Lovell branded police jury association opposition to House bill 377, granting the exemptions at time of purchase, ill-fated and unwarranted.

"This is not a big farmer problem," the farm leader said in a statement. "But it represents a very real loss in revenue to smaller farmers who can least afford to lose it."

Lovell said he believed the police jury association "has been misled as to the purpose and effect of this proposed change in the law."

He singled out W. A. Breedlove, Natchitoches, executive secretary of the police jury group, saying "I don't think an ill-advised and unwarranted attack would have

FOR IKE IN KOREA

Wild Welcome Slated

BY UPI, AP

SEOUL — This capital city of the Republic of Korea, still scarred and marred by war, yesterday put on its best face for President Eisenhower and prepared a wild welcome by a million people.

Chinese Communist guns thundered their own farewell as Ike left Formosa, opening up with a new barrage on the offshore island of Quemoy.

The Communists had announced they would fire on Quemoy on the President's arrival and departure as a symbol of "contempt and scorn" for him.

The government of caretaker Premier Hugh Chung called out 10,600 police to guard the triumphal route from Kimpo airfield to the Duk Soo Palace and through downtown Seoul to the U.S. Embassy. There was no thought of danger, the police had orders to keep the enthusiastic crowds under control.

A corps of street cleaners turned out to sweep the roadway and whitewash the curbs. Arches blaring the message "Welcome Ike" were raised across the route.

Huge portraits of Eisenhower hung from buildings. American and Korean flags hung on store and housefronts with signs that read, "30,800,000 Koreans Welcome You," and "Good Luck."

The Korean "April Revolution Student Association," a group which took part in the street rioting that ousted the regime of Syngman Rhee April 28, asked permission to stage a demonstration in honor of Eisenhower and against the "pro-Communist" attitude of leftists in Japan who prevented Eisenhower from visiting Tokyo.

The President was to land at 3:45 p.m. (2:15 a.m. edt) at Kimpo where sandbagged revetments still are reminders of the Korean War.

Much of Seoul has been rebuilt since the war ended in 1952. But there remain shattered areas and buildings nicked and pitted by the battles that swirled around them.

The government said it spent $200,000 to spruce up and hang decorations in honor of the President.

The welcoming program was put on a crash basis when cancellation of the Tokyo visit moved up the Korean visit three days.

Originally, Eisenhower was to have come here on Tuesday.

Under the original schedule, the President was to have greeted the American community in Seoul at the golf course. But this has been scrapped.

En route into the city from Kimpo he will stop briefly at the Duk Soo Palace and then drive to U.S. Ambassador Walter P. McConnaughy's residence downtown.

IN NEW YORK

'Freedomland' Has Formal Dedication

NEW YORK (AP) — Freedomland—New York's answer to Disneyland—was formally dedicated Saturday. About 25,000 persons jammed the 205-acre amusement park in the Bronx.

Shaped roughly like the United States, Freedomland bills itself as the recreator of 200 years of American history.

In the Midwest, Chicago burns down every 20 minutes.

Mayor Robert F. Wagner, at the dedication, said Freedomland "brings to life the exciting past of this country. Most importantly, it will educate our young people and our older citizens and the newcomers to these shores to the greatness that is America."

Freedomland's designer was C. V. Wood Jr., the Texan who created Disneyland. The park is owned by the International Recreation Corp., headed by M. T. (Ted) Raynor, of Chicago, and Peter De Met, of Miami. The pair has been active in television, producing "All-Star Golf" and "Championship Bowling."

move to block his seating is successful it would lead toward a Democratic defeat in the state in November.

"The attempt, if successful, to not seat myself and other delegates will be the first step toward driving Louisiana out of the Democratic party in this year's election," he said.

When questioned as to a possible Los Angeles walkout, Rainach said, "I don't know what we'll do at the convention. A great deal depends on the candidates and the platform. If a candidate hostile to the South and a platform under which the South cannot endure were adopted by the convention, there would be no recourse but to sever connections with the national Democratic party."

Rainach said he did not know who the defeat or would support for the Democratic nomination.

At the same time that Gravel made known his plans, there were reports that the Democratic State Central Committee will hold a special meeting to try to protect the election of Harry Booth and Mrs. Jimmie Davis as national committeeman and committeewoman.

A committee source said if the national committee challenges the state group's action, the status of Booth and Mrs. Davis would be in jeopardy.

The source said that if the national party voids their elections, Gravel would remain as national committeeman for another term.

At Marksville, Charles A. Riddle Jr., chairman of the state central committee said he knew nothing about the special meeting.

Then she said she remembered reading in the newspaper about a shrunken head being stolen from the children's museum here.

"I went into the house and called Bob," she said, "and he came out and got it."

Battle, city editor for the Nashville Banner, said he figured the head was left in the mailbox as a practical joke.

"Who did this to me," he said, "I'm through with practical jokes forever."

The head was stolen from the museum about a month ago but it didn't come to light until a city budget hearing Thursday when Library officials asked for more money for a night watchman.

It seems that someone had "lifted" the head from its perch in a glass case.

been made by Mr. Breedlove but he checked all the facts.

The controversial measure failed to pass last Tuesday night.

As a constitutional proposal subject to final legislative action, it needed a House vote of two-thirds.

Rep. Samuel Caskin, Democrat, Parish, one of 20 who cast House abstentions, said it is a matter of reconsider. He is expected to call the proposal Sunday night for its final chance.

Breedlove was unavailable for comment. In Shreveport, president Charles L. Horne Jr. of the police jury association said he'd rather not comment.

Lovell said he would hardly think police jurors would favor depriving farmers of revenues which are rightfully theirs by constitutional action.

The existing refund system, he added, requires farmers and fishermen to keep records on all their nonhighway gasoline use, to claim refunds. It works a hardship on smaller operators.

Lovell estimated those farmers are losing about a million dollars a year as a result of the refunds of the nonhighway gasoline tax. Around a million dollars of the tax refund application comes from farmers.

Breedlove, as a native of the timbers' association, has opposed any legislation which would cut back parish government services.

State collector Roland said gasoline now reserve for road purposes should be used for that purpose only. It's a safe and sound theory here that it should be followed or any tax loss.

"We have an old law on the books now," the collector said. "That if House bill 377 passes, we can expect state gasoline tax revenues next fiscal year to drop anywhere from three to 24 million dollars."

and laughing at them.

"We told them to shut up, and they said if we didn't like it, we could meet them on the tracks," Gates said.

Gates said they stopped their car about half a block from the railroad tracks which cross North 7th near its Jefferson Street intersection.

"We walked down the tracks to where they were waiting," Gates said.

"One of them picked up a stick, and the other a brick. The one with the brick hit me in the back, and knocked me down," he added.

An unidentified person called the Monroe Police Department, who arrived and broke up the battlers, officers said.

The two were temporarily separated and arrested, but none were released seriously hurt other than Gates.

The other two were lodged in the city jail under bonds of $50 each on charges of disturbing the peace and simple battery.

They are scheduled to appear in Municipal Court Monday.

3 Injured In Collision Yesterday

Three persons were slightly injured last night when two cars collided headon near the intersection of Montgomery and Chapman Streets in West Monroe.

Police charged Frances Odom, 41, of North 7th St., West Monroe with reckless driving, causing the wreck, and operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating beverages.

Patricia A. Crawford, 20, 411 Hudson St., West Monroe, driver of the other car and Mary Ann Johnson, 18, a passenger in that auto were rushed to the St. Francis Hospital, immediately following the wreck.

Both were released after examination. Attendants said they suffered from a number of cuts and bruises.

R. J. Meinrath, of Route 3, Monroe, who was in the car with Odom, was taken to the E. A. Conway Memorial Hospital.

He was also released after receiving first aid treatment for a cut on his head, sustained during the collision.

Investigating officers said the cars crashed headon in Champion's lane of traffic. The mishap occurred on the 100 block of Montgomery Street, about 8:40 p.m.

Both cars were nearly demolished, according to police reports.

and rested, was pressed in a chariot and given "royal" treatment.

Eisenhower praised the Okinawans and Americans here for what he described as the "little relationship" existing between them.

He assured the Okinawans that "This feeling of friendship is shared by the American people as a whole."

But in downtown Naha demonstrators snake-danced around the compound chanting "Yankee Go Home" and waving Red flags and banners demanding the return of Okinawa to Japan.

The American authorities who run Okinawa were taking no chances on violence. Thirty minutes before Eisenhower's plane arrived from Formosa they started distributing tear gas shells to a battalion of U. S. Marines guarding the government compound in the downtown area.

The demonstrators grew rowdier and rowdier as word reached them that Eisenhower's motorcade was on the way from the airport. Chanting "Yankee go home," they started shoving peaceful Okinawans along the sidewalk.

Lt. Col. S. L. Sexton, commander of the 2nd Battalion, U. S. Marines, warned the demonstrators over a loudspeaker:

"Unless you cooperate and stop all demonstrations we will be forced to clear the entire area."

Minutes later a column of Marines in full battle gear with drawn bayonets marched down each side of the street.

The demonstrators fell back. They tried to whip up the crowd by screaming slogans.

They were spurred on by cheer leaders from the University of Ryukyus and the Okinawa Youth Assn., their heads swathed in red flags.

As the Eisenhower motorcade reached downtown Naha, the demonstrators, driven to new frenzy, broke through police lines but Marines forced them back.

Two more weeks of heavy work are left before the lawmakers ease off in advance of the 60-day session end July 7.

By then, Gov. Davis will have his hands tilled with hundreds of bills to be either signed or vetoed. If the governor takes no action, the bills become law, over his head.

The controversial legislation failed to pass last Tuesday 50-41.

As a constitutional proposal subject to final decision at the polls, it needed 68 House votes.

Breedlove, as a voice of the jurors' association, has opposed any legislation which would cut back parish government revenues.

Eisenhower praised the Okinawans and Americans here for what he described as the "fine relationship" existing between them.

He assured the Okinawans that "This feeling of friendship is shared by the American people as a whole."

But in downtown Naha demonstrators snake-danced around the compound chanting "Yankee go Home" and waving Red flags and banners demanding the return of Okinawa to Japan.

The American authorities who run Okinawa were taking no chances on violence. Thirty minutes before Eisenhower's plane arrived from Formosa they started distributing tear gas shells to a battalion of U. S. Marines guarding the government compound in the downtown area.

The demonstrators grew rougher and rowdier as word reached them that Eisenhower's motorcade was on the way from the airport. Chanting "Yankee go home," they started shoving peaceful Okinawans along the sidewalk.

Lt Col. S. I. Senton, commander of the 2nd Battalion, U. S. Marines, warned the demonstrators over a loudspeaker:

"Unless you cooperate and stop all demonstrations we will be forced to clear the entire area."

Minutes later a column of Marines in full battle gear with drawn bayonets marched down each side of the street.

The demonstrators fell back. They tried to whip up the crowd by screaming slogans.

They were spurred on by cheer leaders from the University of Ryukyus and the Okinawa Youth Assn., their heads swathed in red flags.

As the Eisenhower motorcade reached downtown Naha, the demonstrators, driven to new frenzy, broke through police lines but Marines forced them back.

Record

Here's a phenomenon, a member of the fair sex has set a 13 year record by enrolling as a physics major at Northeast State College. She is Rita Dianne Garrett, and was honored by being chosen as valedictorian of her class at OPHS recently. It appears that still more honors are likely to come to this ambitious student.

Concert

Bach, Beethoven, Chopin and works of contempory composers will comprise the Summer concert of LeRoy Anspach Monday in the Fine Arts Building of the College.

This is the first of a series of concert to be held during the Summer and music lovers and friends of the Anspachs are cordially invited to attend this summer concert.

In School

Thirty high school teachers are registered at Northeast State College. The college has received a grant of $44,300 from the National Science Foundation for nine weeks of instruction here. Twenty of the 30 enrolled are from Illinois, New York and North Carolina. Dr. Aaron Seamster is institute director and courses in Biology and Chemistry are offered.

Field trips will last through August 6. After successful completion of the program, a total of six hours of undergraduate study will be accorded.

mittee expects to come in not later than Wednesday with a bill to cut from 14 the number of years members of the Louisiana State University board serve. The committee is working behind closed doors on the controversial proposal.

Two more weeks of heavy work are left before the lawmakers ease off in advance of the 60-day session end July 7.

By then, Gov. Davis will have his hands filled with hundreds of bills to be either signed or vetoed. If the governor takes no action, the bills become law over his head.

Davis Friday signed into law one of the top proposals of his administration—the bill to create a State Sovereignty Commission to fight off federal encroachment on states rights and segregation.

a bird's nest," Mrs. Battle said. "Then I looked again and saw it wasn't. I saw its ear and eye. It wasn't a nice feeling."

Then she said she remembered reading in the newspaper about a shrunken head being stolen from the children's museum here.

"I went into the house and called Bob," she said, "and he came out and got it."

"Who did this to me," he said, "I'm through with practical jokes forever."

The head was stolen from the museum about a month ago but it didn't come to light until a city budget hearing Thursday when Library officials asked for more money for a night watchman.

It seems that someone had "lifted" the head from its perch in a glass case.

AN ANCIENT bone, believed to be from a mammoth, which was unearthed by Lawrence Smith of Vicksburg, Miss., while working on a highway project near there, is displayed by him during a visit in Monroe. ARCHEOLOGISTS PONDER

Visitor Displays Prehistoric Bone

A Vicksburg, Miss., man visiting two sisters in Monroe recently brought along an ancient bone uncarthed near his home town, which has started archeologists and historians wondering about possible changes in early records.

Lawrence Smith and his wife visited his sisters, Mrs. Mae Goode, 519 Mississippi, and Mrs. Callie Crowe, 4002 Gerald St., brought along what has been identified as the lower leg bone of a baby mammoth.

He also brought with him photographs showing the discovery, made while excavating for Highway 80 bypass, approximately 5½ miles north of Highway 80, four miles north of Vicksburg.

Archeologists hope to recover other portions of the skeleton at the excavation site to determine if the animal was killed by man, or died from other causes.

POINT

It can be established that the ancient animal was killed by man, Dr. Bob Neitzler, curator of the State Museum at Jackson, and state archeologist, said. "We may be able to move back by some 8,000 years the time of the first human in this part of Mississippi."

The curator explained that if no evidence of the tail to the skeleton is discovered, it will be an indication that the animal met death at the hands of a human.

Neitzler explained that in the plains country and the southwest hunters frequently brought the mammoth into camp for skinning. Skinning usually began at the "tail," which portion was first discarded.

If the tail cannot be found along with the rest of the skeleton, an extensive search will be made to see if there is any evidence that a prehistoric man killed the beast, or if a man-made weapon was used to dissect it.

Neitzler said he would supervise digging for the remainder of the skeleton, using special crews. The terrain surrounding the discovery site is rugged and virtually impassable for some vehicles.

TRACED

The curator said that Mississippi Indians had been traced back to about 500 years B. C., and if it develops that the mammoth was killed by man, "this would push the date back to 8,000 or 10,000 B.C."

Smith said that he was one of four men operating bulldozers at the site where the ancient skeletal remains were found, about 25 feet deep in a clay hill.

Date of the discovery was around June 6. The bone which Smith recovered measures about 12 inches across at the widest point.

"I wasn't digging alone," Smith explained. "There were several dozen digging in the hill. Some of us cut the four dug it up."

He said their foreman was the first to notice the bones, and call their attention to them.

Smith said, "We saw something that looked like a petrified log, but didn't think it was bone."

Several pieces of bone were broken off. The piece that Smith originally was placed on display in the office of the Vicksburg Chamber of Commerce. Archeologists from the State Museum and the University of Mississippi came to Vicksburg, chipped off a portion of the bone and removed the silt covering for further examination.

Chamber Asks Support For New Center

The Monroe Chamber of Commerce, represented by W. E. Whetstone, president, has written a personal letter to Gov. Jimmie H. Davis urging his support of a bill to provide $196,000 for a cotton research center.

House Bill 858 would create "an up to date facility to devote its full facilities to the development of improved cotton production and industries," Whetstone notes.

He forecasts that it would "prove a most lucrative and beneficial investment for the state."

The Chamber's letter emphasizes the "tremendous importance of agriculture in North Louisiana, and in particular the impact cotton has on the economy.

"Knowing that you are personally familiar with the fact that "North Louisiana is our State's largest cotton producing area" and, further that cotton is Agriculture's No. 1 money crop, we request that you present our position to the Appropriation Committee in support of HB 858," Whetstone urges the Governor.

He also points to a complete Chamber study of needs of area cotton farmers, and the "sound reasoning and common business principles" in the bill.

Government's Research By Industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Private industry is performing a mushrooming amount of the federal government's research work. At the same time it's plowing a growing amount of its own funds back into research.

American industry performed a record $8,200,000,000 worth of research and development during 1958—an increase of seven per cent above the 1957 level and 12% per cent above the 1953 amount, according to a National Science Foundation report.

Of the 1958 total, $4,600,000,000 was financed by the federal government, an increase of 220 per cent from the 1953 level.

What's more, an NSF spokesman told United Press International, the trend of increasing research by private industry is continuing. He said estimates indicate industry is currently performing about 9.4 billion dollars of research.

The NSF said it was "notable that funds for industrial research and development increased seven per cent between 1957 and 1958 while business expenditures dropped about 17 per cent during the same period.

Research and development, it said, "is receiving greater recognition as a strategic economic factor for the stabilization and growth of the economy" because of its "increasing volume and dynamic nature."

More than half of the research is being performed by two industries deeply involved in the defense effort. The aircraft and parts and the electrical equipment and communication industries accounted for 54 per cent of the more than eight billion dollars of business research in 1958.

Wishful Thinking Aired At Meeting

IN SCHOOL CURRICULA

Groups Propose More Languages

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two educational organizations yesterday proposed a vastly stepped-up program of foreign-language study in U. S. schools aimed at 10 years of unbroken instruction for students who can handle the work.

The immediate reaction of school superintendents probably will be: "Fine, but where do I get the teachers?"

The blueprint to meet this country's growing linguistic needs was drawn up by the Modern Foreign Language Assn. of America and the National Education Assn. It included these three main points:

1. Abandon the traditional pattern of two years of one or two languages, given in high school.

2. Move as rapidly as possible to an unbroken sequence of 4, then 6, and finally 10 years of study in one language.

3. Throw out the traditional grammar and translation method of teaching and replace it with a more effective system in which the student first learns to hear the language, then to speak it, read it and write it—in that order.

The report, "Modern Foreign Languages and the Academically Talented Student," grew out of a conference held in Washington last fall. As the title indicates, it was designed for those students in the top 15-20 per cent of their cases.

But the booklet noted that there is at present no way to identify accurately those students with a special knack for languages. About the best that can be done is to provide a sustained and realistic program for all children and give special attention to those who do the best.

"Preferably not later than the third grade," the report said, "all children should have the opportunity to listen to and to speak a second language. The preadolescent can learn even the most unfamiliar sounds by imitation and practice . . . much as he learned his own language.

"This remarkable skill, which everyone possesses, but which begins to decline at about the age of 10, should be put to full use in the elementary school."

The report also calls for extensive use of foreign-language laboratories, tape recordings, records, films, filmstrips, foreign-language magazines and newspapers and—most of all—talented and professionally trained teachers.

And there's the rub. No matter how much money a local school board is willing to put up for language labs, text books, etc., it can't just go out and buy a qualified foreign-language teacher. There aren't that many on the market.

IN MILEAGE ALLOWANCE

Bus Operators May Get Hike

BATON ROUGE (Special) — An increase in mileage allowances for school bus operators is being considered by the legislature, in addition to full implementation next school year of their salary schedule, it was reported today by the Public Affairs Research Council (PAR).

School bus drivers were given a new salary schedule and a new mileage allowance schedule in 1956, at the same time a new salary schedule was adopted for teachers, PAR noted in its weekly Legislative Bulletin. Both groups are scheduled to receive full implementation of their salary schedules in the coming school year. However, bus operators have been paid the full 1956 mileage allowances since the school year 1957-58.

House Bill 1019, which has passed the house of representatives, would again increase the mileage allowance for bus drivers. A companion appropriation measure of $1.8 million, HB 1019, is awaiting action to pay for the higher allowance if it is finally approved.

PAR reported that if the mileage allowance is increased and state funds provided to pay for it, the increase in state funds for school bus drivers will be considerably greater on a percentage basis than the funds provided for teacher pay.

If PAR said, the new mileage allowance is adopted and financed by the state, this will mean an increase in state funds for bus operators from $8.1 million in 1955-56 to $9.7 million in 1960-61, or an increase of 19.8 per cent.

In the same period, the state funds for teacher pay would have risen 141.5 per cent.

PAR cited a report to the state board of education in 1958 by a committee of parish superintendents which was critical of mileage allowances in the schedule adopted in 1956.

This study said the rates tended to encourage establishment of shorter bus routes, using longer buses than were needed, which would mean higher pay for the bus operators.

PAR said the pending proposal "would continue the trend to pay larger increases in mileage rates for shorter bus routes and for longer buses."

The bill, according to PAR, would continue the provision that no bus operator shall be penalized for four years (by a loss in mileage payments) as a result of any change made by a local school board in the designated size of his bus.

The superintendents' committee was further cited by PAR as having said ... "We believe that the inefficient expenditure of large amounts of state money is being caused in a large part by provisions found in Act 112, passed by the 1956 session of the State Legislature, and by very poor management or transportation on the part of some parish school boards involved . . . Many bus routes are being operated in many parishes when they are not needed."

According to PAR, most school bus operators in the public school system will earn only a month for nine months. Where they operate station wagons and the smallest buses, they will be paid $200 a month.

Study Grant For Northeast Man Revealed

Roderick A. Hickman, chairman of the Mathematics Department at Northeast Louisiana State College, has been awarded a grant by the National Science Foundation of Summer Institute to study at the University of Southern California, Los Angeles.

The institute for college teachers of mathematics will run for a six-week period, beginning June 20 and ending July 29.

Approximately 350 programs are scheduled for the current summer.

Grants to each institute cover tuition, fees, stipends, and allowances.

The National Science Foundation has designed the summer institutes to strengthen subject matter competence of science, mathematics and engineering instructors. Administrators of the institute also hope that the programs will give teachers opportunity to gain a better understanding of some of the basic and modern concepts of these subjects, increase their skills and strengthen ability to inspire students to choose careers in these fields.

The Foundation makes possible the attendance of many teachers who otherwise would need to supplement their incomes from occupations not related to their professional interests, officials explained.

Hickman will schedule two courses, both of which will include study of advanced calculus.

Agents Query Ex-Convict In Robbery Probe

OLAUSEN, Ala. (UPI) — FBI agents and local police questioned an unidentified ex-convict Saturday in connection with the $16,000 robbery of the First National Bank here Friday.

Authorities declined to identify the man, and would not give any details as to where he was questioned.

Mrs. Peggy Shotwell, 25, teller at the bank, said the man came in the window, said the hold-up and told her:

"I want $16,000. My men have the bank president and are holding him. If you don't give me the money, they'll shoot him."

The kidnaping of bank president Hugh Agricola later proved to be a hoax.

Mrs. Shotwell, who had a bullet proof glass between her and the robber, said she saw a man in the car there.

The robber, who is a native, and Mrs. Shotwell put $16,000 in $5, $10 and $20 bills in it, then pushed the sack back in the man through the drive-in booth drawer.

The man walked a few paces to an automobile in a car, got in the right side of the vehicle and the car sped away.

MORE COLD WAR MOVES

Defense Chiefs See Harassment

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — The nation's defense chiefs believe the United States faces more harassing cold war moves from the Soviet Union, although without shooting, during the next six or eight months.

But Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates says he isn't certain about what the Red Chinese may do; they could choose force.

At present, Gates told a news conference Saturday U.S. forces deployed in the Pacific and the Far East are adequate and if trouble comes, they can be augmented rapidly. There is no plan to increase strength there now.

Gates' meeting with reporters was in connection with the annual gathering of civilian and military leaders from the Pentagon and U.S. overseas bases. The troubles with the Communists, present and prospective, predominated the discussions which started Friday and ended Saturday.

Gates made it evident he believes the pressures, incidents and turmoil stirred up by the Soviet Union on a global scale are aimed at driving U.S. forces out of bases in Allied countries ringing Red territory.

The defense chief said this "forward strategy" of the overseas bases must be maintained despite Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's efforts to induce the ousting of American forces.

The tactics of Red China, which has not seen eye to eye with Khrushchev on the best ways to advance the causes of communism are different, Gates said.

The Chinese Communists have "advocated a policy of force" which was true even when trying to ease tensions," Gates said, adding he knew of no change in that policy.

Asked about the military budget and whether he thought the Pentagon's general program would prevail under congressional action, Gates said he felt that "we have a good sound defense program."

With sessions of the secretaries ending in the afternoon, Gates started a series of meetings with chiefs of the major commands at home and abroad.

Involved in this general subject was the issue of whether a single new command should be set up to direct all strategic warfare.

There has been no decision on that proposal yet, Gates said.

Also a part of the general matter of command structures and strategy is a revision of the "target lists." These are allocations of strategic targets in Communist areas which individual services and units of services would attack in event of general war. The advent of the Polaris sea-borne weapon system has created need for revisions in the list.

Gates said he assumed there is some understanding between U.S. forces and Britain's Royal Air Force on a target list allocation, but that he knew of no formal agreement.

Gates, in answering another question, noted that reports that the RAF's bomber command and the USAF's SAC had agreed on a coordinated plan for a continuous airborne alert and dispersal of planes had been officially denied. He said there had been discussions but no formal agreement.

Navy Cancels Search For Big Balloon

POINT ARGUELLO, Calif. (UPI) — The Navy, admitting it doesn't have any idea where its runaway 90-story research balloon went, Saturday cancelled a search off the coast for the delinquent research sphere.

Two destroyers and the carrier USS Coral Sea had been searching an area 150 miles due west of here, but the Navy announced at First Fleet Headquarters in San Diego that the hunt had ended.

The Navy announced Thursday it had found the balloon, about half as tall as the empire state building, in that area. But yesterday, officers said they doubted the radar contacts were the balloon. They didn't know what the radar was picking up.

The last firm contact with the balloon — carrying high altitude cosmic ray sampling gear — showed it was about 700 miles west of San Diego and headed across the Pacific.

It was launched June 5 from Brunswick, Ga., and was supposed to come down two days later near Houston, Tex. But it didn't and a team of 16 scientists chased it across the country.

Three members of the team are now in Honolulu, but the Navy said it didn't know whether the aerial search from Barbers' point in the islands would continue.

The helium-filled sphere—as big around as a football field—defied efforts of Navy fighters to shoot it down last week. Fifty rounds of cannon fire made holes so small that only a small amount of the gas escaped.

The Navy said the two-ton gondola carried by the balloon may have fallen into the Pacific, but it admitted it had no idea where the balloon might be.

ONE EVERY 5.8 HOURS

Auto Accidents Average Given

Automobile collisions occurred in Monroe at an average of one every 5.8 hours during the month of May, according to traffic accident reports from the Monroe Police Department made public yesterday.

City officers investigated 123 accidents, during the month resulting in 27 injuries. These injuries occurred in 16 wrecks. There were no fatalities.

Charts show that most of the accidents occurred between the hours of 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Eighty were reported during this eight hour period, with only 43 mishaps during the other 16 hour period for the entire month.

A breakdown of all accidents show, two pedestrian mishaps, 111 involving two or more motor vehicles, one auto - train collision, one auto bicycle, two city busses and 10 instances where cars collided fixed projects.

Property damage resulted in 112 of the 123 accidents, with 53 persons receiving charges for violations after being involved in mishaps.

Records show 166 male and 60 female drivers were involved in accidents during the month. The injury rate was reversed as 17 female and 10 males were hurt in mishaps.

Rear end colisions led all other accident causes, with 29, closely followed by stop sign violations with 21. Accidents occuring at traffic lights ranked near the bottom of the list with only four being reported during the month.

The slight decrease in mishaps from January to May is attributed to better weather conditions, according to the police department.

Louisiana Oil Activities Up During May

BATON ROUGE (AP) —Louisiana petroleum activities in May ran substantially higher than in the month a year ago, the state Conservation Department reported Saturday.

A downward trend in April was reversed.

Well completions in May totalled 320, compared with 311 a year ago, and included 201 new oil wells and 66 new gas wells. The new wells had initial daily production of 16,272 barrels of crude oil and 6,293 barrels of condensate.

Drilling permits last month totalled a two high of 436, compared with 391 in May, 1959, and included 50 for exploratory wells and 75 in offshore areas.

At the end of the month, the department reported, there were 384 active drilling rigs, including 2 on offshore locations.

Last month also saw the apparent discovery for four new fields: Point Chicot in Lafourche Parish, Deep Bayou in Cameron Parish, Richland Creek in Bossier and Parish and West Rosedale in Iberville Parish.

There were also proven extensions or two known fields, Belle Isle in St. Mary and Opelousas field in St. Landry Parish.

IN MILEAGE ALLOWANCE

Bus Operators May Get Hike

BATON ROUGE (Special) — An increase in mileage allowances for school bus operators is being considered by the legislature, in addition to full implementation next school year of their salary schedule, it was reported today by the Public Affairs Research Council (PAR).

School bus drivers were given a new salary schedule and a new mileage allowance schedule in 1956, at the same time a new salary schedule was adopted for teachers, PAR noted in its weekly Legislative Bulletin. Both groups are scheduled to receive full implementation of their salary schedules in the coming school year. However, bus operators have been paid the full 1956 mileage allowances since the school year 1957-58.

House bill 1018, which has passed the house of representatives, would again increase the mileage allowance for bus drivers. A companion appropriation measure of $1.8 million, HB 1019, is awaiting action to pay for the higher allowance if it is finally approved.

PAR reported that if the mileage allowance is increased and state funds provided to pay for this, the increase in state funds for school bus drivers will be considerably greater on a percentage basis than the funds provided for teacher pay.

If, PAR said, the new mileage allowance is adopted and financed by the state, this will mean an increase in state funds for bus operators from $3.1 million in 1955-56 to $9.7 million in 1960-61, or an increase of 209.3 per cent.

In the same period, the state funds for teacher pay would have risen 141.5 per cent.

PAR cited a report to the state board of education in 1958 by a committee of parish superintendents which was critical of mileage allowances in the schedule adopted in 1956.

This study said the rates tended to encourage establishment of shorter bus routes, using longer buses than were needed, which would mean higher pay for the bus operators.

PAR said the pending proposal "would continue the trend to pay larger increases in mileage rates for shorter bus routes and for longer buses."

The bill, according to PAR, would continue the provision that no bus operator shall be penalized for four years (by a loss in mileage payments) as a result of any change made by a local school board in the designated size of his bus.

The superintendents' committee was further cited by PAR as having said " . . . We believe that the inefficient expenditure of large amounts of state money is being caused in a large part by provisions found in Act 112, passed by the 1956 session of the State Legislature, and by very poor management of transportation on the part of some parish school boards involved . . . Many bus routes are being operated in many parishes when they are not needed."

According to PAR, most school bus operators in the coming school year will earn $267 a month for nine months. Where they operate station wagons and the smallest buses, they will be paid $200 a month.

Study Grant For Northeast Man Revealed

Roderick A. Hickman, chairman of the Mathematics Department at Northeast Louisiana State College, has been awarded a grant by the National Science Foundation of Summer Institute to study at the University of Southern California, Los Angeles.

The institute for college teachers of mathematics will run for a six-week period, beginning June 20 and ending July 29.

Approximately 380 programs are scheduled for the current summer.

Grants to each institute cover tuition, fees, stipends, and allowances.

The National Science Foundation has designed the summer institutes to strengthen subject matter competence of science, mathematics and engineering instructors. Administrators of the institute also hope that the programs will give teachers opportunity to gain a better understanding of some of the basic and modern concepts of these subjects, increase their skills and strengthen ability to inspire students to choose careers in these fields.

The Foundation makes possible the attendance of many teachers who otherwise would need to supplement their incomes from occupations not related to their profession, officials explained.

Hickman will schedule two courses, both of which will include areas of advanced calculus.

Agents Query Ex-Convict In Robbery Probe

GLADSEN, Ala. (UPI) — FBI agents and local police questioned an unidentified ex-convict Saturday in connection with the $16,000 stickup of the First National Bank here Friday.

Authorites declined to identify the suspect and would not give any details as to where or why he was picked up.

Mrs. Peggy Sheffield, 25, teller working in the bank's drive-in window, said the tall gunman came up and told her:

"I want $16,000. My men have the bank president and are holding him. If you don't give me the money, they'll shoot him."

The kidnaping of bank president Hugh Agricola later proved to be a hoax.

Mrs. Sheffield, who had a bullet proof glass between her and the bandit, said she saw a pistol in his left hand.

The gunman gave her a paper bag and Mrs. Sheffield put $16,000 in $5, $10 and $20 bills in it, then pushed the sack back to the man through the drive-in booth drawer.

The man walked a few paces to an accomplice in a car, got in the right side of the vehicle and the pair sped away.

Louisiana Oil Activities Up During May

BATON ROUGE (AP) —Louisiana petroleum activities in May ran substantially higher than in the month a year ago, the state Conservation Department reported Saturday.

A downward trend in April was reversed.

Well completions in May reached 370, compared with 341 a year ago, and included 201 new oil wells and 66 new gas wells. The new wells had initial daily production of 16,272 barrels of crude oil and 6,293 barrels of condensate.

Drilling permits last month reached a 1960 high of 436, compared with 410 in May, 1959; and included 59 for exploratory wells and 75 in offshore areas.

At the end of the month, the department reported, there were 394 active drilling rigs, including 52 on wildcat locations.

Last month also saw the apparent discovery for four new fields: Point Chicot in Lafourche Parish, Deep Bayou in Cameron Parish, Righthand Creek in Beauregard Parish and West Rosedale in Iberville Parish.

There were also proven extensions of two known fields, Belle Isle in St. Mary and Opelousas field in St. Landry Parish.

Article Says Cruises Handy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Knight newspapers said Saturday some publicly subsidized steamship lines are quietly furnishng congressmen or their wives cut-rate cruises to the seven seas.

Don Oberdorfer and Walter Pincus wrote in a copyright article:

"Several efforts to stop the practice or to force a public listing of the free or low-fare passengers have thus far failed. Railroads and airlines are already legally forbidden to grant similar individual cut rates.

"The Senate has five times passed an amendment to forbid seagoing favoritism. But four times it has been sunk behind the closed doors of a Senate-House conference committee. The fifth battle will take place soon.

"The Federal Maritime Board is now proposing to require steamship lines to report any special rates whether to shippers, congressmen or anybody else. Steamship companies commenting on this proposed rule are nearly unanimous against it."

The story continued: "Rep. William Maillard (R-Calif) is a member of the Special Steamship Conferences subcommittee of the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Says Maillard of his experience: "I have traveled frequently at reduced rates. I know as much about subsidy rates as anyone in Congress.

"'I have made at least one trip on every subsidy trade route and hope to travel on every subsidized ship line. I wouldn't do it without my wife and couldn't do it on my own.'

"In some cases, Maillard said, wives travel at minimum fare. Other times a lawmaker goes full fare and his wife goes as a 'guest. Still other times both go at half fare.

"Most of the lines make some concession—some only to members of the merchant marine committee and some to all members of Congress," Maillard said.

"Maillard sees nothing wrong in the practice and says if he were in the steamship business himself he would 'do everything' to get congressmen to go by ship so they could see what they are legislating about in the marine field."

The story said that when Sen. Thruston B. Morton (R-Ky), now Republican national chairman, "took a cruise from San Francisco to Hong Kong on his way to a 1957 official meeting in New Delhi, India, the public paid full fare—$1,560—for Morton's share of a deluxe stateroom suite. But the senator said he was 'probably' charged only a low rate for his wife's share of the stateroom, which he paid himself. He said this is a standard practice among steamship lines.

"Morton and his wife flew home . . . The public paid his air passage. . . Morton paid for his wife's plane ticket himself," the story continued.

"Morton's 53-day trip around the world was financed by the public under a Senate resolution authorizing an official delegation to attend the British Commonwealth parliamentary conference in New Delhi. The Americans attended two days of meetings there.

"Sens. Wayne Morse (D-Ore) and Frank Carlson (R-Kan) were also official Senate represenatives at the meeting. These men took less time—27 and 28 days—to fly around the world to India and back with stopovers at U.S. installations en route. . .

1960 Census Will Affect House Seats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost half of the 50 states will gain or lose seats in the House of Representatives because of the 1960 census.

On the basis of preliminary population figures announced last week, 24 states will be affected. The final figures could change this, but it is doubtful that more than two or three states would be involved in any later shifts.

When the Census Bureau made its most recent estimate 17 months ago, it said 18 states were likely to gain or lose seats. However, an Associated Press computation based on the official formula shows that the preliminary count indicated these changes since the last official estimate:

1. Fast-growing California will gain one more seat than had been expected, eight instead of seven.

2. New Jersey, Ohio and Maryland are likely to pick up one seat each, a development not anticipated heretofore.

3. Texas and Michigan probably will pick up only one new seat each instead of two as was estimated by the bureau earlier.

4. Illinois, Nebraska and Kentucky, which were supposed to be unaffected, are likely to lose one seat each.

5. Georgia probably won't lose the one seat that was believed in jeopardy.

The Census Bureau must transmit to President Eisenhower by Dec. 1 the final population figures for each state, together with the bureau's plan for reapportioning the House. Eisenhower will send the prospective reapportionment to Congress early in January, and the changes will go into effect with the 1962 congressional elections. Congress may make changes in the reapportionment plan, however.

Census officials say they expect to send Eisenhower the final figures and reapportionment plan early in October.

California without doubt will be the big winner in the rejuggling of House seats. The Golden State stands to move up from 30 to 38 seats, on the basis of the preliminary census count.

Florida will follow, picking up four seats for a total of 12.

The big losers will be New York and Pennsylvania. The preliminary count shows each losing three seats, New York dropping to 40 and Pennsylvania to 27.

Under the reapportionment formula both New York and Pennsylvania are close to the border line between holding and losing one of these seats. It would not take too much of a change in the final census figures to save one seat for either state.

The same is true of Massachusetts, which stands to lose two seats and drop to 12. The only other prospective two-seat loser, Arkansas, will drop to four seats.

States which are likely to pick up one seat each, if the preliminary count is a good gauge, are: Arizona, with a total of 3 seats in prospect, Hawaii with 2, Maryland with 8, Michigan 19, New Jersey 15, Ohio 24, and Texas 23.

Accord Note Stronger In Missile Talks

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Negotiations were reported progressing Saturday toward possible settlement of the last major aircraft-missile industry strike—using as a guide settlements accepted by machinists at two other defense firms.

Negotiators for Lockheed Missiles and Space Division and the International Association of Machinists (IAM) recessed their contract talks in San Francisco Saturday to allow the company to study the Machinists' latest counter-proposal.

Both union and company sources indicated there was some progress. Neither side, however, would predict when the walkout at plants and bases, scattered across the country, might end.

Lockheed said, though, that operations were virtually normal in the missiles and space division facilities since almost 40 per cent of the 10,000 machinists showed up for work despite the dispute.

Of 17,550 workers on the day shifts in the plants and at the bases, some 12,750 were on the job yesterday.

Convair settled its 11-day dispute with the IAM yesterday and late last night Douglas Aircraft and the machinists reached a tentative agreement. The Douglas agreement came just two hours before some 20,000 workers were to walk out, at midnight.

Douglas builds, in addition to the DC-8 and other airplanes, the reliable shorter range Thor missile and is developing the Sky Bolt air-launched ballistic missile.

Lockheed missiles and space has four top priority projects — the Sky-Spy Samos and Midas satellites, the Polaris undersea missile and the Discoverer satellite.

At Cape Canaveral — the main test range for ballistic missiles—Lockheed workers stayed on the job despite the walkout at other bases, including Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

PIANO SOLOIST LeRoy Anspach will open the Northeast State College Summer Arts Series with a recital slated for 8:15 p.m. Monday at the Fine Arts auditorium on the college campus.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Reds' Espionage In Sharp Focus

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The espionage" than the Soviet Union. State Department this week brought the extent of Communist espionage into sharp focus.

It threw open the book on Russian cloak-and-dagger machinations to counter Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's holier-than-thou protest to President Eisenhower over the famed American U-2 spy plane affair.

Summed up, the department asserted the Soviet-Red Chinese bloc operates a worldwide network of 300,000 agents — including dread secret police — in 27 spy and security services.

"There can be no doubt," it said, "as to the scope and scale of espionage directed against the free world as a whole."

The department disclosed details of the spy system in a voluminous report to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The committee made some but not all of it public in connection with its recent inquiry into the U-2 incident.

The parts withheld presumably dealt with highly secret matters, such as means used by the Central Intelligence Agency and military intelligence to gather the information.

Secretary of State Christian S. Herter told Committee Chairman J. William Fulbright (DArk.) the report amounted to "a ready reference on Soviet espionage in the United States and elsewhere."

It was, in effect, a reiteration of the President's recent declaration that the United States maintains "an open society" as opposed to the "closed societies" of the Communist bloc.

The report said "there has never been a government in history which placed heavier emphasis on For this reason, it added, "it is plain that it has a vast head start in the acquisition of what might be regarded as intelligence data regarding the United States and the free world."

Police Probe Theft Series In Monroe

Monroe police yesterday were searching for various stolen articles reportedly ranging from a polaroid camera to a pair of sunglasses.

Four thefts were reported to the department yesterday.

A polaroid camera valued at $79 was stolen from the Sears and Roebuck store on Louisville Ave. late Friday, according to company offiicals.

Chieoteal Lee, Negro woman of 2715 Jackson St., Monroe told officers someone took her billfold containing approximately $55 as she was paying a bill at a local store.

She said she was at the credit department of the store when she laid her purse on the counter and turned around for a moment. The Lee woman said when she turned back around her billfold was missing from the purse. She told officers an unidentified Negro man was at the counter at the same time she was.

Mrs. E. L. Giroir, whose address was listed as the Penn Hotel told officers yesterday afternoon that someone took a pair of prescription sunglasses from her locker at the city swimming pool late Friday.

She said she returned to the dressing room after swimming to find her clothes and other articles she had left in the locker thrown upon the floor. Nothing else was reported missing.

Kenneth Elee, a Negro youth of 208 Clayton St., West Monroe told Monroe officers his bicycle had been stolen from the Swayze Swimming Pool.

The boy said the theft took place sometimes between the hours of five and seven Friday afternoon.

Monroe police, late yesterday, were still investigating the thefts.

Helen Keller's Dark Life Shows Brightly

By CHARLES STAFFORD

EASTON, Conn. (AP) — Helen Keller's life grows long, but from her dark, still world she radiates a bright, young happiness that is absolutely contagious.

It meets the people around her and fills her home with laughter. It even shines through her sorrow.

The death of Polly Thompson in early spring has left her lonely. The Scotswoman was her friend for 46 years and her link with life, her interpreter of life, for more than 25.

Her death has dimmed Miss Keller's interest in world affairs, at least for the moment. "I have not had time to think about world conditions since my friend died," she said during an interview at Arcan Ridge, her small estate about 70 miles north of New York City.

But Helen Keller believes, as she has written, that "happiness is like the mountain summit. It is sometimes hidden by clouds, but we know it is there."

You know that it is in Miss Keller, by th ewide smile that never seems to vanish but only to dim occasionally and the quick lift of the hand that triggers each little explosion of joy.

Miss Keller, blind and deaf since infancy, will be 80 on June 27. She answers questions with an economy of words: there are few she hasn't answered before.

Speech, which she has labored so long to perfect, is an imperfect thing. Without the ear to call the words to attention and march them forth, they stumble and shove. But they make their point.

Miss Keller's health is good, her nurse says. Her cook says her appetite is excellent. She has a sweet tooth, but disciplines it severely. She shuns tried foods, but not to pamper her digestion. She doesn't want to get fat.

Her life is ruled by a calmness dictated by a philosophy of love and service, a philosophy "that the more we try to help each other and make life brighter, the happier we shall be."

Few things annoy her. She is irritated if the careful order of her desk is disturbed, she says, and "like everyone else I'm an and refuse to spell into her hand any that they feel might disturb her.

At the moment, questions about death and sorrow and loneliness are out of bounds. Yet, Miss Keller has written much about these things.

"It should never be forgotten," she said in "My Religion," "that death is not the end of life, but only one of its most important experiences. In the great silence of my thoughts all those whom I have loved on earth, whether near or far, living or dead, live and have their own individuality, their own dear ways and charm. At any moment I can bring them around me to cheer my loneliness."

Miss Keller seldom leaves Arcan Ridge. She gave up her gadabout ways more than three years ago when Miss Thompson took sick.

Helen Keller's Dark Life Shows Brightly

By CHARLES STAFFORD

EASTON, Conn. (AP) — Helen Keller's life grows long, but from her dark, still world she radiates a bright, young happiness that is absolutely contagious.

It infects the people around her and fills her home with laughter. It even shines through her sorrow.

The death of Polly Thompson in early spring has left her lonely. The Scotswoman was her friend for 46 years and her link with life, her interpreter of life, for more than 25.

Her death has diluted Miss Keller's interest in world affairs, at least for the moment. "I have not had time to think about world conditions since my friend died," she said during an interview at Arcan Ridge, her small estate about 70 miles north of New York City.

But Helen Keller believes, as she has written, that "happiness is like the mountain summit. It is sometimes hidden by clouds, but we know it is there."

You know that it is in Miss Keller, by th ewide smile that never seems to vanish but only to dim occasionally and the quick lift of the hand that triggers each little explosion of joy.

Miss Keller, blind and deaf since infancy, will be 80 on June 27. She answers questions with an economy of words; there are few she hasn't answered before.

Speech, which she has labored so long to perfect, is an imperfect thing. Without the ear to call the words to attention and march them forth, they stumble and shove. But they make their point.

Miss Keller's health is good, her nurse says. Her cook says her appetite is excellent. She has a sweet tooth, but disciplines it severely. She shuns fried foods, but not to pamper her digestion. She doesn't want to get fat.

Her life is ruled by a calmness dictated by a philosophy of love and service, a philosophy "that the more we try to help each other and make life brighter, the happier we shall be."

Few things annoy her. She is irritated if the careful order of her desk is disturbed, she says, and "like everyone else I'm annoyed by the summer heat and the winter cold."

Even-tempered and loving, Helen Keller attracts love. The little group of women around her envelop "Miss Helen" in a cocoon of protective censorship. They debate the wisdom of each question and refuse to spell into her hand any that they feel might disturb her.

At the moment, questions about death and sorrow and loneliness are out of bounds. Yet, Miss Keller has written much about these things.

"It should never be forgotten," she said in "My Religion," "that death is not the end of life, but only one of its most important experiences. In the great silence of my thoughts all those whom I have loved on earth, whether near or far, living or dead, live and have their own individuality, their own dear ways and charm. At any moment I can bring them around me to cheer my loneliness."

Miss Keller seldom leaves Arcan Ridge. She gave up her gadabout ways more than three years ago when Miss Thompson took sick.

The white clapboard colonial shares a knoll above a country crossroads with a party of gossipy old trees. Behind the house a one-rail cedar fence winds through the garden to serve as guide during Miss Keller's meanderings. She enjoys these strolls most during the spring, "especially when the lilacs are in bloom and my roses open."

Inside the house there are no concessions to blindness. The steps to the second floor, where Miss Keller has her bedroom and study, are as steep as most, and she climbs down them at least three times each day to take her meals in the dining room.

There are two dogs underfoot and a canary that sings endlessly in its dining room cage.

There are five on Miss Keller's staff, headed by Evelyn Seide. The others include a nurse, a cook a maid and a gardener.

Miss Keller spends much of her time in her study, typing or reading a book from her Braille library. She goes to bed early, about 7. "But I suspect that she sometimes reads under the covers," said nurse Wilfred Corbally.

She had just finished "Uncle Tom's Cabin," a book she never before had an opportunity to read. "It is the lightest book I ever read," Miss Keller said, "but so sad." Her favorite book is the Bible because "it gives me such joy and strength for life."

Loss of sight and sound has strengthened Miss Keller's senses of touch and smell. She often calls her fingers "my 10 eyes."

She once explained that she could tell night from day because "in the day the air is lighter, odors are lighter, and there is more motion and more vibration in the atmosphere. In the evening quiet there are fewer vibrations. The air is dense and one feels less motion in things."

These are things that the seeing do not see, and the hearing do not hear.

"Sometimes," said Mrs. Corbally, "Miss Helen tells us 'I have no handicap' and when you live with her day-to-day you know she doesn't."

CRASH DETECTIVE

He Often Begs, Borrows And Steals His Equipment

By WILLIAM C. OWEN

WASHINGTON (AP)—He often begs, borrows or "steals" his equipment, works many overtime payless hours and sometimes wears out. Yet the nation's airliner crash detective has an amazing record.

He and his fellow investigators have solved 90 per cent of the hundreds of fatal air accidents in the 21-year-old history of the Civil Aeronautics Board. Most of the unsolved crashes remain so because the wreckage lies beyond reach, perhaps at the ocean's bottom.

Sometimes it takes enormous persistence and far-ranging imagination to detect the cause of a crash. Right now investigators are carrying out one of the most intense probes ever undertaken by CAB—the search for the cause of the clear-weather crashes of two Lockheed Electras on Sept. 29, 1959, and March 17, 1960. The toll was 97 lives.ee

Widely scattered pieces from the Northwest Airlines Electra which fell near Tell City, Ind., were taken under CAB seal to Lockheed's Burbank, Calif., plant. Bit by bit, sometimes with pieces only half an inch long, CAB has reconstructed much of the plane.

This meticulous pattern of search also was followed with the remains of the Braniff Electra which crashed near Buffalo, Tex. That reconstruction was made at Dallas. CAB investigators have been shuttling between the two mockups checking their findings—which may not agree completely with the theory on wing and engine vibration recently announced as the cause by Lockheed, the plane manufacturer.

The CAB report will be disclosed at a hearing in Los Angeles in mid-July.

Without this type of thorough, impartial investigation a fatal structural fault or omission in preflight inspection procedure might go unnoticed and cause more deaths in the future. This prospect gives the CAB investigations their special urgency, makes it essential that the CAB maintain its high average of crash solutions.

It also causes worry, for CAB detectives fear they may not be able to keep up their record. They say their Bureau of Safety needs more investigators. It has 61 (30 in Washington and 31 in 10 regional offices). It wants 12 more this year and its long-range goal is another 44. But congressional appropriations committees have not been generous.

CAB says it also lacks a lot of equipment needed for crash detection. It relies heavily on help from private industry, the military and other government agencies.

Says John B. Russell, chief of the CAB Office of Administration: "Roughly, four major accidents this year cost an estimated $640,000, or about $160,000 apiece, to investigate. Of this CAB paid a total of $5,200 or $1,300 an accident."

The investigation of a major aircraft accident is a long, painstaking process. It involves such things as sifting of wreckage, laboratory tests, chemical analysis, engine tear-downs, reconstruction of flight path, review of pertinent records security checks, a public hearing, taking of depositions, the over-all analysis, and recommendations and corrective action.

If a crash detective turns up something that requires quick action to prevent possible similar crashes, he puts in a fast phone call to Washington. If the CAB agrees with him, it hands over a recommendation for action to the Federal Aviation Agency, civil aviation's safety regulator. However, airlines and manufacturers often go ahead with safety changes without waiting for an FAA order.

"When we have a splurge of accidents it takes all our manpower," says Chan Gurney, CAB vice chairman. "At times this year, our investigators have been working 18 hours a day, seven days a week. It has been such a terrific strain on them that some have transferred to other jobs."

Other investigators have been lured away by higher pay. Their CAB pay ranges from $7,300 to a high of $15,000 (one man) a year. The average is about $10,000.

Free Movies For Ladies Planned Here

A free movie, every Monday morning, for six weeks .. only ladies admitted. That's the plan revealed by the Retail Merchants Division of the Monroe Chamber of Commerce.

The Chamber currently is seeking participation in the program by at least 25 downtown firms.

Chet Rousseau, chairman of the Retail Special Events committee and Jim Williams, Chamber general manager, released details on the program yesterday.

It will begin on July 11. Merchants will play host to "Lady Shoppers Only" by sponsoring the type movie "that women want to see."

Movies arranged for showing at the Paramount theater are: The Robe, Three Coins In The Fountain, Love Is A Many Splendored Thing, A Man Called Peter, An Affair To Remember and A Woman's World.

Doors will open at 9:15 a.m., and prizes will be awarded to the earliest viewers. A total of 1,200 ladies can be admitted to each performance.

Williams noted that Birmingham, Ala., has been sponsoring such a customer relations promotion, with good results, for three years.

Each firm participating will pay $60 — $10 per week — and contribute a total of three prizes, maximum retail value $20 each.

"Hot - shot specials" — best value offered at each store on that day — will be listed on a complimentary bulletin best -buy-in-Monroe sheet, issued by the Chamber. It will be presented to each lady as she enters the theater.

The promotion will be conducted to attract shoppers on Monday mornings, and to improve customer relations.

Cases Of Polio Are Increasing, But Behind '59

WASHINGTON (AP) — Polio cases are on the increase, but the Public Health Service says the count is running far behind last year's.

In the 10 weeks since April 1—the period when the number of polio cases usually climbs from the seasonal low point—there were 135 cases, 100 of them paralytic. This compares with 354 cases, including 245 paralytic, for the same period last year.

For the first 23 weeks of 1960, ending June 11, the states had reported 356 polio cases, 255 of them paralytic. This compares with 647 cases, 453 of them paralytic, in the similar weeks of 1959.

Summer Arts Series Opens With Pianist

The Summer Arts Series at Northeast Louisiana State College will get underway tomorrow evening with a piano solo recital by LeRoy Anspach.

The performance will be given in the air - conditioned recital hall of the Fine Arts building and will begin at 8:15 p.m.

The series will include five music and dramatic events on campus during the summer months. Following the program by pianist Anspach, the Division of Fine Arts at the college will offer two one-act plays July 12, a voice recital on July 19 by Davis Bingham of the Northeast music faculty, a program of music for choir and brass ensembles July 26 and a program of chamber music August 2.

No admission will be charged for the events to which the public is invited, the announcement of the series said.

Anspach, presently a resident of Monroe, has had wide experience in the concert field, having appeared in concerts in the United States and Canada. He has appeared with major symphonies including the New York Philharmonic, the Philadelphia Orchestra and the Pittsburgh Symphony. He has performed on two occasions with the Twin City Symphony here.

The pianist values as a personal acquaintance Jose Iturbi under whose baton he has soloed on three occasions and with whom he has coached. His program tomorrow will include works of Bach, Paradies, Beethoven, Griffes, Granados, Prokofieff, Chopin and Liszt.

School For Blind Disapproves Of Voting Measure

BATON ROUGE (AP) — A spokesman for the state School for the Blind opposes a bill to prevent voting commissioners from helping blind or disabled voters cast their ballots.

Sam Passaro, chairman of the legislative committee for the state School for the Blind Alumni Assn. said Friday:

"This bill, in its original form, would disenfranchise a great number of blind voters throughout the state."

Rep. Eddie Perron's bill may come up again Sunday night. It failed by three votes to pass Thursday, but was held on a motion to reconsider.

Passaro complained an administration House committee, headed by Rep. T. T. Fields, Union Parish, had promised to let the association know when the bill came up for a hearing, "but for some unexplicable reason, they chose not to hear us, even though they said they would."

BY U.S. APPEALS COURT

Contempt Counts Are Overturned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contempt of Congress convictions of two women who balked at answering questions of congressional Red hunters were overturned Saturday by the U.S. Court of Appeals. Similar convictions of six men were affirmed.

Struck down were the convictions of Mary Knowles, librarian of the Quaker-operated William Penn Memorial Library at Plymouth Meeting, Pa., and Goldie Watson, a former Philadelphia school teacher.

Affirmed were the convictions of these men, along with the sentences they received in U.S. Dist. Court here:

Robert Shelton, a copy editor on the New York Times, six months and $500 fine.

William A. Price, formerly a reporter on the New York Daily News, three months and $500 fine. The News fired Price.

Herman Liveright, who lost his job as program director of New Orleans TV Station WDSU, three months and $500 fine.

John T. Gojack, a vice president of the left-wing independent United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, nine months and $200 fine.

Norton Anthony Russell, an engineer of Yellow Springs, Ohio, 30 days and $500 fine.

In none of the eight cases did a witness invoke the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

Instead, they specifically or inferentially relied on the First Amendment which guarantees freedom of speech, religion and assembly. Some contended the House Committee on Un-American Activities and the Senate internal security subcommittee, the groups involved, had exceeded their authority.

The cases remained undecided for several years while the Court of Appeals awaited a Supreme Court ruling in the case of Lloyd Barenblatt, an educator. The high court upheld Barenblatt's conviction on June 8, 1959, and he served a six-month sentence.

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., Shelton's attorney, and Frank J. Donner, Gojack's lawyer, were the first to announce that appeals would be taken to the Supreme Court. Other defendants or their attorneys indicated they would follow suit but said they wanted to study the appellate court's opinions before saying definitely.

Mrs. Knowles, whose case attracted widespread attention, had the steadfast support of the Quaker-operated library. The library gave her a raise after she had been convicted and sentenced to four months in jail and fined $500. It resisted community pressure for her discharge. The library later received an award of $5,000 for its stand from the Fund for the republic.

When Mrs. Knowles first was called before the Senate subcommittee in 1953 she invoked the Fifth Amendment and was fired as a librarian in Norwood, Mass. She then obtained employment with the Quaker group.

Called back as a witness in 1955, she did not claim the Fifth Amendment privilege. She told the subcommittee she had had no connection with any subversive organization for many years and that she had told the same thing to her library committee. She refused, however, to say whether she knew Herbert Philbrick, who had identified her as a Communist in New England.

The appellate court said the subcommittee had failed to establish that was under investigation, much less make it clear to the witness.

Mrs. Watson's conviction was reversed on similar grounds.

Rep. Gibbs' Resolution Enters Record

Rep. Overton Brooks of Shreveport has notified Ouachita Parish Rep. Lawrence Gibbs that House Concurrent Resolution No. 45, which Gibbs authored, has been entered in the Congressional Record of Monday, June 13.

According to Brooks, this resolution appealed to Congress to take all measures necessary to restore to the State of Louisiana revenues derived from offshore minerals developments.

Brooks said, "I am heartily in favor of this resolution."

The resolution, in effect, asked that Louisiana senators and representatives in congress, to do everything within their lawful powers to obtain restoration to the state of the revenue derived from offshore mineral development, and operations which other coastal states are allowed.

Under present law, Louisiana tending three miles, while Florida is granted offshore rights extending three miles, while Florida and Texas have been granted offshore mineral rights extending three leagues, or 10½ miles.

AS FIRST DEPUTY

Report Refers To Mikoyan

MOSCOW (UPI)—A Tass News agency report of the signing of a Soviet - Cuban trade agreement Saturday referred for the first time since early May to Anastas I. Mikoyan as "First Deputy Premier."

Previous references to the powerful Mikoyan, long a top Kremlin figure, as merely Deputy Premier had led to speculation of a Soviet cabinet reorganization, leaving Alexei N. Kosygin as the only First Deputy Premier.

But the observers had emphasized that the loss of the "first" from his title as Deputy Premier did not necessarily imply Mikoyan had lost any power or influence. They noted he still was—as far as is known—a member of the ruling Communist Party Presidium.

There had been no official confirmation of a cabinet reorganization. But observers said they based their speculation on a series of items in the Soviet press since last month.

This was the sequence of events:

Last May 4, the government announced a reshuffle in which Kosygin was named First Deputy Premier in place of Frol R. Kozlov, who became a secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee.

Four days later, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported Mikoyan's conferences with a Japanese fisheries representative and the Indonesian ambassador. In each instance, he was mentioned merely as Deputy Premier.

Four days later, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported Mikoyan's conferences with a Japanese fisheries representative and the Indonesian ambassador. In each instance, he was mentioned merely as Deputy Premier.

The same issue of Pravda, however, referred to him as First Deputy Premier in a reference to his recent trip to Cuba, which took place before the government reshuffle.

On June 15, Pravda again referred to Mikoyan as Deputy Premier.

Friday, the official Soviet news agency Tass mentioned Kosygin as a First Deputy Premier in a domestic report on an Icelandic embassy reception. In a dispatch intended for foreign consumption, the agency identified him only as Deputy Premier.

Some observers theorized that the title had been abolished. This would account, they said, for the Tass' reference to Kosygin merely as a Deputy Premier in the dispatch sent abroad Friday.

Slugs Are Used In Russian Busses

MOSCOW (AP) — The newspaper Evening Moscow reports some Soviet citizens are cheating the buses and trainways by depositing slugs for fares and that spotters who catch them hold them up to public shame. One coin box, it says, yielded buttons, screws, nuts, washers, keys and lead counterfeits.

BY U.S. APPEALS COURT

Contempt Counts Are Overturned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contempt of Congress convictions of two women who balked at answering questions of congressional Red hunters were overturned Saturday by the U.S. Court of Appeals. Similar convictions of six men were affirmed.

Struck down were the convictions of Mary Knowles, librarian of the Quaker-operated William Jeanes Memorial Library at Plymouth Meeting, Pa., and Goldie Watson, a former Philadelphia school teacher.

Affirmed were the convictions of these men, along with the sentences they received in U.S. Dist. Court here:

Robert Shelton, a copy editor on the New York Times, six months and $500 fine.

William A. Price, formerly a reporter on the New York Daily News, three months and $500 fine. The News fired Price.

Herman Liveright, who lost his job as program director of New Orleans TV Station WDSU, three months and $500 fine.

John T. Gojack, a vice president of the left-wing independent United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, nine months and $200 fine.

In none of the eight cases did a witness invoke the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

Instead, they specifically or inferentially relied on the First Amendment which guarantees freedom of speech, religion and assembly. Some contended the House Committee on Un-American Activities and the Senate internal security subcommittee, the groups involved, had exceeded their authority.

The cases remained undecided for several years while the Court of Appeals awaited a Supreme Court ruling in the case of Lloyd Barenblatt, an educator. The high court upheld Barenblatt's conviction on June 8, 1959, and he served a six-month sentence.

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., Shelton's attorney, and Frank J. Donner, Gojack's lawyer, were the first to announce that appeals would be taken to the Supreme Court. Other defendants or their attorneys indicated they would follow suit but said they wanted to study the appellate court's opinions before saying definitely.

Mrs. Knowles, whose case attracted widespread attention, had the steadfast suport of the Quaker-operated library. The library gave her a raise after she had been convicted and sentenced to four months in jail and fined $500. It resisted community pressure for her discharge. The library later received an award of $5,000 for its stand from the Fund for the republic.

When Mrs. Knowles first was called before the Senate subcommittee in 1953 she invoked the Fifth Amendment and was fired as a librarian in Norwood, Mass. She then obtained employment with the Quaker group.

Called back as a witness in 1955, she did not claim the Fifth Amendment privilege. She told the subcommittee she had had no connection with any subversive organization for many years and that she had told the same thing to her library committee. She refused, however, to say whether she knew Herbert Philbrick, who had identified her as a Communist in New England.

The appellate court said the subcommittee had failed to establish that was under investigation, much less make it clear to the witness.

Mrs. Watson's conviction was reversed on similar grounds.

Rep. Gibbs' Resolution Enters Record

Rep. Overton Brooks of Shreveport has notified Ouachita Parish Rep. Lawrence Gibbs that House Concurrent Resolution No. 45, which Gibbs authored, has been entered in the Congressional Record of Monday, June 13.

According to Brooks, this resolution appealed to Congress to take all measures necessary to restore to the State of Louisiana revenues derived from offshore minerals developments.

Brooks said, "I am heartily in favor of this resolution."

The resolution, in effect, asked that Louisiana senators and representatives in congress, to do everything within their lawful powers to obtain restoration to the state of the revenue derived from offshore mineral development, and operations which other coastal states are allowed.

Under present law, Louisiana tending three miles, while Florida is granted offshore rights extending three miles, while Florida and Texas have been granted offshore mineral rights extending three leagues, or 10½ miles.

AS FIRST DEPUTY

Report Refers To Mikoyan

MOSCOW (UPI)—A Tass News agency report of the signing of a Soviet - Cuban trade agreement Saturday referred for the first time since early May to Anastas I. Mikoyan as "First Deputy Premier."

Previous references to the powerful Mikoyan, long a top Kremlin figure, as merely Deputy Premier had led to speculation of a Soviet cabinet reorganization, leaving Alexei N. Kosygin as the only First Deputy Premier.

But the observers had emphasized that the loss of the "first" from his title as Deputy Premier did not necessarily imply Mikoyan had lost any power or influence. They noted he still was—as far as is known—a member of the ruling Communist Party Presidium.

There had been no official confirmation of a cabinet reorganization. But observers said they based their speculation on a series of items in the Soviet press since last month.

This was the sequence of events:

Last May 4, the government announced a reshuffle in which Kosygin was named First Deputy Premier in place of Frol R. Kozlov, who became a secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee.

Four days later, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported Mikoyan's conferences with a Japanese fisheries representative and the Indonesian ambassador. In each instance, he was mentioned merely as Deputy Premier.

The same issue of Pravda, however, referred to him as First Deputy Premier in a reference to his recent trip to Cuba, which took place before the government reshuffle.

On June 15, Pravda again referred to Mikoyan as Deputy Premier.

Friday, the official Soviet news agency Tass mentioned Kosygin as a First Deputy Premier in a domestc report on an Icelandic embassy reception. In a dispatch intended for foreign consumption, the agency identified him only as Deputy Premier.

Some observers theorized that the title had been abolished. This would account, they said, for the Tass' reference to Kosygin merely as a Deputy Premier in the dispatch sent abroad Friday.

WITH $1,000 CHECK

United Givers Aid Chile Fund

The United Givers Fund of Ouachita parish has given the local Red Cross chapter a check for $1,000 to aid in relief work for victims of the earthquakes in Chili, it was disclosed yesterday.

The check was presented by Charles Brown, president of United Givers, to Derwood Cann, chairman of the local Red Cross chapter. The move was in keeping with the United Givers convention avoiding multiple solicitations of money to the general public.

At the same time, it was announced that more than 2,000 Action Packet cards, calling for the insertion of a Chilean Disaster Victims," will be located in the parking lot of Sears Town shopping center in Monroe.

Purpose of the truck will be to serve as a central point for the collection of blankets for Chilean earthquake victims.

According to Cann, the truck will remain at Sears Town until Saturday, May 21. Persons desiring to contribute blankets may bring them to the truck or have them picked up by the Sears Tire and Battery Store and taken into the open truck.

On Saturday, May 21, a series of earthquakes, followed by tidal waves, smashed not only Chile but also Central America, Mexico, Hawaii, Japan, Alaska, Canada, the Soviet Union and the United States.

On May 27 Eleanor Roosevelt, honorary chairman of the National American Red Cross, will serve as honorary chairman of the Chilean relief committee for the collection of blankets.

HEADQUARTERS for the collection of wool blankets to be sent to victims of the Chilean earthquake have been set up in the parking lot at Sears Town. Opening the center were Eddie Whetstone, president of the Monroe Chamber of Commerce; Derwood Cann, chairman of the Ouachita Parish Red Cross chapter; Charles Brown, chairman of the Ouachita Parish United Givers Fund; Ed Carter, Chilean relief committee chairman for the local Red Cross, and Mayor Jack Howard. The past week, United Givers handed the local Red Cross chapter a $1,000 check. KISHI

Finish In Sight For Japan Leader

It may come this week or next month or later, but the signs are there.

Even before he was forced by leftist agitation to cancel President Eisenhower's visit, Kishi was slowly being deserted by the conservative politicians who made him the leader of the ruling Liberal-Democratic party.

In disclosing Friday that a parliamentary election will be called soon, Liberal-Democratic spokesman Kosaku Shinoda indicated that in his opinion Kishi will resign shortly after the exchange of ratification documents on the new U.S.-Japanese security alliance, providing for U.S. bases in Japan for at least another decade.

The 64-year-old Premier himself says he will consider quitting once he has fulfilled his pledge to see the new treaty into force. The exchange of documents perhaps will be held June 23 or 23 in Tokyo.

Kishi obviously is becoming a liability to conservative industrialists, bankrolling the Liberal-Democrats, who need a stable Japan to sell their products.

The two major big business groups, the employers and the management associations, reportedly want Kishi to drop out now.

Masses of neutral-minded non-Communist workers, students and intellectuals have joined Red demonstrations because the demonstrations are, above all, anti-Kishi.

"Kishi has become a scapegoat," Shinoda said. "He has taken on his shoulders the hate against conservatives, hate against America, against everything. When Kishi goes, our party will have a new leader and with that a lot of the hate will go away."

Kishi's unpopularity among many Japanese rubbed off on the United States. This was shown by the way Japanese Reds were able to lead anti-Kishi people to attack President Eisenhower's visit.

The leading candidate to be the new premier is conservative Hayato Ikeda, Kishi's minister of international trade.

Ikeda is a disciple of ex-Premier Shigeru Yoshida. His policies of his became head of the government, however, probably would not be determined so much by his associations with Yoshida as by the size of his parliamentary majority and the whims of shifting factions inside the ruling party.

Ikeda is acutely aware of the importance of American good will and the American market to Japan's future livelihood.

Even the Socialists admit the conservatives can win the election. Whether Japan becomes more neutralist hinges considerably on whether the returning turmoil brings gains or losses at the polls to neutralism-minded opposition forces.

If the Liberal-Democrats are correct in their claims of solid support from the silent, nondemonstrating millions of Japanese, and if they boost their present voting strength of 298 in the 467-seat House of Representatives, watch for Ikeda, or whoever becomes premier, to take a strong stand for quicker rearmament and a crackdown on turmoil in the streets and labor movements.

But what is the conservatives' fear assistance for Chile, creating a great need for increased cooperation on the parts of local Red Cross chapters throughout the country.

Late last week, representatives of Monroe and West Monroe churches pledged support of the parish chapter's Chilean relief program and agreed to seek monetary contributions from their respective congregations in an effort to raise money for lightening problems arising after the Chilean disasters.

Now the local chapter has turned to the solicitation of blankets from the public.

According to Cann, the lack of wool blankets is the greatest single problem being encountered in disaster areas.

Persons desiring to contribute blankets may bring them to the truck or have them picked up by the Sears Tire and Battery Store and taken into the open truck.

On Saturday, May 21, a series of earthquakes, followed by tidal waves, smashed not only Chile but also Central America, Mexico, Hawaii, Japan, Alaska, Canada, the Soviet Union and the United States.

On May 27 Eleanor Roosevelt, honorary chairman of the National American Red Cross, will serve as honorary chairman of the Chilean relief committee for the collection of blankets.

CITY RECREATION

Youngsters Flock To Playgrounds

Nearly 4,000 youngsters were signed in checker tournaments and wheel parades, as 3,366 participated at Monroe playgrounds during the past week.

Pet shows and turtle races are scheduled for this week, according to Jack Hesketh with the Monroe Recreation Department.

WITH $1,000 CHECK

United Givers Aid Chile Fund

The United Givers Fund of Ouachita parish has given the local Red Cross chapter a check for $1,000 to aid in relief work for victims of the earthquakes in Chili, it was disclosed yesterday.

The check was presented by Charles Brown, president of United Givers, to Derwood Cann, chairman of the local Red Cross chapter. The move was in keeping with the United Givers conception of avoiding multiple solicitations of money to the general public.

At the same time, it was announced that from June 20-25, a two-ton trailer truck, bearing the inscription "Help Chilean Disaster Victims," will be located in the parking lot of Sears Town shopping center in Monroe.

Purpose of the truck will be to serve as a central point for the collection of blankets for Chilean relief, it was announced today by Ed Carter, Chilean relief committee chairman for the Ouachita Parish Chapter of the American Red Cross.

According to Carter, the truck will be open during the day. Persons desiring to contribute blankets should simply bring them by the Sears' lot and throw them into the open truck.

On Saturday, May 21, a series of earthquakes, followed by tidal waves, smashed not only Chile but also California, Japan, Australia, Hawaii, Alaska, British Columbia, and several islands in the South Pacific, creating what some observers have called "the greatest disaster in modern history."

Since that date, more than 100 quakes have occurred bringing additional destruction, deaths and injuries. Over 5,000 have died, and additional millions are presently homeless.

On May 27, President Eisenhower requested that the National American Red Cross serve as overall co-ordinator of all volunteer assistance for Chile, creating a great need for increased co-operation on the parts of local Cross chapters throughout the country.

Late last week, representatives of Monroe and West Monroe churches pledged support of the parish chapter's Chilean relief program and agreed to seek monetary contributions from their respective congregations in an effort to raise money for lightening problems arising after the Chilean disasters.

Now the local chapter has turned to the solicitation of blankets from the public.

According to Carter, the lack of warm clothing and blankets is now perhaps the greatest single problem being experienced in disaster areas.

He urged that the public cooperate with the drive and bring any woolen blankets that they could spare to the drive's central location at Sears Town.

In addition, laundry route men next week will ask people on their routes if they have any blankets which they would like to contribute to the drive.

Carter cited the work of C. E. Everitt, local laundry executive, for making this virtual door-to-door campaign possible.

He also thanked the following individuals for their work as committee members for the drive: Mrs. G. P. Forman, who is in charge of contacting local women's civic organizations; Louis Gruber, who serves in the same role with men's organizations; and Burke's Motor Freight Lines, which furnished the trailer being used for collection of blankets.

HEADQUARTERS for the collection of wool blankets to be sent to victims of the Chilean earthquake have been set up in the parking lot at Sears Town. Opening the center were Eddie Whetstone, president of the Monroe Chamber of Commerce; Derwood Cann, chairman of the Ouachita Parish Red Cross chapter; Charles Brown, chairman of the Ouachita Parish United Givers Fund; Ed Carter, Chilean relief committee chairman for the local Red Cross, and Mayor Jack Howard. The past week, United Givers handed the local Red Cross chapter a $1,000 check. KISHI

It may come this week or next month or later, but the signs are there.

Even before he was forced by leftist agitation to cancel President Eisenhower's visit, Kishi was slowly being deserted by the conservative politicians who made him the leader of the ruling Liberal-Democratic party.

In disclosing Friday that a parliamentary election will be called soon, Liberal-Democratic spokesman Kosaku Shinoda indicated that in his opinion Kishi will resign shortly after the exchange of ratification documents on the new U.S.-Japanese security alliance, providing for U.S. bases in Japan for at least another decade.

The 64-year-old Premier himself says he will consider quitting once he has fulfilled his pledge to see the new treaty into force. The exchange of documents perhaps will be held June 23 or 28 in Tokyo.

Kishi obviously is becoming a liability to conservative industrialists, bankrolling the Liberal-Democrats, who need a stable Japan to sell their products.

The two major big business groups, the employers and the management associations, reportedly want Kishi to drop out now.

Masses of neutral-minded non-Communist workers, students and intellectuals have joined Red demonstrations because the demonstrations are, above all, anti-Kishi.

"Kishi has become a scapegoat," Shinoda said. "He has taken on his shoulders the hate against conservatives, hate against America, against everything. When Kishi goes, our party will have a new leader and with that a lot of the hate will go away."

Kishi's unpopularity among many Japanese rubbed off on the United States. This was shown by the way Japanese Reds were able to lead anti-Kishi people to attack President Eisenhower's visit.

The leading candidate to be the new premier is conservative Hayato Ikeda, Kishi's minister of international trade.

Ikeda is a disciple of pro-U. S. former Premier Shigeru Yoshida. His policies, if he became head of the government, however, probably would not be determined so much by his associations with Yoshida as by the size of his parliamentary majority and the whims of shifting factions inside the ruling party.

Ikeda is acutely aware of the importance of American good will and the American market to Japan's future livelihood.

Even the Socialists admit the conservatives can win the elections. Whether Japan becomes more neutralist hinges considerably on whether the left-wing turmoil brings gains or losses at the polls to neutral-minded opposition forces.

If the Liberal-Democrats are correct in their claims of solid support from the silent, nondemonstrating millions of Japanese, and if they boost their present voting strength of 288 in the 467-seat House of Representatives, watch for Ikeda, or whoever becomes premier, to take a strong stand for quicker rearmament and a crackdown on turmoil in the student and labor movements.

But what is the conservatives fail to gain, or if they lose some seats in an election fought squarely on the issues of the U.S.-Japan military pact and stronger government police powers?

The likely result would be a government more neutralist and less decisive than Kishi's.

There is some talk that the Liberal-Democrats may decide on a cooling-off period with a caretaker leader who would agree to step down in, say, six months. A leading candidate for such a post would be elder statesman Bamboku Ono.

Massachusetts Governor Gets Endorsement

BOSTON (AP)— Massachusetts Gov. Foster Furcolo was endorsed Saturday at an uproarious state Democratic convention as party's candidate for the U. S. Senate.

He seeks to oppose Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R) who is running for his third full term. Saltonstall defeated Furcolo in 1954.

On the first ballot Furcolo polled 1,189 convention votes to 331 for Mayor Thomas J. O'Connor of Springfield, who never has held statewide office and who announced his candidacy only a few days ago.

The convention started on a noisy note when State Sen. President John E. Powers of Boston —an archfoe of Furcolo's throughout his administration—stepped on the platform to place the governor's name in nomination.

First Woman On FCC Is Critically Ill

WASHINGTON (AP)—Frieda B. Hennock, 55, first woman ever to serve as a member of the Federal Communications Commission, was reported in critical condition Saturday after undergong brain surgery.

Miss Hennock, married in 1956 to William B. Simons, Washington real estate man, underwent the surgery at George Washington Hospital Thursday. She served seven years—one full term — as the FCC's first and only woman member.

During that time she became widely known for her unyielding demand that a substantial portion of all authorized television channels be set aside exclusively for noncommercial, educational use.

Miss Hennock, born in Kobel, Poland, came to the United States at the age of 6. She resigned a partnership in the New York City law firm of Choate, Mitchell & Ely to join the FCC.

Since leaving the commission she has practiced law in Washington.

The body, attired in a brown shirt, dark slacks and loafers, had been in the water less than 24 hours, a medical examiner said.

Youth Taking Positions Of Leadership In Africa

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanganyika (AP)—Julius K. Nyerere, a literate, urbane young African of 38, who is expected to become the first prime minister of an independent Tanganyika, visited the United States early this year.

He got the big treatment. He was entertained by the Nixons and the Rockefellers, feted from Park Avenue to Nob Hill and interviewed on coast-to-coast television.

Returning home, Nyerere was met at the airport here by white and black dignitaries and his mother. Out of habit, she wore no shoes.

The incident suggests a large fact of life in the world today. Young men removed by only a generation from primitive Africa are taking over many places on the continent.

The gap between Julius Nyerere and his mother also reflects the long, hurried leap that this emerging country, larger than France and Germany combined, is trying to make into the 20th century.

Nyerere's parents spent most of their lives in mud and thatched huts in the interior. They are illiterate. His father was a tribal chief who had several wives and 26 children. Julius had his teeth filed in ancient tribal fashion.

Today he lives with his one wife and five children in a small modern house of concrete and electricity in exotic Dar es Salaam. It is part of a new housing development circling a large grove of coconut palms where cattle graze. Vultures swarm overhead.

His country has a total population of 8,730,000. Of these, 8,660,000 are Africans. Their illiteracy rate is huge. In the whole native population, there are no African lawyers, only 15 doctors, 70 college graduates and 214 students now in college.

Their country has but 8,119 telephones, less than the Pentagon. In the rainy season, a whole province larger than New York is cut off completely for weeks. Telephone and telegraph lines go down, the two roads are washed out and airport runsway swim in useless mud.

This is a country where phone service also is cut off by giraffes and elephants knocking over the poles; where lions still attack villages and the government this year had to drive off a herd of 2,000 elephants trampling down crops; where tuberculosis cuts down the human population and tsetse flies decimate the livestock.

It is a country where the chief sources of income (sisal, coffee, cotton, diamonds) are in non-African hands; where the poor agricultural economy is inhibited by superstitious natives who'd rather starve in drought than slaughter their precious status symbols, their cattle; where only one-third of the land is inhabited and the techniques of their great grandfathers are still good enough for today's black farmers; a country where an official messenger carrying vote registration books had to walk 100 miles and then was drowned when his dugout canoe overturned in a flooding river.

But it is also a country where the sign on the city washrooms say "European type" (only to warn the natives about the plumbing), not "for Europeans only" as in South Africa. Tanganyika suffers from no racial tension although the blacks outnumber the whites 430 to 1 while controlling none of the wealth.

The country has no segregation, no pass books, no native reserves, no riots. Races mix in public places, hotels, bars, private homes. Economy and education and taste form social groups more than color.

It is a cosmopolitan country with 20,000 whites and 100,000 Asians, mostly Indians. The British run the country under a United Nations mandate; the Greeks own the sisal plantations, the Indians own the shops and much of the real estate, and the Africans work for everyone else.

Hot, humid Dar es Salaam (Arabic for "Haven of Peace") is the capital and chief city, on the Indian Ocean. It looks like a mixture of New Delhi, Cairo and Negro shantytowns in the American South.

You see barefooted Africans carrying huge bundles of palm roofing on their heads; a tall Masai warrior, with hair hardened into ringlets with red clay; black Moslems in skull caps, fezzes and long gowns; Indian in vivid saris veiled up to their nose; the mighty, forbidding Sikh wearing a turban and imposing beard and carrying a briefcase; and, inevitably, the British civil servant, in white shirt and white shorts and mustache, manfully smoking his pipe on the receding fringe of empire.

Against a backdrop of palms mango and huge bao bab trees, whose thick veined trunks reach 15 feet across, you see native shacks roofed with flattened-out gallon tins; and modern buildings of glass on stilts; and graceful old buildings with latticed balconies and arched, shuttered windows; the huge white British Government House with its scalloped turrets and sweeping, dignified lawn; and the Legislative Council building, where the gold mace of British royal authority is carried in every day. The session begins with the wigged Indian speaker bowing to both benches and then black, white and brown members start strafing each other with quiet but devastating tact.

In the harbor, against a backdrop of modern freighters and docks, you see native fishermen in dug-out canoes with outriggers hauling their catch and ancient sailing ships sliding in with dates and rugs from the Persian Gulf and India, sliding out with ivory, coconuts and timber.

You see Julius Nyerere, like a young Sunday School teacher gathering his flock, racing from meeting to meeting in his blue Jeep (the official car provided by his party), trying to hurry his country along to independence.

Precisely how soon that will come remains a question. In the last two years, the Africans have won an increasing voice in the council as the British have thrown more and more seats open to popular election.

Next fall, there will be the biggest election yet and Nyerere's party, the Tanganyika African National Union, is expected to sweep a huge majority of the council ministries.

At that point, Nyerere says, he will "begin negotiating with the British for complete independence." The British will try to talk him into waiting.

"We are trying to train Africans for administrative positions as rapidly as possibly," a high-ranking British administrator told me. "But it takes time, much time, considering the few educated men among them.

"We think we need another five years to prepare enough Africans for administration and independence. But, realistically, they'll probably get it in two years."

POLIO EXPERTS

Group Sees Need For Two Vaccines

WASHINGTON (AP) — A committee of polio experts said Saturday there's a need for both the Salk killed-virus vaccine and the newer live-virus vaccines against polio.

It advocated that the Salk vaccine, which must be injected, be used for primary vaccination in such areas as parts of North America and northern Europe and where adults often contract the illness.

But it indicated it favors use of the live-virus vaccines, which can be taken orally, in "countries where health services are not well developed." It also said the live vaccine might be used as a booster in areas where Salk vaccine is given as the primary immunization.

"The committee pointed out that the Salk vaccine had achieved over 90 per cent success in combating paralytic polio when it had been properly used, but that it was expensive and difficult to administer, especially in countries where health services were not well developed," the statement said.

"Especially in these areas the live vaccine given by mouth as a liquid or in candies would be easier and more economical to use."

The committee met to appraise data presented during the recent Second International Conference on Live Polio Virus Vaccines. It also reviewed the experience with Salk vaccine.

The group plans to submit an extensive report to Dr. M. G. Candau, director general of the World Health Organization. It will be circulated to all WHO's 101 member states.

In Saturday's statement, with reference to live vaccines, the group said: "The committee considered that the live vaccine had now been proved safe for the immunization of children in large trials in America, Africa, and Eastern Europe."

"More than 60 million had been vaccinated in the U.S.S.R. alone without reported ill effects," it said. "Because of the lack of data, the committee reserved judgment about its widespread use in countries where polio affected a higher proportion of adults.

"This was because polio infection is more risky in adults who have never been in contact with the virus, and it was thought that the live vaccine had not yet been adequately tested for safety in this highly susceptible group."

As to effectiveness of the live vaccines, the committee said information on this point, "although hopeful, was not conclusive as to its degree under all circumstances . . . So far this had certainly not proved to be 100 per cent."

The committee noted that "many problems remained to be solved."

FTC Pushing New Textile Labeling Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) is having a hard time administering the new textile labeling law.

One of the big difficulties is that the American housewife just does not know the difference between nylon, acrylic and modacrylic.

Most consumers have a pretty good idea about the difference between wool, cotton, linen and silk according to the Commission.

But when it comes to the more than 700 trade names for synthetic fibers, they haven't caught up with the "new look" in labeling.

MUST HAVE LABELS

The new Textile Products Identification Act is designed to protect purchasers of clothing and other textile products in the modern era of synthetic textiles.

It went into effect four months ago. All textiles manufactured after March 3, 1960, must carry labels listing the generic names and percentages of their fiber content.

Any manufacturer failing to provide the required information or give wrong and misleading information will be in violation of the law and subject to action by the FTC.

In order to bolster public understanding of the law, the Trade Commission has issued a description of the qualities of each of the 16 basic types of manufactured fibers.

Harvey H. Hannah, chief of the FTC's division of textiles and furs, voiced hope that the list would "make things easier for the consumer" and help bring order out of the recent chaotic system of textile labeling.

Each of the 16 generic names covers a class of fibers which differ more or less widely in chemical composition as well as in certain other properties.

Some of the generic terms are self-explanatory and familiar — such as rubber, glass and metallic. Others, equally familiar, are rayon, acetate and nylon.

Three others are not entirely strange to consumers because they have been used in trademarks. They are acrylic, polyester and saran. But the remaining names—modacrylic, azlon, spandex, olefin, vinal, nytril and vinyon—are almost unknown to the average buyer.

Surveys Staged For Shelter Belts

MOSCOW (AP) — Tass reports forestry specialists are surveying the steppes of western Siberia to plant five tree-shelter belts there. The belts, 200 yards wide and about 300 miles long, will be designed to protect the soil from erosion by central Asian winds. The lands first were put to the plow six years ago, Tass said, and have since doubled the grain crop in the Omsk region.

Foreign Secretary Eric Louw announced this country would send Economic Minister N. Diederichs, accompanied by Foreign Undersecretary Robert Jones, to the Leopoldville festivities.

French Opposing Death Penalty

PARIS (AP)—The execution of Caryl Chessman has prompted a new effort to abolish the death penalty in France. Rene Lecocq, a Gaullist deputy, said he had introduced his bill to end capital punishment because of Chessman's execution. Many attempts have been made to retire the guillotine to French museums, but all have failed. This one is not given much chance either.

Another Royal Tomb Is Found

CAIRO (AP)—Government archeologists report finding a tomb of the fourth Egyptian dynasty with a small wooden sarcophagus probably containing the mummy of a royal child. It lies south of the Second Pyramid of Gize at the edge of Cairo. Carved out of solid rock, it is 35 feet deep and had been blocked by three stones weighing more than two tons each.

Tanganyika suffers from no racial tension although the blacks outnumber the whites 430 to 1 while controlling none of the wealth.

The country has no segregation, no pass books, no native reserves, no riots. Races mix in public places, hotels, bars, private homes. Economy and education and taste form social groups more than color.

It is a cosmopolitan country with 20,000 whites and 100,000 Asians, mostly Indians. The British run the country under a United Nations mandate; the Greeks own the sisal plantations, the Indians own the shops and much of the real estate, and the Africans work for everyone else.

Hot, humid Dar es Salaam (Arabic for "Haven of Peace") is the capital and chief city, on the Indian Ocean. It looks like a mixture of New Delhi, Cairo and Negro shantytowns in the American South.

You see barefooted Africans carrying huge bundles of palm roofing on their heads; a tall Masai warrior, with hair hardened into ringlets with red clay; black Moslems in skull caps, fezzes and long gowns; Indian in vivid saris veiled up to their nose; the mighty, forbidding Sikh wearing a turban and imposing beard and carrying a briefcase; and, inevitably, the British civil servant, in white shirt and white shorts and mustache, manfully smoking his pipe on the receding fringe of empire.

Against a backdrop of palms mango and huge bao bab trees, whose thick veined trunks reach 15 feet across, you see native shacks roofed with flattened-out gallon tins; and modern buildings of glass on stilts; and graceful old buildings with latticed balconies and arched, shuttered windows; the huge white British Government House with its scalloped turrets and sweeping, dignified lawn; and the Legislative Council building, where the gold mace of British royal authority is carried in every day. The session begins with the wigged Indian speaker bowing to both benches and then black, white and brown members start strafing each other with quiet but devastating tact.

In the harbor, against a backdrop of modern freighters and docks, you see native fishermen in dug-out canoes with outriggers hauling their catch and ancient sailing ships sliding in with dates and rugs from the Persian Gulf and India, sliding out with ivory, coconuts and timber.

Precisely how soon that will come remains a question. In the last two years, the Africans have won an increasing voice in the council as the British have thrown more and more seats open to popular election.

Next fall, there will be the biggest election yet and Nyerere's party, the Tanganyika African National Union, is expected to sweep a huge majority of the council ministries.

At that point, Nyerere says, he will "begin negotiating with the British for complete independence." The British will try to talk him into waiting.

"We are trying to train Africans for administrative positions as rapidly as possibly," a high-ranking British administrator told me. "But it takes time, much time, considering the few educated men among them.

"We think we need another five years to prepare enough Africans for administration and independence. But, realistically, they'll probably get it in two years."

According to Boyce, the new corporation, formed by Boyce's addition, will remain the same—under the same name.

Monroe was made headquarters for north Louisiana in 1947, serving 29 parishes.

Boyce said that Walton will remain in his present position. C. R. Tidwell Jr. will be sales manager and Herman G. Reece is general service manager. E. P. Machnik is office and credit manager.

M. J. (Monty) Carbone, a 40-year construction veteran, will retire from the firm.

Celebrations

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP)—South Africa has accepted an invitation to the emerging Congo Republic's independence celebrations June 30. Foreign Secretary Eric Louw announced this country would send Economic Minister N. Diederichs, accompanied by Foreign Undersecretary Robert Jones, to the Leopoldville festivities.

French Opposing Death Penalty

PARIS (AP)—The execution of Caryl Chessman has prompted a new effort to abolish the death penalty in France. Rene Lecocq, a Gaullist deputy, said he had introduced his bill to end capital punishment because of Chessman's execution. Many attempts have been made to retire the guillotine to French museums, but all have failed. This one is not given much chance either.

Another Royal Tomb Is Found

CAIRO (AP)—Government archeologists report finding a tomb of the fourth Egyptian dynasty with a small wooden sarcophagus probably containing the mummy of a royal child. It lies south of the Second Pyramid of Gize at the edge of Cairo. Carved out of solid rock, it is 35 feet deep and had been blocked by three stones weighing more than two tons each.

POLIO EXPERTS

Group Sees Need For Two Vaccines

WASHINGTON (AP) — A committee of polio experts said Saturday there's a need for both the Salk killed-virus vaccine and the newer live-virus vaccines against polio.

It advocated that the Salk vaccine, which must be injected, be used for primary vaccination in such areas as parts of North America and northern Europe "and where adults often contract the illness."

But it indicated it favors use of the live-virus vaccines, which can be taken orally, in "countries where health services (are) not well developed." It also said the live vaccine might be used as a booster in areas where Salk vaccine is given as the primary immunzation.

"The committee pointed out that the Salk vaccine had achieved over 90 per cent success in conquering paralytic polio when it had been properly used, but that it was expensive and difficult to administer, especially in countries where health services were not well developed," the statement said.

"Especially in these areas the live vaccine given by mouth as a liquid or in candies would be easier and more economical to use."

The committee met to appraise data presented during the recent Second International Conference on Live Polio Virus Vaccines. It also reviewed the experience with Salk vaccine.

The group plans to submit an extensive report to Dr. M. G. Candau, director general of the World Health Organization. It will be circulated to all WHO's 101 member states.

In Saturday's statement, with reference to live vaccines, the group said: "The committee considered that the live vaccine had now been proved safe for the immunization of children in huge trials in America, Africa, and Eastern Europe."

"More than 60 million had been vaccinated in the U.S.S.R. alone without reported ill effects," it added. "Because of the lack of data, the committee reserved judgment about its widespread use in countries where polio affected a higher proportion of adults.

"This was because polio infection is more risky in adults who have never been in contact with the virus, and it was thought that the live vaccine had not yet been adequately tested for safety in this highly susceptible group."

As to effectiveness of the live vaccines, the committee said information on this point, "although hopeful, was not conclusive as to its degree under all circumstances . . . .So far this had certainly not proved to be 100 per cent."

The committee noted that "many problems remained to be solved."

FTC Pushing New Textile Labeling Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) is having a hard time administering the new textile labeling law.

One of the big difficulties is that the American housewife just does not know the difference between azlon, acrylic and modacrylic.

Most consumers have a pretty good idea about the difference between wool, cotton, linen and silk according to the Commission.

But when it comes to the more than 700 trade names for synthetic fibers, they haven't caught up with the "new look" in labeling.

MUST HAVE LABELS

The new Textile Products Identification Act is designed to protect purchasers of clothing and other textile products in the modern era of synthetic textiles.

It went into effect four months ago. All textiles manufactured after March 3, 1960, must carry labels listing the generic names and percentages of their fiber content.

Any manufacturer failing to provide the required information or give wrong and misleading information will be in violation of the law and subject to action by the FTC.

In order to bolster public understanding of the law, the Trade Commission has issued a description of the qualities of each of the 16 basic types of manufactured fibers.

Harvey H. Hannah, chief of the FTC's division of textiles and furs, voiced hope that the list would "make things easier for the consumer" and help bring order out of the recent chaotic system of textile labeling.

Each of the 16 generic names covers a class of fibers which differ more or less widely in chemical composition as well as in certain other properties.

Some of the generic terms are self-explanatory and familiar — such as rubber, glass and metallic. Others, equally familiar, are rayon, acetate and nylon.

Three others are not entirely strange to consumers because they have been used in trademarks. They are acrylic, polyester and saran. But the remaining names—modaerylic, azlon, spandex, olefin, vinal, nytril and vinyon—are almost unknown to the average buyer.

Surveys Staged For Shelter Belts

MOSCOW (AP) — Tass reports forestry specialists are surveying the steppes of western Siberia to plant five tree-shelter belts there. The belts, 200 yards wide and about 300 miles long, will be designed to protect the soil from erosion by central Asian winds. The lands first were put to the plow six years ago, Tass said, and have since doubled the grain crop in the Omsk region.

Mob Lacked Drive To Halt Pact

TOKYO (UPI)—The mob lacked the spark and couldn't do the job.

A throng so great and seemingly menacing that it dictated its own movement converged on the national parliament throughout the day, but at midnight Sunday the day, but failed to prevent the routine passage by U.S.-Japan security pact.

The frustrated mob is now concentrating its wrath against Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi. It may well force the resignation of the conservative, and as it previously forced cancelation of President Eisenhower's visit to Japan. But Kishi will at least have the satisfaction of having steered the security pact to ratification.

Communists made a supreme effort to direct and incite the violent demonstrators who effected the action. Activists and probably members of Communist-led unions were among those who battled police.

From Colorado, Kennedy was packing his campaign gear, with the dockers on the 11 votes as yet uncommitted. South Dakota will have at the National Democratic Convention in Los Angeles next month.

To his current political meanderings into Colorado and the Dakotas, Kennedy looks and talks like a man who thinks there isn't much doubt of his capturing the Democratic presidential prize. He and his lieutenants are talking among themselves about a possible "vice-presidential" running mate and setting a brainstrust organized for the postconvention campaign.

Kennedy rolled into Durango, site of the Colorado Democratic Convention in a motorcade from the airport and a "rest stop" where supporters on a street corner.

He told a breakfast gathering of party leaders: "I support the development of the West and I want everybody to know that, I do that whether I am a presidential candidate or a United States senator."

But at a formal session of the Colorado convention he made a pitch for Western support with a promise to "rebuild the resources program" of the nation. These, the senator said, have been stifled, wasted and despoiled in the "eight long, errant years" of the Eisenhower administration.

A pair of other Democratic presidential aspirants, Sens. Stuart Symington of Missouri and Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, had their emissaries working their way around among the delegates to the Colorado convention.

Symington and Adlai E. Stevenson had a smattering of support, but Kennedy clearly was the frontrunner.

LSU Art Group Receives Eight Gift Paintings

BATON ROUGE, June 18 (UPI)—Louisiana Petroleum activities [illegible] May ran substantially higher than in May 1959, the state conservation department reported today.

The department said the increase in May reversed a downward trend seen in April.

Well completions in May totaled 240, compared with 241 a year ago, and included 201 gas wells, 19 oils and 20 new gas wells. The new wells had initial daily production of 16,572 barrels of crude oil and 6,203 barrels of condensate.

Drilling permits last month reached a 1960 high of 406, compared with 410 in May, 1959, and included 34 for exploratory wells and 75 in areas offshore.

At the end of the month, the department reported, there were 294 active drilling rigs, including 20 on wildcat locations.

Last month also saw the apparent discovery of four new fields: Point Chicot in Lafourche parish, Deep Bayou in Cameron parish, Highland Creek in Beauregard parish and West Rosedale in Iberville parish.

There wre also proved extensions of two known fields, Belle Isle in St. Mary parish and Opelousas field in St. Landry parish.

Nixon Calls For Hike In Exchanges

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon Saturday called for an increase in the exchange programs with foreign nations as a result of the diplomatic disaster in Japan.

Nixon told a news conference here that "the greatest lesson can be learned from the incidents which led to withdrawing of the invitation to President Eisenhower. We should step it up rather than to the exchange program and do a more effective job."

At the same time Nixon defended traveling diplomacy and said that in spite of the defeats at the summit in Paris, and in Tokyo, it was one way for the country to get its story across to others.

Nixon is here to address the Texas Press Assn., theoretically a nonpolitical trip, but politics raised its head from the moment Nixon arrived. A large crowd—police estimated at as high as 2,500—was at the airport to meet him. There were signs everywhere pushing Nixon's candidacy for the Republican nomination.

Inside the International Airport lobby, where Nixon said a few words of greeting, the crowd was so dense that police had to help him and Mrs. Nixon to the microphone.

And politics also played a prominent role in his news conference at the airport.

Nixon predicted that he had a good chance to carry Texas and win its 24 electoral votes, although he added a couple of limitations.

First, he said, he had to win the nomination, something which seems almost inevitable at this point, and second, he said that if the Democrats should name Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas its presidential nominee, "our chances of winning, to use British understatement, would be quite remote."

Nixon ran into a readymade campaign here for a vice presidential candidate. Huge signs at the airport backed Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz) as Nixon's running mate. Nixon refused to comment on Goldwater's chances, however, saying he would not make any statement on any man until after he had been nominated.

He said, for example, that any goodwill visit is liable to run into such a situation as the Tokyo uprising because, he said, the "Communists are going to attempt to gain a propaganda advantage."

Meg And Tony Return From Honeymoon

LONDON (AP)—Princess Margaret and Antony Armstrong-Jones returned to Britain from their six-week honeymoon today — just as the news broke that thieves had stolen Tony's effigy from Mme. Tussaud's Waxworks.

The honeymoon couple stepped ashore from the royal yacht Britannia at Portsmouth to the rhythm of calypso music.

Simultaneously, a spokesman at Tussaud's said: "Mr. Armstrong-Jones' effigy was there last night, but it was missing this morning. We are most upset. It's worth about 500 pounds ($1,400), and it's bound to be damaged even if we get it back."

If the effigy of Princess Margaret's husband is not returned or found, it will take six weeks to make another, he said. The effigy, like Tony, is 5 feet-7 and weighs about 165 pounds.

The princess looked very happy when she returned. So did her smiling husband.

Decked out in a flaming pink coat, the princess walked off the royal yacht to a roaring welcome. Huge crowds—cheering and shouting—lined the jetty sides. A Royal Marine band pumped out the calypso music, a topical footnote to the end of a Caribbean cruise.

Scores of small boats in the harbor added to the din with shrieks and screams from their sirens and whistles. Fog and swirling mists — which earlier greeted the returning honeymooners—had been burned away by a hot, bright sun.

Man Charged In Aircraft's Fatal Plunge

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — A Van Nus pilot went to a flaming death as a hero on July 1, 1957, when he apparently stuck with his World War II British Mosquito bomber as it narrowly missed a populated Los Angeles suburban area and crashed in a canyon.

A citizens' campaign to provide for James K. Gibbs' surviving young son, David, attracted widespread support, including a $5,000 contribution from Richard E. Loomis, 45, president of the Trans-World Engineering Corp.

A four-month investigation into the 'accident' was climaxed Friday with the arrest of Loomis on suspicion of engineering the fatal crash in a conspiracy with Gibbs to collect $45,000 insurance.

Loomis was also accused of murder on evidence that Loomis sabotaged the plane without the knowledge of Gibbs, who was to have parachuted to safety.

Loomis, a promoter and former Air Force major, denied the charges when taken into custody.

Investigators said there were indications that Loomis was in monetary difficulties with the engineering company he formed to get government contracts for aerial photography assignments.

Loomis reportedly had approached several pilots offering $10,000 if they would crash his war surplus plane, purchased for $8,000.

Four days before the crash Loomis took out a $50,000, 30-day policy on the plane. A Civil Aeronautics Board investigation failed to determine the cause of the crash and Loomis received a $47,500 settlement.

Area Cotton In Excellent Condition

Area planted cotton is reported to be in excellent condition with replanted cotton averaging from fair to good condition.

Herbicides, along with dry weather, have reduced the demand for seasonal workers in cotton. Considering the increase in the number of flame cultivators in the area, a further decline is expected. Approximately 75 per cent of the first chopping have been completed.

The peach harvest in Ruston is reported commenced. Rain is needed for both peach and cotton crops.

Bastrop states that cotton crops are in good condition and growing well. About 40 per cent of the hoeing is completed.

Missile Army Is Embarrassed On Special Day

BOSTON (UPI) — Bunker Hill Day, a glorious one for the colonial army 185 days ago, was rather embarrassing for the missile age army of 1960.

While Army drivers relaxed following a two-hour parade Friday in 89-degree weather two youths made off with a 33-22 Nike-Ajax air defense missile and its tractor trailer.

After a quarter mile drive, the pair sideswiped three cars, abandoned the missile and fled.

COSTS

Caught in the cost-squeeze?
Think there's no end to the inflationary spiral? Sixty-four top representatives of government, labor, business and education concluded at a recent meeting of the American Assembly that we can look forward to dynamic growth, low unemployment and reasonably stable prices. However, these goals will be reached only if all Americans join together to assure a steady rise in productivity.

Mob Lacked Drive To Halt Pact

TOKYO (UPI)—The mob lacked the spark and couldn't do the job.

A throng so great and seemingly menacing that it blockaded its own movement converged on the national parliament throughout the day, but at midnight Sunday the day, but failed to prevent automatic passage by U.S.-Japan security pact.

The frustrated mob is now concentrating its wrath against Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi. It may well force the resignation of his government, just as it previously forced cancelation of President Eisenhower's visit to Japan. But Kishi will at least have the satisfaction of having steered the security pact to ratification.

Communists made a supreme effort to direct and incite the 200,000 demonstrators into effective action. Agitators and professionals mounted on car-tops with loud-speaking equipment screamed directions. But they, like the reporters who tried to cover the scene, were pinioned into immobility by the great sea of humanity.

Japanese reporters for U.P.I. were at all strategic points, equipped with special communication gear, while a U.P.I. car with American observers edged its way slowly through the giant mob.

Many times we were at a complete halt, with columns marching and counter - marching on both sides of us and peering, with glances less than friendly, at the foreign observers. We were never molested.

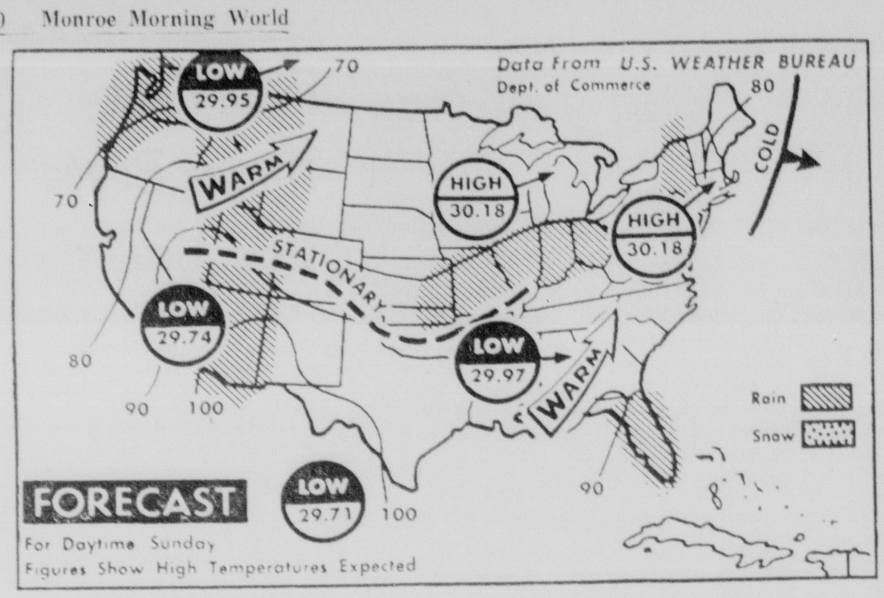
The Parliament grounds were similarly guarded with a force augmented by 10,000 additional police called in from the country. The mob marched and demonstrated in front of the park-like area but did not attempt to force entry despite many and lurid threats.

The residence of Kishi was the center of demonstrations after the security pact became effective at one minute after midnight.



THERE IS A CHANCE for rain today in Rockies. Other rainy areas include central Appalachians, a wide band from Ohio and Tennessee Valleys westward through Mississippi Valley to eastern part of central Plains and over north Pacific states. Warm weather will continue over most of the U. S. except for a turn to cooler in the upper Mississippi Valley. (AP Wirephoto Map)

IN COLORADO

Kennedy Collects More Backing

DURANGO, Colo. (AP)—A presidential hopeful, John F. Kennedy prospected for support Saturday in sagebrush, mountain and farming country. And in Colorado, at least, he made some headway.

The Massachusetts senator showed up at the Colorado State Democratic Convention and got word that he is sure of more of the state's 21 votes for the presidential nomination than anybody else.

From Colorado, Kennedy was backtracking eastward, with the designs on the 11 votes as yet uncommitted South Dakota will have at the National Democratic Convention in Los Angeles next month.

In his current political meandering into Colorado and the Dakotas, Kennedy looks and talks like a man who thinks there isn't much doubt of his capturing the Democratic presidential prize. He and his lieutenants are talking among themselves about a possible vice-presidential running mate and getting a braintrust organized for the post-convention campaign.

Kennedy rolled into Durango, site of the Colorado Democratic Convention in a motorcade from the airport, got a noisy ovation from supporters on a street corner.

He told a breakfast gathering of party leaders: "I support the development of the West and I want everybody to know that. I do that whether I am a presidential candidate or a United States senator."

But for a formal session of the Colorado convention he made a pitch for Western support with a promise to "rebuild the resources program" of the nation. These, the senator said, have been stifled, wasted and despoiled through "eight long, errant years" of the Eisenhower administration.

A pair of other Democratic presidential aspirants, Sens. Stuart Symington of Missouri and Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, had their emissaries working their way around among the delegates to the Colorado convention.

At the moment of his arrival with some delegates to the Democratic National Convention still to be picked, Kennedy was assured a least 8½ of Colorado's votes.

Symington and Adlai E. Stevenson had a smattering of support, but Kennedy clearly was the front-runner.

Nixon Calls For Hike In Exchanges

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon Saturday called for an increase in the exchange programs with foreign nations as a result of the diplomatic disaster in Japan.

Nixon told a news conference here that the greatest lesson can be learned from the incidents which led to withdrawing of the invitation to President Eisenhower: "We should step it up (referring to the exchange program) and do a more effective job."

At the same time Nixon defended traveling diplomacy and said that in spite of the defeats at the summit in Paris, and in Tokyo, it was one way for the country to get its story across to others.

Nixon is here to address the Texas Press Assn., theoretically a nonpolitical trip, but politics raised its head from the moment Nixon arrived. A large crowd—police estimated at as high as 2,500—was at the airport to meet him. There were signs everywhere pushing Nixon's candidacy for the Republican nomination.

Inside the International Airport lobby, where Nixon said a few words of greeting, the crowd was so dense that police had to help him and Mrs. Nixon to the microphone.

And politica also played a prominent role in his news conference at the airport.

Nixon predicted that he had a good chance to carry Texas and win its 24 electoral votes, although he added a couple of limitations.

First, he said, he had to win the nomination, something which seems almost inevitable at this point, and second, he said that if the Democrats should name Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas its presidential nominee, "our chances of winning, to use British understatement, would be quite remote."

Nixon ran into a readymade campaign here for a vice presidential candidate. Huge signs at the airport backed Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz) as Nixon's running mate. Nixon refused to comment on Goldwater's chances, however, saying he would not make any statement on any man until after he had been nominated.

He said, for example, that any goodwill visit is liable to run into such a situation as the Tokyo uprising because, he said, the "Communists are going to attempt to gain a propaganda advantage."

J. McCormick Seeks Election As City Judge

John F. McCormick yesterday formally announced his candidacy for judge of the West Monroe (Ward Five) city court in the Democratic primary election on July 23.

His statement follows:

"I earnestly solicit the vote and support of everyone in West Monroe and Ward Five for the office of City Judge.

"Raised on a farm in the Cheniere Community in Ward Five, I graduated from the Ouachita Parish High School 1928 and received my Law Degree from Tulane University in 1933.

"I have actively engaged in the practice of law since 1933. I am married and have three children namely: John Jr., Mrs. Linda Lewis, both graduates of the West Monroe High; and Joe, a graduate of the West Monroe Junior High; and one granddaughter, Cherri Lynn.

"A member of the First Methodist Church of West Monroe and the West Monroe Kiwanis Club, I have always been keenly interested in the progress and growth of our community and have always supported all movements calculated to promote our community's welfare.

"I am vitally interested in our youth and have worked with other interested citizens to promote a better recreational program for our children.

"I have been city attorney for West Monroe for twenty years and am now seeking a promotion to the office of city judge.

"Our city court has jurisdiction in civil matters up to $1,000 and has concurrent jurisdiction with our district court in misdemeanor and in juvenile cases.

"I believe that I am qualified by the necessary education and experience to make you a good judge. I know that I have the heart, sympathetic attitude and a sincere desire to work with our delinquent youth, their parents and our juvenile officers to the end that as many as possible of our delinquent youths be rehabilitated.

"If you will elect me as your judge I pledge to you that I will discharge the duties of my office fairly and impartially and that my office will always be open to everyone and I will welcome the opportunity of discussing your problems with you."

Meg And Tony Return From Honeymoon

LONDON (AP)—Princess Margaret and Antony Armstrong-Jones returned to Britain from their six-week honeymoon today — just as the news broke that thieves had stolen Tony's effigy from Mme. Tussaud's Waxworks.

The honeymoon couple stepped ashore from the royal yacht Britannia at Portsmouth to the rhythm of calypso music.

Simultaneously, a spokesman at Tussaud's said: "Mr. Armstrong-Jones' effigy was there last night, but it was missing this morning. We are most upset. It's worth about 500 pounds ($1,400), and it's bound to be damaged even if we get it back."

If the effigy of Princess Margaret's husband is not returned or found, it will take six weeks to make another, he said. The effigy, like Tony, is 5 feet-7 and weighs about 165 pounds.

The princess looked very happy when she returned. So did her smiling husband.

Decked out in a flaming pink coat, the princess walked off the royal yacht to a roaring welcome. Huge crowds—cheering and shouting—lined the jetty sides. A Royal Marine band pumped out the calypso music, a topical footnote to the end of a Caribbean cruise.

Scores of small boats in the harbor added to the din with shrieks and screams from their sirens and whistles. Fog and swirling mists — which earlier greeted the returning honeymooners—had been burned away by a hot, bright sun.

Man Charged In Aircraft's Fatal Plunge

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — A Van Nus pilot went to a flaming death as a hero on July 1, 1957, when he apparently stuck with his World War II British Mosquito bomber as it narrowly missed a populated Los Angeles suburban area and crashed in a canyon.

A citizens' campaign to provide for James K. Gibbs' surviving young son, David, attracted widespread support, including a $5,000 contribution from Richard E. Loomis, 45, president of the Trans-World Engineering Corp.

A four-month investigation into the "accident" was climaxed Friday with the arrest of Loomis on suspicion of engineering the fatal crash in a conspiracy with Gibbs to collect $45,000 insurance.

Loomis was also accused of murder on evidence that Loomis sabotaged the plane without the knowledge of Gibbs, who was to have parachuted to safety.

Loomis, a promoter and former Air Force major, denied the charges when taken into custody.

Investigators said there were indications that Loomis was in monetary difficulties with the engineering company he formed to get government contracts for aerial photography assignments.

Loomis reportedly had approached several pilots offering $10,000 if they would crash his war surplus plane, purchased for $8,000.

Four days before the crash Loomis took out a $50,000, 30-day policy on the plane. A Civil Aeronautics Board investigation failed to determine the cause of the crash and Loomis received a $47,500 settlement.

Area Cotton In Excellent Condition

Herbicides, along with dry weather, have reduced the demand for seasonal workers in cotton. Considering the increase in the number of flame cultivators in the area, a further decline is expected. Approximately 75 per cent of the first chopping have been completed.

The peach harvest in Ruston is reported commenced. Rain is needed for both peach and cotton crops.

Bastrop states that cotton crops are in good condition and growing well. About 40 per cent of the hoeing is completed.

Missile Army Is Embarrassed On Special Day

BOSTON (UPI) — Bunker Hill Day, a glorious one for the colonial army 185 days ago, was rather embarrassing for the missile age army of 1960.

While Army drivers relaxed following a two-hour parade Friday in 88-degree weather two youths made off with a 33-22 Nike; Ajax air defense missile and its tractor trailer.

After a quarter mile drive, the pair sideswiped three cars, abandoned the missile and fled.

LSU Art Group Receives Eight Gift Paintings

BATON ROUGE, June 18 (UPI) — Louisiana Petroleum activities last May ran substantially higher than in May 1959, the state conservation department reported today.

The department said the increase in May reversed a downward trend seen in April.

Well completions in May reached 370, compared with 341 a year ago, and included 201 new oil wells and 66 new gas wells. The new wells had initial daily production of 16,272 barrels of crude oil and 6,293 barrels of condensate.

Drilling permits last month reached a 1960 high of 436, compared with 410 in May, 1959, and included 59 for exploratory wells and 75 in areas offshore.

At the end of the month, the department reported, there were 394 active drilling rigs, including 52 on wildcat locations.

Last month also saw the apparent discovery of four new fields: Point Chicot in Lafourche parish, Deep Bayou in Cameron parish, Righthand Creek in Beauregard parish and West Rosedale in Iberville parish.

There wre also proved extensions of two known fields, Belle Isle in St. Mary parish and Opelousas field in St. Landry parish.

COSTS

Caught in the cost-squeeze? Think there's no end to the inflationary spiral? Sixty-four top representatives of government, labor, business and education concluded at a recent meeting of the American Assembly that we can look forward to dynamic growth, low unemployment and reasonably stable prices. However, these goals will be reached only if all Americans join together to assure a steady rise in productivity.

Negro Says 'Yelling' Not The Answer

GRAMBLING (Special) — A Washington physicist told a Grambling college group Friday that "yelling about one's rights is not the answer to progress for an individual or a group."

Dr. Herman Branson, head of the physics department at Howard University, the only Negro institution in America offering the PhD degree in this field, said that the "ability to do a job well and to make a significant contribution to one's society" is the answer to progress.

His remarks were addressed to a special summer convocation of 2,000 persons enrolled at Grambling, including those persons enrolled in the special summer institute for secondary school science teachers being held at Grambling. It is being sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

Thirty-eight special enrollees from 14 states are participating in the institute which is designed to improve teachers background and competency in science teaching. Dr. A. L. Lacey, professor of physical science at Grambling and director of the institute, said.

Lacey said that approximately 1,500 students are enrolled in the six special workshops and regular college summer session.

The other special workshops being held are citizenship education: farm machinery clinics: elementary education workshop; and special education workshops.

Growers Plan To Choke Mart On Artichokes

PARIS (AP) — Irate Brittany growers plan to choke the Paris market with artichokes—about 50 million of them.

The farmers of Brittany, where 80 per cent of France's artichokes are grown, were set to bring 30 tons of the vegetable into Paris, using a police-escorted convoy of 12 trucks.

The supply will be sold directly to consumers at local markets as a protest against the drop in the market price in Brittany, where shippers refuse to meet the farmers' minimum price of 20 francs a kilogram—four cents for about two pounds. The artichokes retail for about 80 francs in Paris.

For the last few weeks growers have been dumping any artichokes that did not get the minimum price and pouring fuel oil over them.

This Is A Little Iron Kettle In Which Real Gold Was Dug Up Near The Louisiana-Arkansas Line In Louisiana. In This Picture, However, It Is Filled With Modern Nickels, Which Are The Same Size As The Counterfeit Gold Piece Of John Murrell's. (Photos By Neil Rhodes)

One Of The Counterfeit $10 Gold Coins Dug Up In A "Covered Iron Kettle" By The Late George White, Father Of Carrol White, Who Still Lives Near Mineral Springs. This Coin Belongs To Phillips Gates Sr., Of Crossett.

In Cypress Shadows

The Bearded Brigand

By JANICE CLARK
Crossett Correspondent

When the mists roil out of the cypress swamps in southern Arkansas, there are those who think they see the shifting form of a bearded brigand in their gauzy undulations.

Anyone who has heard the tales of John Murrell and his outlaw band, who made their headquarters near Mineral Springs a century ago, enters the sulphur - scented depths of the wilderness with the feeling that Murrell's brooding spirit lingers in the deep cypress shadows.

John Murrell was the last of the highwaymen and river pirates who preyed on stage coaches, wagon trains, and river boats along the Natchez Trace and the Mississippi River before the middle of the nineteenth century. He was born in 1804 in his father's inn just off the Trace in Tennessee.

With his prostitute mother's guidance to a precocious affinity for crime he picked up tricks from every river gambler and outlaw who stopped overnight at the inn. In his early teens he learned from experts how to smuggle stolen goods, how to transport stolen horses, and how to kill.

DECEIT

In a Natchez bawdy - house he met a man dressed as a minister, who taught him Biblical quotations and the art of delivering convincing sermons to set an audience on fire. This act was invaluable later when he would play the holy man for several days to allay suspicion until he had a man on a horse ahead of him, when Murrell would press the trigger of his gun and make off with the horse and possessions. In addition, he preached sermons while helpers robbed purses and pockets in the crowd, and passed counterfiet money for change from his trusting acquaintances.

The records show that the law finally caught up with the elusive Murrell, and he was jailed for horse stealing. He came out after serving a short term, having spent the time formulating grandiose plans for a vast slave rebellion. His plot, in those times of easily inflamed passions, was to arm the slaves of the South and organize a vast slave rebellion, with the ultimate goal of creating an atmosphere ripe for pillering and massive stealing during the confusion.

BETRAYED

He was betrayed by one of his own men, and jailed for a 10 - year term, most of which he served. When he was released in 1844, his health was broken, and he displayed little of the old swaggering bravado which had marked his personality before his long imprisonment.

It is here that histories of the times write off John Murrell as "disappearing into a mist of contradictory legends," and the official accounts of his life report that he died in that year of 1844. A recent television show, "The Devil and Daniel Webster," depicted John Murrell as returning from the dead to act as a supernatural juror in the trial of Jabez Stone in 1848; and in the TV "Riverboat" series, Daren McGavin killed him in an episode appearing this spring.

But John Murrell was not dead in 1848, nor did he die at the hands of the invincible Riverboat Captain! The 40 year old bandit simply crossed the Mississippi, where his name was not so well known, and the decade of imprisonment had left him unrecognizable even to any who had seen him or heard of his dapper figure and handsome face.

According to stories told today, Murrell gathered around him some remnants of his old gang, along with new recruits, and began operations from Montgomery Point, a densely forested region in the confluence of the White and Mississippi Rivers over 100 miles south of Memphis. As he became known there, he moved on down river, and finally set up headquarters on Stuart Island, which at that time stretched through the northern end of the ox - bow lake Chicot in its old channel to the Mississippi.

FORAYS

It was probably from Stuart Island that Murrell made his early forays on the area around Mineral Springs (then known as Sulphur Springs), southwest of what was later to become Crossett. His first visits to the the springs were to work up a series of church meetings in which he planned to use his eloquence to cover his horse stealing.

The old men of Ashley County tell of a handsome man riding A "good horse" (which in those days carried the same prestige as a good car does today), who came into the community of their grandfathers and asked for lodging in the home of a farmer who lived on the Marias Saline Road between Hamburg and the busy Marias Saline landing on the Ouachita River.

The farmer charged the stranger 50 cents a night, which was the going rate for travelers asking for lodging as they passed through the country at that time. The man paid three times the asking price, and created a very good impression with his host and others in the area. He then announced that he was a preacher, and rounded up people for a hang up church meeting in the little log church. The lonely farmers and trappers from miles around came to the meeting in wagons, buggies, and on horseback.

While the dynamic stranger, his deep eyes blazing, fired the frontier audience to jumping and shouting with religious fervor, his men slipped from the surrounding forest, untied the horses and mules, and vanished into the night.

CROSSING

Following each robbery Murrell rendezvoused with his men and helped herd the valuable animals across the river near Ouachita City Steamboat Landing, not far from Monroe, Louisiana, and drove them on to an eager market in Texas.

A horse or mule in those days was the difference between a crop or no crop, was the sole means of transportation between neighbors on the lonely farms, and the landings where supplies were brought upriver from Monroe and New Orleans. John Murrell's name became a bitter pill on the tongues of those he duped. Now, a hundred years after his death, the grandsons of those victims tell the stories handed down, and point to Murrell's Trail, where he and his men drifted like shadows to rob — and then disappear in the great wilderness of southern Arkansas.

While doing his "research" in the Mineral Springs area as he set up his horse - stealing plan, Murrell became interested in the Springs, which for centuries had attracted Indians in the Great Wilderness area, who had come during the low - water months in the summer seeking what they felt were the health - giving properties of the sulphur - scented water. They had drunk the clear water which gushed from the foot of a giant cypress, and hollowed out a pool where it flowed over their naked bodies, easing aching joints and curing skin eruptions.

MOUNDS

Not far from the Spring are several great mounds of the rotting bones of those Indians whom the waters failed to give eternal life. Murrell and his boys hoped, too, that the Spring's water would help repair the ravages of imprisonment in Murrell's body, and keep them all forever young and strong. However, the waters of the Spring were not powerful enough to save John Murrell from the fate that awaited him deep in the brooding cypress forests one early autumn night. Neither the magic waters nor Murrell's own swaggering dominance over his men.

The gang settled down near the springs, about 10 miles through almost impenetrable forest near the second landing, known as "Extra." Here flat boats took goods from the river steamboat up a channel into Mossy Lake, and then on up Coffee Creek, which wound its tortuous way through the forest to unload at the Springs. Here they sat like lurking hawks to swoop down with lethal talons on the little boats with their precious cargo.

Following each strike, Murrell would retire to the shrouded forest nearby. He would go alone into the woods and, marking the place in his own mind, he buried the treasure where it would be safe until the end-of-season payoff time. This kept Murrell firmly in his position of leadership over the men; and by waiting until the end of the season to divide the stolen goods, he avoided the possibility of one man's slipping a knife into the back of a sleeping comrade to snatch his hoarded money.

STAGE STOPPED

One autumn day the group of outlaws had stopped a stage coach headed from Louisiana to Pine Bluff on the old Arkansas Trace. Murrell and his gang relieved the travelers of handsome watches with heavy gold chains, and the money which was to cover their needs on the long journey.

Back at the swamp the men were impatient to divide the summer's take and be on their separate ways. Their leader brought a blackened iron kettle to the table, and lifted the lid to let the candlelight flicker over its gleaming pile of golden coins. He passed to each man a bit of personal loot picked up during the summer -- a watch, a gold chain, an enameled snuff box, a miniature of a young lady done in delicate tones on ivory in a gold case. But the avid eyes of the men pushed aside those objects which would be hard to convert to cash, and they gathered around the old iron kettle with dreams of how far those golden coins would go when they got to New Orleans, Natchez or Memphis! It has been a good summer, Murrell had his old touch back, and the men remembered the great days before the old gang had been broken up by the long term in jail.

DIVIDED

Carefully Murrell divided the coins into six parts. One part went to each man, with two parts for himself, their leader. And a jug of whisky passed from man to man as they talked of where they would go and what those golden coins would buy. One had a woman in New Orleans, and he was going to buy a carriage and a house and be as "good as anybody in that bloody town!" Another was going to Memphis and have "a helluva time till it runs out." As they dreamed they drank — all but one, called Rudd.

Rudd kept running the coins through his fingers — and something didn't seem quite right to him. Did they press into the palm just as they should — or weren't they just a little bit heavier than seemed quite right? Rudd didn't know — but there was something about the feel of those coins that just wasn't right.

The suspicious bandit stepped just out of the circle of candlelight, away from the fire on the hearth — with the thick form of one of the men between him and John Murrell. He took out his knife and cut into the serrated edge of one of the coins. Then he held it in the glow from the candle — and found the heart a dull grey. The golden coin was lead! He nicked another, and then another. All were ugly lead beneath the film of gold which had sent them all dreaming!

And it is there that the story of John Murrell ends — a full 14 or 15 years after he "disappeared in the mist of legend" following his release from jail on the east side of the river. His men buried his bullet - shattered body under the mud of the swamp — at the end of what three generations of men have pointed out as "Murrell's trail" — the trail the brilliant, ruthless, god-less Murrell traveled as he duped and stole and killed in the deep forests of southern Arkansas.

TOO LATE

The hot tempered men realized too late that with their leader they had buried the key to the summer's treasure. The wiley Murrell had confided in no one as he buried the gold during the summer. The men dug frantically through the forest and on the prairies. And for many years local people went "money-digging," and always hoped to find a pot of Murrell's treasure. There is the story of one farmer who became suddenly and inexplicably rich, sold out his holdings, and left. But no one was ever sure whether or not he had found a pot of Murrell's gold.

Another farmer, George C. White, who would be 95 years old if he were alive today, did plow up a pot of money in his field not far from the Springs. But he, like the men of John Murrell, was cheated from his golden treasure. It was $500 in counterfeit gold pieces — like those Murrell had used to pay his men, and had been using at church meetings to change for good money. White's son, Carrol White, who lives near the Springs, tells how as a boy he looked with wide eyes into the trunk where a handful of the coins remained. One $10 coin was among the effects of B. W. Gates, of Crossett, when he died, with a note telling that it had been dug up with others in an "iron kettle with a lid" near the Springs, and was believed to have been a part of John Murrell's scattered possessions.

SPY

Only one man came out of that year with Murrell in possession of gold, and that was the community spy, David Agee, who acted as informer to the men on boat and land traffic. He apparently collected after each job before returning to his home. One day a teen-aged step-daughter came into the bedroom of their home on the old Marais Saline Trail and found him sorting golden coins on the window ledge and along the side of the bed. He couldn't resist a bit of showing off before he ran her roughly from the room. He said, "Have you ever seen a $20 gold piece?" and dangled the coin before her eyes. However, the money was never seen again. Shortly before his death Agee suffered a stroke which crippled him and robbed him of his powers of speech. The old man kept pointing with his twisted, crippled arm and rolling his bulging eyes toward the fields and woods outside his window. His family was convinced that he was trying to tell them where he had buried his share of Murrell's gold, and several generations of boys and men have dug all through the area hoping to feel their spade strike a pot of Murrell's treasure.

The old man lies buried near the Marais Saline Trail, and surely not far from the gold for which he betrayed his neighbors. His tombstone reads:

David G. Agee
Died 1-5-1867
Aged About 62 Years
Gone but not Forgotten

There is no mound left where John Murrell was buried, and no marble stone over his head. But his epitaph might well be that of his henchman's, "Gone but not forgotten!"

To Good Use

The other day while shooting a scene for "GI Blues," Elvis solved a production impasse. Director Norman Taurog wanted a turret on an M48 tank turned around in a scene.

Crewmen couldn't figure out how it could be done, but Elvis came up with a simple answer—he'd turn it himself while the scene was being shot.

"Hell," said Mr. Swivel-hips, "I used to swivel one of these things every day in Germany."

'Experts' Paint Miserable Picture Of American Fathers

By JOY MILLER

Sunday dad gets a breather.

But Monday the social scientists will be back on the firing range, busily melting down fresh surveys and scraps of leftover symbolism for blasting away at beleagured American fatherhood.

WRINGING HANDS

For several years now anthropologists and sociologists, psychiatrists and psychologists, family counselors and marriage advisers have been wringing their hands over the decline of dad.

Dr. Janet Rioch of the William A. White Institute of Psychiatry, Psychoanalysis and Psychology, says: "The long-established pattern of family life in which father was boss has largely disappeared."

Dr. Doris Milman of the New York State College of Medicine: "Some fathers have abdicated almost completely."

Geoffrey Gorer, English anthropologist: "In few societies is the role of father more vestigial than in the United States."

Russell Lynes, social critic, defined fathers: "The new servant class."

NO REPLY

Throughout the barrage nary a peep has come from pop. Can it be true, as some critics contend, that housework is keeping him too busy to read reports of his decline?

Or is it that he can't figure out which expert to apologize to? For the theories all but outnumber the theorists. Pop would have to lead four lives, to make such a multiple mess of fatherhood.

There is some excuse for the old man's confusion when this sort of thing is conceivable:

Dad reads about an eminent anthropologist, Dr. Otto von Mering of the University of Pittsburgh, who is bewailing the changing role of father from Victorian lord and master to that of an "onlooker at a mother-child coalition."

Panic-striken at the thought of being an outsider in his own home father seizes a diaper and advances upon the coalition's smaller half.

Then he hears that another eminent anthropologist, Margaret Mead, is distressed because American men are so busy tending babies they have no time for world problems.

DUTIFULLY

Dutifully pop takes the safety pins out of his mouth and retires to think long thoughts and influence world affairs.

But as he sits in lonely meditation, his eyes fall on a newspaper account of a speech by Dr. Gunnar Dybwad of the Child Study Assn. of America. That authority is eloquent about the beneficial effects of father's giving the baby his bottle, rocking him, changing his diapers. "From these small external things develops a warm community of interests," he says.

SPECTORS

From one side loom the wistful specters of children neglected by a father too busy making a living to spend time with his family. "Psychological orphans," Dr. John Cavanagh of Washington calls these moping youngsters.

And wheeling in from an opposite viewpoint is durable Dr. Mead, who insists that American fathers have become too family conscious for their own good. "The idea seems to be to have four to eight children, preferably as close together as possible, and then to spend considerable time wiping their noses."

As father flounders, the experts close in with devastating crossfire.

1. Because he is away from home so much and exercises no supervision, dad is creating juvenile delinquents full of violence and hostility.

2. Because he is too much of a homebody, he is creating weak, dependent, passive males. It destroys junior's view of his own sex role to see daddy doing dishes.

CONCURRENCE

The social thinkers may disagree about many aspects of family living, but on the dominance of mom there is general concurrence. Long ago they settled the question of whether pop is man or mouse. Now the only argument is whether there really is any need for cheese to bait the trap.

Don't worry too much about old dad, though. Maybe he is the walking stockpile of inadequacy feelings, disorientation and ego dissatisfactions the experts claim, but there are more dads around today than ever before.

However, the waters of the Spring were not powerful enough to save John Murrell from the fate that awaited him deep in the brooding cypress forests one early autumn night. Neither the magic waters nor Murrell's own swaggering dominance over his men.

The gang settled down near the springs, about 10 miles through almost impenetrable forest near the second landing, known as "Extra." Here flat boats took goods from the river steamboat up a channel into Mossy Lake, and then on up Coffee Creek, which wound its tortuous way through the forest to unload at the Springs. Here they sat like lurking hawks to swoop down with lethal talons on the little boats with their precious cargo.

Following each strike, Murrell would retire to the shrouded forest nearby. He would go alone into the woods and, marking the place in his own mind, he buried the treasure where it would be safe until the end-of-season payoff time. This kept Murrell firmly in his position of leadership over the men; and by waiting until the end of the season to divide the stolen goods, he avoided the possibility of one man's slipping a knife into the back of a sleeping comrade to snatch his hoarded money.

STAGE STOPPED

One autumn day the group of outlaws had stopped a stage coach headed from Louisiana to Pine Bluff on the old Arkansas Trace. Murrell and his gang relieved the travelers of handsome watches with heavy gold chains, and the money which was to cover their needs on the long journey.

Back at the swamp the men were impatient to divide the summer's take and be on their separate ways. Their leader brought a blackened iron kettle to the table, and lifted the lid to let the candlelight flicker over its gleaming pile of golden coins. He passed to each man a bit of personal loot picked up during the summer -- a watch, a gold chain, an enameled snuff box, a miniature of a young lady done in delicate tones on ivory in a gold case. But the avid eyes of the men pushed aside those objects which would be hard to convert to cash, and they gathered around the old iron kettle with dreams of how far those golden coins would go when they got to New Orleans, Natchez or Memphis! It had been a good summer. Murrell had his old touch back, and the men remembered the great days before the old gang had been broken up by the long term in jail.

DIVIDED

Carefully Murrell divided the coins into six parts. One part went to each man, with two parts for himself, their leader. And a jug of whisky passed from man to man as they talked of where they would go and what those golden coins would buy. One had a woman in New Orleans, and he was going to buy a carriage and a house and be as "good as anybody in that bloody town!" Another was going to Memphis and have "a helluva time till it runs out." As they dreamed they drank — all but one, called Rudd.

Rudd kept running the coins through his fingers — and something didn't seem quite right to him. Did they press into the palm just as they should — or weren't they just a little bit heavier than seemed quite right? Rudd didn't know — but there was something about the feel of those coins that just wasn't right.

The suspicious bandit stepped just out of the circle of candlelight, away from the fire on the hearth — with the thick form of one of the men between him and John Murrell. He took out his knife and cut into the serrated edge of one of the coins. Then he held it in the glow from the candle — and found the heart a dull grey. The golden coin was lead! He nicked another, and then another. All were ugly lead beneath the film of gold which had sent them all dreaming!

And it is there that the story of John Murrell ends — a full 14 or 15 years after he "disappeared in the mist of legend" following his release from jail on the east side of the river. His men buried his bullet - shattered body under the mud of the swamp — at the end of what three generations of men have pointed out as "Murrell's trail" — the trail the brilliant, ruthless, god-less Murrell traveled as he duped and stole and killed in the deep forests of southern Arkansas.

TOO LATE

The hot-tempered men realized too late that with their leader they had buried the key to the summer's treasure. The wiley Murrell had confided in no one as he buried the gold during the summer. The men dug frantically through the forest and on the prairies. And for many years local people went "money-digging," and always hoped to find a pot of Murrell's treasure. There is the story of one farmer who became suddenly and inexplicably rich, sold out his holdings, and left. But no one was ever sure whether or not he had found a pot of Murrell's gold.

Another farmer, George C. White, who would be 95 years old if he were alive today, did plow up a pot of money in his field not far from the Springs. But he, like the men of John Murrell, was cheated from his golden treasure. It was $500 in counterfeit gold pieces — like those Murrell had used to pay his men, and had been using at church meetings to change for good money. White's son, Carrol White, who lives near the Springs, tells how as a boy he looked with wide eyes into the trunk where a handful of the coins remained. One $10 coin was among the effects of B. W. Gates, of Crossett, when he died, with a note telling that it had been dug up with others in an "iron kettle with a lid" near the Springs, and was believed to have been a part of John Murrell's scattered possessions.

SPY

Only one man came out of that year with Murrell in possession of gold, and that was the community spy, David Agee, who acted as informer to the men on boat and land traffic. He apparently collected after each job before returning to his home. One day a teen-aged step-daughter came into the bedroom of their home on the old Marais Saline Trail and found him sorting golden coins on the window ledge and along the side of the bed. He couldn't resist a bit of showing off before he ran her roughly from the room. He said, "Have you ever seen a $20 gold piece?" and dangled the coin before her eyes. However, the money was never seen again. Shortly before his death Agee suffered a stroke which crippled him and robbed him of his powers of speech. The old man kept pointing with his twisted, crippled arm and rolling his bulging eyes toward the fields and woods outside his window. His family was convinced that he was trying to tell them where he had buried his share of Murrell's gold, and several generations of boys and men have dug all through the area hoping to feel their spade strike a pot of Murrell's treasure.

The old man lies buried near the Marais Saline Trail, and surely not far from the gold for which he betrayed his neighbors. His tombstone reads:

David G. Agee
Died 1-5-1867
Aged About 62 Years
Gone but not Forgotten

There is no mound left where John Murrell was buried, and no marble stone over his head. But his epitaph might well be that of his henchman's, "Gone but not forgotten!"

To Good Use

The other day while shooting a scene for "GI Blues," Elvis solved a production impasse. Director Norman Taurog wanted a turret on an M48 tank turned around in a scene.

Crewmen couldn't figure out how it could be done, but Elvis came up with a simple answer—he'd turn it himself while the scene was being shot.

"Hell," said Mr. Swivel-hips, "I used to swivel one of these things every day in Germany."

'Experts' Paint Miserable Picture Of American Fathers

By JOY MILLER

Sunday dad gets a breather.

But Monday the social scientists will be back on the firing range, busily melting down fresh surveys and scraps of leftover symbolism for blasting away at beleagured American fatherhood.

Figurehead. Blurred masculine image. Henpecked onlooker. Animated meal ticket.

WRINGING HANDS

For several years now anthropologists and sociologists, psychiatrists and psychologists, family counselors and marriage advisers have been wringing their hands over the decline of dad.

Dr. Janet Rioch of the William A. White Institute of Psychiatry, Psychoanalysis and Psychology, says: "The long-established pattern of family life in which father was boss has largely disappeared."

Dr. Doris Milman of the New York State College of Medicine: "Some fathers have abdicated almost completely."

Geoffrey Gorer, English anthropologist: "In few societies is the role of father more vestigial than in the United States."

Russell Lynes, social critic, defined fathers: "The new servant class."

NO REPLY

Throughout the barrage nary a peep has come from pop. Can it be true, as some critics contend, that housework is keeping him too busy to read reports of his decline?

Or is it that he can't figure out which expert to apologize to? For the theories all but outnumber the theorists. Pop would have to lead four lives, to make such a multiple mess of fatherhood.

There is some excuse for the old man's confusion when this sort of thing is conceivable:

Dad reads about an eminent anthropologist, Dr. Otto von Mering of the University of Pittsburgh, who is bewailing the changing role of father from Victorian lord and master to that of an "onlooker at a mother-child coalition."

Panic-striken at the thought of being an outsider in his own home father seizes a diaper and advances upon the coalition's smaller half.

Then he hears that another eminent anthropologist, Margaret Mead, is distressed because American men are so busy tending babies they have no time for world problems.

DUTIFULLY

Dutifully pop takes the safety pins out of his mouth and retires to think long thoughts and influence world affairs.

But as he sits in lonely meditation, his eyes fall on a newspaper account of a speech by Dr. Gunnar Dybwad of the Child Study Assn. of America. That authority is eloquent about the beneficial effects of father's giving the baby his bottle, rocking him, changing his diapers. "From these small external things develops a warm community of interests," he says.

SPECTORS

From one side loom the wistful specters of children neglected by a father too busy making a living to spend time with his family. "Psychological orphans," Dr. John Cavanagh of Washington calls these moping youngsters.

And wheeling in from an opposite viewpoint is durable Dr. Mead, who insists that American fathers have become too family conscious for their own good. "The idea seems to be to have four to eight children, preferably as close together as possible, and then to spend considerable time wiping their noses."

1. Because he is away from home so much and exercises no supervision, dad is creating juvenile delinquents full of violence and hostility.

2. Because he is too much of a homebody, he is creating weak, dependent, passive males. It destroys junior's view of his own sex role to see daddy doing dishes.

CONCURRENCE

The social thinkers may disagree about many aspects of family living, but on the dominance of mom there is general concurrence. Long ago they settled the question of whether pop is man or mouse. Now the only argument is whether there really is any need for cheese to bait the trap.

Don't worry too much about old dad, though. Maybe he is the walking stockpile of inadequacy feelings, disorientation and ego dissatisfactions the experts claim, but there are more dads around today than ever before.

Why Not Obey The Constitution?

CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF LOUISIANA

Article III

Section 2. Representation in the House of Representatives shall be equal and uniform and shall be based upon population. Each Parish and each Ward of the City of New Orleans shall have at least one Representative. At its first regular session after the United States census of 1920, and after each census thereafter, the Legislaure shall, and is hereby directed to, apportion the representation among the several Parishes and representative districts on the basis of total population shown by such census . . .

Section 3. The Legislature, in every year in which it shall apportion representation in the House of Representatives, shall divide the Senate into Senatorial Districts . . .

The Constitution of Louisiana —as quoted above— is as clear as crystal in stating that the Legislature "shall, and is hereby directed to," reapportion representation in the Legislature after each federal census—every 10 years.

Yet, in the 30 years the above provisions have been effective, Legislature after Legislature has met without taking any steps to fulfill this clear mandate of the Constitution.

At the gubernatorial level, no state administration has sought actively to bring about reapportionment in that period.

There has been no statewide reapportionment of the Legislature in 48 years—since the present Constitution, written in 1921, was adopted in 1922.

Parishes of small population have a legislative voice in some instances as much as 10 times as great as more heavily populated parishes. Ten parishes with more than the state's population have only 20 Representatives, while 54 parishes with less than half the population have 62 spokesmen — and votes — in the House.

Reapportionment based on the 1960 federal census would reduce the number of legislators required for small parishes from 55-46 in favor of the more heavily populated areas.

There is no valid reason for failure of the various Legislatures to obey the Constitution. There are only so-called political reasons. One is log-rolling. A Parish having no particular interest in reapportionment—one which would neither lose nor gain representation—and a Parish which might lose some of its representation often find it expedient to scratch each other's backs on various bills, with agreement to block reapportionment included.

The second reason for inaction is that the so-called country parishes, with no sizable municipalities, refuse to les-en their legislative power that now is far beyond their constitutional right. They band together to prevent change.

Twenty-one bills have been introduced in the present Legislature proposing changes in apportionment, or setting up procedures for reapportioning, but not all in full accord with the Constitutions mandate for full reapportionment every 10 years. The House already has approved a proposed constitutional amendment to increase its membership from 101 to 105, the four additional seats going to East Baton Rouge and Jefferson Parishes.

But no additional seats are provided for other Parishes entitled to them, and no reduction is made in seats which some Parishes now hold and to which they are not entitled. And, under the Constitution, East Baton Rouge and Jefferson Parishes each are entitled to three additional Representatives, not two.

Caddo Parish now has four Representatives. It is entitled to five under the preliminary 1960 federal census returns. Calcasieu is the only other Parish besides Caddo, East Baton Rouge and Jefferson which would gain under reapportionment now.

Eight Parishes would lose seats by reapportionment — Arcadia, Avoyelles, Lafourche, Natchitoches, St. Mary and Tangipahoa each would be reduced from two present seats to one. St. Landry would drop from three to two. Two Wards in New Orleans probably would lose one seat each—dropping from two—and one New Orleans Ward would go up from one to two.

The seven losing Parishes outside of Orleans have a present representation of only 15 seats out of 101 in the House. Including all of the Orleans representation, the total present House seats for all parishes affected adversely by reapportionment would be only 35 out of 101.

Yet reapportionment has been blocked repeatedly in Legislature after Legislature, although 18 of parishes would be unchanged in their House representation. (Ouachita representation would not be changed by reapportionment.)

In most of the states, the Legislature is the agency designated constitutionally to Carry out reapportionment — as in Louisiana. Failure of Legislatures to act has led 13 states to designate alternate agencies. One bill now before the Louisiana Legislature — by Rep. Aigie Brown of Shreveport— now would set up a nine-member commission which automatically would apportion every 10 years if the Legislature failed to do so. The Commission would be composed of two Senators, two Representatives, a member appointed by the Governor, and four members selected by Tulane, Loyola, Centenary and Louisiana College. Its decisions would be final. Similar proposals have been before the Legislature before and always have been brushed aside.

Caddo Parish now has one Representative per 56,959 population and Bossier has one per 57,434. East Baton Rouge has one per 114,000 and Jefferson one per 103,999. Cameron has one Representative per 6,727—with its neighbor, Calcasieu, having only one per 71,176. Numerous other comparable inequities could be cited.

Each member of the Legislature has taken an oath to uphold the Constitution. That certainly means to carry out its provisions where both authority and responsibility are vested in the Legislature itself — as in reapportionment. Why is the oath not being kept?

The Legislature should quit dallying around with this issue and either reapportion itself or create an agency with final authority to do so. The latter probably would be the best step because it would set up a bulwark against back room political deals which for years have kept the people of Louisiana from representation in their state government which their Constitution supposedly guarantees.

Barry Goldwater Grows

Senator From Small State Of Arizona Gains Rapidly In Stature While Advocating Conservatism

Senator Barry Goldwater comes from a small state, Arizona. He made his mark in the Senate immediately and has grown in stature rapidly because he has a philosophic turn of mind and can speak in broader terms than mere partisan politics.

He is a Conservative. But he does not deal with Conservatism as some ancient shibboleth but "rather as a norma". American concept of the based on historic memory. In his book, "The Conscience of a Conservative," he writes:

"Surely the first obligation of a political thinker is to understand the nature of man. The Conservative does not claim special powers of perception on this point, but he does claim a familiarity with the accumulated wisdom and experience of history, and he is not too proud to learn from the great minds of the past."

It is historic memory which makes the difference between combining experience, knowledge and ambition into an amalgam for a thrust forward and Liberalism which is also moving forward, but on the cut sort of, Senator Goldwater also says:

"The most difference between the Conservatives and the Liberals of today is that Conservatives take account of the whole man, while the Liberals tend to look only at the material side of man's nature . . .

This is not necessarily true. It is a kind of Conservative bigotry to believe this, just as the Liberals assume that conservatives are all fat capitalists, which is far from true. One can be spiritually rich, as Norman Thomas or Reinhold Niebuhr is, and be a Liberal for the essential difference is in the nature of the thrust forward. For neither the Conservative nor the Liberal believes in the status quo and neither of them really seeks to return to whatever were the "good old days."

The Conservative believes that progress must be within the margins of history which deals with the movements of man through the centuries. He recognizes that in this movement forward errors have been made. The Conservative does not have a vested interest in those errors. He seeks to rebuild society constantly but he holds firm to its foundations.

Barry Goldwater's book, "The Conscience of a Conservative," is too short an essay to be satisfying but the startling fact is that it was written at all and that a United States Senator issued it in these times.

There is undoubtedly a Conservative trend in this country. It is more pronounced among younger people than among their parents who were influenced by the circumstances of the 1930's. The younger people, in this period of scientific discovery and absorption with philosophic concepts, are less concerned with politics and political institutions than their parents were. Science and psychology have caught their eye.

This is generally referred to as apathy and, it must be admitted, true compared with other campaigns, the 1960 one, thus far, is dull. There is this about television: while for the candidate, it may be a convenience because he talks to a large audience at once, the personal touch is lost. He is another actor on the stage. He is often interviewed by dully polite interrogators who most often ask absurd questions which evoke neither sharp repartee nor keen observation. The warmness of the crowd is gone. The shouting and yelling, the blaring band, the enthusiasm of faction—all disappear on television. What is left is just a man talking—and one turns to a number.

This apathy the students of politic deplore. But there was no apathy when Franklin D. Roosevelt spoke over radio. I disliked Roosevelt but listened. No matter whether his speech was written by Samuel Rosenman or Robert Sherwood or by Roosevelt or by a team, it always was something to get excited about. It is preferable in our kind of a country to be angry at a public figure than to feel that "Wagon Train" is more important.

This apathy is not due to Conservatism. It is due to dullness, to lack of issues, to political confusion. For instance, Adlai Stevenson says that he is not a candidate; Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt says that he is a candidate. Oh dear! Oh dear! Why don't the Liberals make up their minds. And Mrs. Roosevelt's idea of having a Stevenson-Kennedy ticket is really something to put a damper on the Democratic Convention. Why not a Kennedy - Stevenson ticket or would Jack prefer to run with a Conservative to make sure?

Part-Time Job

Woman Becomes Exhausted From Doing Frustrating Things

Florence literally ran into the house and fell into a chair. "What I ought to do is get a job," she gasped. "I've never been so exhausted from doing things that leave me frustrated. It seems to me that all I do all day long is chauffeur the kids around and slave for charity affairs that don't make money. You don't know how right you were when you once told me that you don't work as hard with a job as I do without one."

"Well, why not?" I came back. "You're becoming a natural for a part-time job." And Florence is — and perhaps so are you becoming a natural for a part-time job, for

She is now a married woman in the 35-44 year age bracket—common characteristics of the woman part-time worker in our land.

Her children are moving up in the teens — a period when women frequently seek interests outside the home.

She easily can qualify for work in any of dozens of service or trade occupations.

More women are working part-time in our country today than ever before in our nation's history, according to a just-released study by the Dept. of Labor. Actually, the number of women with part-time jobs has been rising much faster than the number of women or men employed full time in the past several years. The number of women working part time has been increasing much faster than the number of men so employed.

The Labor Dept.'s latest findings well may be startling even to the experts. For instance:

Over 9,000,000 women who will be working this year will be part-time jobholders, almost one-third of all women workers.

During the past decade, the rise in women part-time workers has been a spectacular 47 per cent, comparing with a rise in the number working full time of 15 per cent.

The woman dominates our huge part-time work force. Almost three-fifths of all part-time workers are women.

The biggest increase in the group working the year round, and more than half of the increase has been due to the influx of older women — over 45— into this job market.

A fat 60 per cent of women working part time are married and living with their husbands.

Women are working part time in every major industry and occupation in our country. While the majority still are in such traditional occupations as sales clerks, waitresses, beauty operators, they also are employed part time as teachers, nurses, librarians, social workers.

And most women work part time not because they can't get full-time jobs. They choose part-time work because of competing demands of home and school, because they don't want full-time jobs. A major aim is to make money, of course, but factors also are a desire to maintain a skill, develop outside interests, gain work experience.

Big as the female part - time work force is, it'll get bigger. Mrs. Vice K. Leopold, Assistant to the Labor Secretary, predicts the female part-time work force will swell another 15 per cent in the next five years, 30 per cent in the coming ten. For more and more businesses are discovering the value of the part-time worker to meet peak business periods, relieve regular employes from unusually long hours. More and more women are simultaneously discovering the advantages to them of part-time jobs.

Florence may not realize it yet, but she is on her way back to a part-time job. And if she is as responsible about meeting her job schedule as she is about meeting her daughters' date schedules, she'll be a jewel to her employer and a new woman to her overworked self.

Senate Is Slow

Deliberates Hour and 42 Minutes On Each Bill Before It

NATURAL GAS — Often called the most deliberate legislative body in the world, the U. S. Senate persists in going out of its way to prove it. As of the end of May, the Senate had "deliberated" for 741 hours and nine minutes to pass a total of 432 measures — an average of about one hour and 42 minutes per piece of legislative passed. Debate limitations in the bulkier House allowed it to pass 417 measures in only 302 hours and 20 minutes, or an average of about 45 minutes per measure. And that hot air in the Senate isn't free. Senate talk filled 6,384 pages of the Congressional Record at a cost to the taxpayer of about $550,700. Word economy in the House enabled that body to get by with only 3,790 pages of proceedings at a cost of about $303,200.

HUNGER PANGS — Rep. Clare Hoffman of Michigan was bitterly complaining about the lack of adequate eating facilities in the Capitol for visiting constituents. After telling his colleagues that a member of his staff was balked in an attempt to take four constituents into the House Restaurant, Hoffman grumbled: "It occurs to me that we did not quite cover everything when we passed the civil rights bill. We did not get equal rights for ourselves." Complaining that his constituents were forced to forego the famous Michigan bean soup served in the House restaurant, Hoffman said regretfully: "We need more room here and fewer fine eating places abroad — paid for by our hungry constituents."

CUT RATE DRUGS — Under pressure from local druggists and pharmacists, Capitol Physician George W. Calver is clamping down on the dispensation of drugs to Capital Hill personnel. The medical office in the Capitol was set up to give emergency treatment to ailing members of Congress. But through the years, this service has been extended to all Hill employes as well as members of the press. Recently, however, medical freeloaders have been overdoing it and buying all their drugs at cost from Calver's office. Sooooo, Calver has ordered a crack-down. It's just possible that the current Congressional probe of drug prices had something to do with the decision.

JUST THE THING — One Senator's office, handling numerous requests for copies of a voluminous and complicated report, thoughtfully included three aspirin tablets with each package.

SMEAR CAMPAIGN — Political campaigns often blow up insignificant things out of all proportion. Rep. Frank Kowalski of Connecticut has been trying for some time to get Congressional action on his bill to make George Washington a general of the armies like President Eisenhower and Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Recently the GOP nominated former Rep. Antoni Sadlak to oppose Kowalski in the November election. Sadlak's first charge: that Kowalski is so inept a congressman that he couldn't even get a bill passed to make George Washington a general.

EDUCATION LAG — One Southern congressman got a first-hand example last week of what's wrong with America's school systems. He received the following letter from a schoolboy in his district: "I like your mitreal that you sent me. I want to thank you for all the stuff you sent me. Please send me any stuff that you can. I am always glad to get stuff."

CLOAKROOM JOKES — Rep. Edgar Hiestand of California has a bizarre safety slogan which goes: "Don't smoke in bed; the ashes that fall on the floor may be your own." And Sen. Kenneth B. Keating (R-N.Y.) says that Pravda, the official Soviet newspaper, is running a contest for the best political joke sent in. First prize is a 20-year vacation in Siberia. Second prize is only 10 years.

Butler Bossing

National Democratic Chairman May Exit After Convention

This may be the last reference in this space to Paul M. Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, for all the signs are that a month hence Mr. Butler will depart his present place on the national political scene.

But let no one think the embattled Mr. Butler is slinking off the scene. He has organized and officered the Democratic National Convention for himself at Los Angeles in such an effective way that even that old warhorse, James A. Farley, will have to admire his handiwork.

There will be Butler-puppets in the convention presiding chairs and in top places on the Platform Committee and the delegate - recommending Credentials Committee and in so many other key places that only a revolution — and none is in sight — could upset assurance for most everything that Mr. Butler wishes.

Furthermore Butler himself practically acted as a one-man room clerk in making assignment of accomodations to the various delegations at Los Angeles. The result is, if the loud squawks being heard can be taken at face value, that no Democrat who has crossed Mr. Butler either pome or dudgeon is going to have a comfortable bed to sleep in at Los Angeles, or no perquisite whatsoever which party V.I.P.'s customarily expect to be accorded.

The capping information is that Mr. Butler is preparing a person al keynote on the issues at Los Angeles, although the official keynoter and temporary chairman is Senator Frank Church of Idaho. It is the province of the National Chairman to call the convention to order and make an opening speech and Butler intends to make the most of it.

Some important persons who have doubted that Butler had very high political voltage or towering personal attraction will be surprised to find how much Los Angeles to find how much he did with what he had.

Undoubtedly the party chairman realized that he would be no match for the backroom boys when they began their scheduled maneuvers in the City of Angels, so by an unexpected show of horsepower he put quite a number of things out of range of their maneuvering.

The candidate who figures to benefit the most from Butler's activities is Senator John A. Kennedy. On March 15, Butler plumped into the Kennedy camp in an off-the-record interview predicting the nomination of the Massachusetts Senator.

Later he asserted neutrality, but there has never been much doubt that like Walter Reuther, who also asserts neutrality, he was "neutral for Kennedy."

In March Senator Kennedy announced that Representative Chester Bowles of Connecticut would be his foreign policy adviser, carrying a strong implication that Bowles would be Secretary of State in the Kennedy Cabinet, if there were such.

In mid-April Butler announced that Bowles, an achonist in the "Liberal" Democratic camp, would be Chairman of the Platform and Resolutions Committee at Los Angeles, which meant that regardless of who the Presidential nominee is, the platform will eozly fit only Senator Kennedy.

Then there is the Credentials Committee, which makes recommendations on who shall and who shall not have seats in the convention as delegates. That Committee is under the joint chairmanship of Camille Gravel, national committeeman from Louisiana, and Calvin Rawlings of Utah, national committeeman from Utah.

There is no doubt that Gravel is Butler's man here. Gravel is at outs with the Louisiana State organization on the question of racial integration, the Louisianians have twice thrown him out of his position, but Butler had declared the Louisiana action illegal and Gravel will be Butler's right-hand man in delegate seating at Los Angeles.

Butler's plan originally was to unseat whole delegations from Southern States unless they took some sort of loyalty pledge. Now the idea is understood to pitch out individual delegates rather than entire delegations. Whatever the plan is, Butler probably has the votes to put it through.

HOW COME?

West Monroe, La.

To The Editor:

Why do the low-lifes who sell alcoholic beverages to juveniles get off with a $50 fine or 10 days in jail by the same court or other courts that senteneed two juveniles (court proceedings, 6-14-60) to 60 days (compulsory) in jail for vagrancy, which is a minor offense.

Cause for constructive criticism and correction is very obvious.

All worthy parents should rally against the contributors (low-lifes) to jevenile delinquency, which is a very serious crime.

Why Not Obey The Constitution?

CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF LOUISIANA

Article III

Section 2. Representation in the House of Representatives shall be equal and uniform and shall be based upon population. Each Parish and each Ward of the City of New Orleans shall have at least one Representative. At its first regular session after the United States census of 1930, and after each census thereafter, the Legislaure shall, and is hereby directed to, apportion the representation among the several Parishes and representative districts on the basis of total population shown by such census . . .

Section 3. The Legislature, in every year in which it shall apportion representation in the House of Representatives, shall divide the Senate into Senatorial Districts . . .

The Constitution of Louisiana —as quoted above—is as clear as crystal in stating that the Legislature "shall, and is hereby directed to," reapportion representation in the Legislature after each federal census—every 10 years.

Yet, in the 30 years the above provisions have been effective, Legislature after Legislature has met without taking any step to fulfill this dictate and mandate of the Constitution.

At the gubernatorial level, no state administration has sought actively to bring about reapportionment in that period.

There has been no statewide reapportionment of the Legislature in 48 years—since the present Constitution, written in 1921, was adopted in 1922.

The result is that Louisiana does not have representative government—or government "as a republic," as provided in the Constitution.

Parishes of small population have a legislative voice in some instances as much as 19 times as great as more heavily populated parishes. Ten parishes with more than half the state's population have only 39 Representatives, while 54 parishes with less than half the population have 62 spokesmen — and votes — in the House.

Reapportionment under the 1960 federal census would not reverse the minority (of population) control but would narrow it to 55-46 in favor of the rural minority-population areas.

There is no valid reason for failure of the various Legislatures to obey the Constitution. There are only so-called political reasons. One is log-rolling. A Parish having no particular interest in reapportionment—one which would neither lose nor gain representation—and a Parish which might lose some of its representation often find it expedient to scratch each other's backs on various bills, with agreement to block reapportionment included.

The second reason for inaction is that the so-called country parishes, with no sizable municipalities, refuse to lessen their legislative power that now is far beyond their constitutional right. They band together to prevent change.

Twenty-one bills have been introduced in the present Legislature proposing changes in apportionment, or setting up procedures for reapportioning, but not all in full accord with the Constitutions mandate for full reapportionment every 10 years. The House already has approved a proposed constitutional amendment to increase its membership from 101 to 105, the four additional seats going to East Baton Rouge and Jefferson Parishes.

But no additional seats are provided for other Parishes entitled to them, and no reduction is made in seats which some Parishes now hold and to which they are not entitled. And, under the Constitution, East Baton Rouge and Jefferson Parishes each are entitled to three additional Representatives, not two.

Caddo Parish now has four Representatives. It is entitled to five under the preliminary 1960 federal census returns. Calcasieu is the only other Parish besides Caddo, East Baton Rouge and Jefferson which would gain under reapportionment now.

Eight Parishes would lose seats by reapportionment — Arcadia, Avoyelles, Lafourche, Natchitoches, St. Mary and Tangipahoa each would be reduced from two present seats to one. St. Landry would drop from three to two. Two Wards in New Orleans probably would lose one seat each—dropping from two—and one New Orleans Ward would go up from one to two.

The seven losing Parishes (outside of Orleans) have a present representation of only 15 seats out of 101 in the House. Including all of the Orleans representation, the total present House seats for all parishes affected adversely by reapportionment would be only 35 out of 101.

Yet reapportionment has been blocked repeatedly in Legislature after Legislature, although 48 of parishes would be unchanged in their House representation. (Ouachita representation would not be changed by reappointment.)

In most of the states, the Legislature is the agency designated constitutionally to Carry out reapportionment — as in Louisiana. Failure of Legislatures to act has led 13 states to designate alternate agencies. One bill now before the Louisiana Legislature — by Rep. Algie Brown of Shreveport—now would set up a nine-member commission which automatically would apportion every 10 years if the Legislature failed to do so. The Commission would be composed of two Senators, two Representatives, a member appointed by the Governor, and four members selected by Tulane, Loyola, Centenary and Louisiana College. Its decisions would be final. Similar proposals have been before the Legislature before and always have been brushed aside.

Caddo Parish now has one Representative per 56,950 population and Bossier has one per 57,434. East Baton Rouge has one per 114,000 and Jefferson one per 103,000, Cameron has one Representative per 6,727—with its neighbor, Calcasieu, having only one per 71,176. Numerous other comparable inequities could be cited.

Each member of the Legislature has taken an oath to uphold the Constitution. That certainly means to carry out its provisions where both authority and responsibility are vested in the Legislature itself — as in reapportionment. Why is the oath not being kept?

The Legislature should quit dallying around with this issue and either reapportion itself or create an agency with final authority to do so. The latter probably would be the best step because it would set up a bulwark against back room political deals which for years have kept the people of Louisiana from representation in their state government which their Constitution supposedly guarantees.

Barry Goldwater Grows

Senator Barry Goldwater comes from a small state, Arizona. He made his mark in the Senate immediately and has grown in stature rapidly because he has a philosophic turn of mind and can speak in broader terms than mere partisan politics.

He is a Conservative. But he does not deal with Conservatism as some ancient shibboleth but rather as a normal, American concept of life based on historic memory. In his book, "The Conscience of a Conservative," he writes:

"Surely the first obligation of a political thinker is to understand the nature of man. The Conservative does not claim special powers of perception on this point, but he does claim a familiarity with the accumulated wisdom and experience of history, and he is not too proud to learn from the great minds of the past."

It is historic memory which makes the difference between combining experience, knowledge and ambition into an amalgam for a thrust forward and Liberalism which is also moving forward, but off the cuff sort of. Senator Goldwater also says:

"The root difference between the Conservatives and the Liberals of today is that Conservatives take account of the whole man, while the Liberals tend to look only at the material side of man's nature . . ."

This is not necessarily true. It is a kind of Conservative bigotry to believe this, just as the Liberals assume that constrvatives are all fat capitalists, which is far from true. One can be spiritually rich, as Norman Thomas or Reinhold Niebuhr is, and be a Liberal but the essential difference is in the nature of the thrust forward. For neither the Conservative nor the Liberal believes in the status quo and neither of them really seeks to return to whatever were the "good old days."

The Conservative believes that progress must be within the margins of history which deals with the movements of man through the centuries. He recognizes that in this movement forward errors have been made. The Conservative does not have a vested interest in those errors. He seeks to rebuild society constantly but he holds firm to its foundations.

Barry Goldwater's book, "The Conscience of a Conservative," is too short an essay to be satisfying but the startling fact is that it was written at all and that a United States Senator issued it in these times.

There is undoubtedly a Conservative trend in this country. It is more pronounced among younger people than among their parents who were influenced by the circumstances of the 1930's. The younger people, in this period of scientific discovery and absorption with philosophic concepts, are less concerned wth politics and political institutions than their parents were. Science and psychology have caught their eye.

This is generally referred to as apathy and, it must be admitted, that compared with other campaigns, the 1960 one, thus far, is dull. There is this about television: while for the candidate, it may be a convenience because he talks to a large audience at once, the personal touch is lost. He is another actor on the stage. He is often interviewed by dully polite interrogators who most often ask absurd questions which evoke neither sharp repartee nor keen observation. The warmness of the crowd is gone. The shouting and yelling, the blaring band, the enthusiasm of faction—all disappear on television. What is left is just a man talkng—and one turns to a murder.

This apathy the students of politics deplore. But there was no apathy when Franklin D. Roosevelt spoke over radio. I disliked Roosevelt but listened. No matter whether his speech was written by Samuel Rosenman or Robert Sherwood or by Roosevelt or by a team, it always was something to get excited about. It is preferable in our kind of a country to be angry at a public figure than to feel that "Wagon Train" is more important.

This apathy is not due to Conservatism. It is due to dullness, to lack of issues, to political confusion. For instance, Adlai Stevenson says that he is not a candidate: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt says that he is a candidate. Oh dear! Oh dear! Why don't the Liberals make up their minds. And Mrs. Roosevelt's idea of having a Stevenson-Kennedy ticket is really something to put a damper on the Democratic Convention. Why not a Kennedy - Stevenson ticket or would Jack prefer to run with a Conservative to make sure?

Part-Time Job

Woman Becomes Exhausted From Doing Frustrating Things

Florence literally ran into the house and fell into a chair. "What I ought to do is get a job," she gasped. "I've never been so exhausted from doing things that leave me frustrated. It seems to me that all I do all day long is chauffeur the kids around and slave for charity affairs that don't make money. You don't know how right you were when you once told me that you don't work as hard with a job as I do without one."

"Well, why not?" I came back. "You're becoming a natural for a part-time job." And Florence is (and perhaps so are you) becoming a natural for a part-time job, for:

She is now a married woman in the 35-44 year age bracket—common characteristics of the woman part-time worker in our land.

Her children are moving up in the teens — a period when women frequently seek interests outside the home.

She easily can qualify for work in any of dozens of service or trade occupations.

More women are working part-time in our country today than ever before in out nation's history, according to a just-released study by the Dept. of Labor. Actually, the number of women with part-time jobs has been rising much faster than the number of women or men employed full time in the past several years. The number of women working part time has been increasing much faster than the number of men so employed.

The Labor Dept.'s latest findings well may be startling even to the experts. For instance:

Over 9,000,000 women who will be working this year will be part-time jobholders, almost one-third of all women workers.

During the past decade, the rise in women part-time workers has been a spectacular 47 per cent, comparing with a rise in the number working full time of 15 per cent.

The woman dominates our huge part-time work force. Almost three-fifths of all part-time workers are women.

The biggest increase in the group working the year round, and more than half of the increase has been due to the influx of older women — over 45—into this job market.

A fat 60 per cent of women working part time are married and living with their husbands.

Women are working part time in every major industry and occupation in our country. While the majority still are in such traditional occupations as sales clerks, waitresses, beauty operators, they also are employed part time as teachers, nurses, librarians, social workers.

And most women work part time not because they can't get full-time jobs. They choose part-time work because of competing demands of home and school, because they don't want full-time jobs. A major aim is to make money, of course, but factors also are a desire to maintain a skill, develop outside interests, gain work experience.

Big as the female part - time work force is, it'll get bigger. Mrs. Alice K. Leopold, Assistant to the Labor Secretary, predicts the female part-time work force will swell another 18 per cent in the next five years, 30 per cent in the coming ten. For more and more businesses are discovering the value of the part-time worker to meet peak business periods, relieve regular employes from unusually long hours. More and more women are simultaneously discovering the advantages to them of part-time jobs.

Florence may not realize it yet, but she is on her way back to a part-time job. And if she is as responsible about meeting her job schedule as she is about meeting her daughters' date schedules, she'll be a jewel to her employer and a new woman to her overworked self.

Senate Is Slow

Deliberates Hour and 42 Minutes On Each Bill Before It

NATURAL GAS — Often called the most deliberate legislative body in the world, the U. S. Senate persists in going out of its way to prove it. As of the end of May, the Senate had "deliberated" for 741 hours and nine minutes to pass a total of 432 measures — an average of about one hour and 42 minutes per piece of legislative passed. Debate limitations in the bulkier House allowed it to pass 417 measures in only 302 hours and 20 minutes, or an average of about 45 minutes per measure. And that hot air in the Senate isn't free. Senate talk filled 6,884 pages of the Congressional Record at a cost to the taxpayer of about $550,700. Word economy in the House enabled that body to get by with only 3,790 pages of proceedings at a cost of about $303,200.

HUNGER PANGS — Rep. Clare Hoffman of Michigan was bitterly complaining about the lack of adequate eating facilities in the Capitol for vsiting constituents. After telling his colleagues that a member of his staff was balked in an attempt to take four constituents into the House Restaurant, Hoffman grumbled: "It occurs to me that we did not quite cover everything when we passed the civil rights bill. We did not get equal rights for ourselves." Complaining that his constituents were forced to forego the famous Michigan bean soup served in the House restaurant, Hoffman said regretfully: "We need more room here and fewer fine eating places abroad — paid for by our hungry constituents."

CUT RATE DRUGS — Under pressure from local druggists and pharmacists, Capitol Physisian George W. Calver is clamping down on the dispeasaton of drugs to Capital Hill personnel. The medical office in the Capitol was set up to give emergency treatment to ailing members of Congress. But through the years, this service has been extended to all Hill employes as well as members of the press. Recently, however, medical freeloaders have been overdoing it and buying all their drugs at cost from Calver's office. Sooooo, Calver has ordered a crack-down. It's just possible that the current Congressional probe of drug prices had something to do with the decision.

JUST THE THING — One Senator's office, handling numerous requests for copies of a voluminous and complicated report, thoughtfully included three aspirin tablets with each package.

SMEAR CAMPAIGN — Political campaigns often blow up insignificant things out of all proportion. Rep. Frank Kowalski of Connecticut has been trying for some time to get Congressional action on his bill to make George Washington a general of the armies like President Eisenhower and Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Recently the GOP nominated former Rep. Antoni Sadlak to oppose Kowalski in the November election. Sadlak's first charge: that Kowalski is so inept a congressman that he couldn't even get a bill passed to make George Washington a general.

EDUCATION LAG — One Southern congressman got a first-hand example last week of what's wrong with America's school system. He received the following letter from a schoolboy in his district: "I like your mitreal that you sent me. I want to thank you for all the stuff you sent me. Please send me any stuff that you can. I am alwass glad to get stuff."

CLOAKROOM JOKES — Rep. Edgar Hiestand of California has a bizarre safety slogan which goes: "Don't smoke in bed; the ashes that fall on the floor may be your own." And Sen. Kenneth B. Keating (R-N.Y.) says that Pravda, the official Soviet newspaper, is running a contest for the best political joke sent in. First prize is a 20-year vacation in Siberia. Second prize is only 10 years.

Butler Bossing

National Democratic Chairman May Exit After Convention

This may be the last reference in this space to Paul M. Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, for all the signs are that a month hence Mr. Butler will depart his present place on the national political scene.

But let no one think the often-embattled Mr. Butler is slinking off the scene. He has organized and officered the Democratic National Convention for himself at Los Angeles in such an effective way that even that old warhorse, James A. Farley, will have to admire his handiwork.

There will be Butler-choices in the convention presiding chairs and in top places on the Platform Committee and the delegate - recommending Credentials Committee and in so many other key places that only a revolution — and none is in sight — could upset assurance for most everything that Mr. Butler wishes.

Furthermore Butler himself practically acted as a one-man room clerk in making assignment of accomodations to the various delegations at Los Angeles. The result is, if the loud squawks being heard can be taken at face value, that no Democrat who has caused Mr. Butler either pique or dudgeon is going to have a comfortable bed to sleep in at Los Angeles, or no perquisite whatsoever which party V.I.P's customarily expect to be accorded.

The capping information is that Mr. Butler is preparing a personal keynote on the issues at Los Angeles, although the official keynoter and temporary chairman is Senator Frank Church of Idaho. It is the province of the National Chairman to call the convention to order and make an opening speech and Butler intends to make the most of it.

Some important persons who have doubted that Butler had very high political voltage or towering personal attraction will be surprised to find how much Los Angeles to find how much he did with what he had.

Undoubtedly the party chairman realized that he would be no match for the backroom boys when they began their scheduled maneuvers in the City of Angels, so by an unexpected show of horsepower he put quite a number of things out of range of their maneuvering.

The candidate who figures to benefit the most from Butler's activities is Senator John A. Kennedy. On March 15, Butler plumped into the Kennedy camp in an off-the-record interview predicting the nomination of the Massachusetts Senator.

Later he asserted neutrality, but there has never been much doubt that like Walter Reuther, who also asserts neutrality, he was "neutral for Kennedy."

In March Senator Kennedy announced that Representative Chester Bowles of Connecticut would be his foreign policy adviser, carrying a strong implication that Bowles would be Secretary of State in the Kennedy Cabinet, if there were such.

In mid-April Butler announced that Bowles, an actionist in the "Liberal" Democratic camp, would be Chairman of the Platform and Resolutions Committee at Los Angeles, which means that regardless of who the Presidential nominee is, the platform will cozily fit only Senator Kennedy.

Then there is the Credentials Committee, which makes recommendations on who shall and who shall not have seats in the convention as delegates. That Committee is under the joint chairmanship of Camille Gravel, national committeeman from Louisiana, and Calvin Rawlings of Utah, national committeeman from Utah.

There is no doubt that Gravel is Butler's man here. Gravel is at outs with the Louisiana State organization on the question of racial integration, the Louisianians have twice thrown him out of his position, but Butler had declared the Louisiana action illegal and Gravel will be Butler's righthand man in delegate seating at Los Angeles.

Butler's plan originally was to unseat whole delegations from Southern States unless they took some sort of loyalty pledge. Now the idea is understood to pitch out individual delegates rather than entire delegations. Whatever the plan is, Butler probably has the votes to put it through.

HOW COME?

West Monroe, La.

To The Editor:

Why do the low-lifes who sell alcoholic beverages to juveniles get off with a $50 fine or 10 days in jail by the same court or other courts that sentenced two juveniles (court proceedings, 6-14-60) to 60 days (compulsory) in jail for vagrancy, which is a minor offense.

Cause for constructive criticism and correction is very obvious.

All worthy parents should rally against the contributors (low-lifes) to jevenile delinquency, which is a very serious crime.

Ordeal In South Korea

Remember Pork Chop Hill, And Heart Break Ridge

Editor's note—Ten years ago on June 25, Communist forces struck in Korea and a bitter, frustrating struggle began. The ordeal was followed by a peace without victory, a peace without elation. In the following article, AP's chief of bureau in Tokyo—who helped cover much of the Korean War—recalls its anguish, horror, and heroism.

By JOHN RANDOLPH
Associated Press Staff Writer

Memories of death and destruction, bravery, misery and blood live in the mind forever. They haunt us like restless ghosts.

That's the way it is with the Korean War, a dirty, obscene—and glorious—war. It began one quiet Sunday morning when Communist tanks roared out of the North on June 25, 1950, and ripped across the 38th Parallel into the South.

For 31 of its 37 months, I was part of that war. I watched its agony and wonder.

Much has happened since then, in the world at large and in Korea where the government of President Syngman Rhee, who had long led his nation in war and peace, was overthrown recently by a popular uprising. But 10 years after, the sights and sounds and feelings of the Korean War still come flooding back.

My first vivid recollection was in Tokyo, in December, 1950, when I was sent to interview the human wreckage of the 10th Corps in Tokyo General Hospital. There was a man whose hands and feet had frozen while he lay wounded beside the Chosin Reservoir. They were as black as four pieces of soft coal. He was full of penicillin and floating in a morphine fog, but he could still talk. The doctors told me they probably would not have to amputate everything—some fingers and toes would be saved. I remember how a little Japanese nurse, in her white starched cap, gave him another injection while he told me, in a dull, faraway voice, how the Chinese Communists had climbed up on the stalled trucks and submachinegunned the American wounded trapped in the icy valleys. He had pretended death—and survived. But he did not look at his hands.

Then there are memories of the withdrawals, the villages burning in the night, the exhausted, beaten men. The short, stocky, Republic of Korea (ROK) soldiers retreating down the snowy road, their feet wrapped in bloody rags but carrying their weapons.

This was the time of the refugees.

They say that in January, 1951, there were two million Koreans on the roads fleeing from the Communists. All of these people had seen the Reds at firsthand in the first three months of the invasion. Their flight from the second wave in the middle of that bitter winter was the most eloquent damnation of communism the world saw until Hungary revolted. These people were not the politicians, the wealthy, or even the "kulaks." They were the little people. They were voting with their feet, and every step was pain.

There was the sick-faced American lieutenant who had just seen a young wife give birth to her baby in a ditch by the road, cut the cord with her teeth, strangle the fresh born child, leave it in the ditch and get up to march south with her other children.

There was the farm family pushing a heaped-up oxcart that tumbled over an embankment into a stream. There was no chance, no help, no time to pick up anything.

They stood there, five or six of them, looking at each other stupidly as realization sank in that they were alone in the middle of Korea, on the edge of no-man's-land, on that twilight winter road, with nothing but the clothes they wore.

There was the old couple walking down the railroad track at Pyongtaek with their daughter, her husband, their two small babies and a boy of about 6. Night was falling, and a wet snow was soaking their quilted cotton clothing. The old woman could walk no more. For her it was the end of the road, the final end, and she knew it. There was a short argument, but she rejected all help. Desperately, fiercely, she gestured them onward. They carried her to the shelter of a railroad shack beside the tracks and started walking south again. But after about 20 steps the old man shook his head, turned around, and walked back to die beside his wife when the deep cold came with midnight to freeze them to death in their wet clothes. The young couple looked at them for a moment with bowed heads, then silently turned and marched on with the children.

The the army pulled itself together and fought again in its bloody-named "Operation Killer." This was savage, swaying, fighting—stand where you are and die in your tracks.

The names of the battles were Wonju, Chipyong, and Hoengsong where the third Chinese Communist human-sea dashed against a modern army that was learning how to fight and didn't dare retreat because there was nothing more to retreat to.

At Chipyong, the 23rd Infantry with the French Battalion fought one of the finest regimental battles in the history of the American Army—probably the finest regimental action of the entire war.

Surrounded on a low ring of hills around Chipyong for three days—and 12 miles deep inside the Communist lines—the 23rd and the French gave more than they got and the French volunteers wrapped their heads in red French paratrooper scarves and gave the startled Chinese Communists a "mansei" charge of their own with bayonets.

One American infantry company, reduced to a second lieutenant and 19 men and driven off the ridge, pulled itself together and counterattacked until the artillery drove the Chinese Communists off the crestline.

After the battle, by actual count, 1,390 dead Communists covered the slopes around Chipyong—against less than 90 dead inside the perimeter.

The Eighth Army had become professional.

April and May saw the last great Chinese Communist human sea attacks—the biggest battles of the war. These were real actions—whole armies in motion, roaring tank columns and the thunder of an Allied artillery that at last had enough ammunition.

The 8th Army, and to some extent the green and much-slandered ROK army, had learned how to handle the human-sea.

Across the front in April and May the human-sea had been a failure, and the Communists were fighting only light delaying actions north of the 38th Parallel when Soviet Russia suggested an armistice late in June.

To create a mood for peace, we stepped our offensive, and the Communists dug in and brought up reserves. When the armistice "talk talk" as late in August, we started fighting again—and discovered a new war. The Communists now had seemingly unlimited mortars and artillery, their bunkers were 30 feet deep on selected ridgelines, and every hill battle was a Verdun and a bloodbath.

Heartbreak Ridge was the prototype. AP named that one, too, for the Army would not let correspondents use the meter-heights of the hills—the normal military identification. Heartbreak lasted a full month, where earlier hills had usually taken one day or at the most three. It cost the still splendid 23rd Infantry and the French almost 10 times the price of Chipyong.

From then on until the last night of the war, these violent hill battles flared up and burned like volcanoes as either the Allies or the Communists decided to straighten the line here, or test something there.

These savage hill battles were fought without any hope of victory. No one believed in victory any more—that had been suffocated under the ooze of the Panmunjom armistice talks. These fights were often without any real purpose or even justification. Even worse, they were fought without any relation to the rest of the front that might have spread out and equalized the pain and suffering.

The film "Pork Chop Hill" (this was a GI name), shows a slice of the fighting of this period—how men could fight bravely because of their self-respect, their orders, and their duty, and not because it was worth anything, or because they hoped to win. Yet this ultimate courage was strained here and there as this unnatural war began to effect the 8th Army. As death and rotation eliminated the veterans, efficiency and leadership went down. There were a few (not many) cases of American infantry from good regiments throwing down their guns and running away from the horrors of these hill attacks. The Army tried to suppress these incidents, but they are true, and you can believe them. Americans can run, too.

Pork Chop Hill was horrible, but it was by no means the worst. That distinction belong to a combined battle called "Snipers Ridge and Triangle Hill" on our side, and "Samkyangryang" by the Communists. It was so awful that Peiping Radio was shocked into broadcasting a fairly accurate account of it that exaggerated our casualties only 100 per cent—which is not really bad reporting by an enemy in wartime.

This frightful battle was fought partly by the U.S. 7th Division, but mostly by the ROK Second Division and a regiment from the ROK 9th, which latter had just won its defense of White Horse Mountain (a true Korean name) and had proved how really well and hard the new ROK army could fight.

This new battle proved it again. For more than six weeks in October and November, 1952, the fighting seesawed on Sniper's Ridge and up and down the slopes of Triangle Hill. I covered all but the first two weeks of it.

By the end, as the rest of the front grew still, we had 18 battalions of artillery — almost 300 guns—concentrated on this little slice of front using up ammunition by the shipload. It was the heaviest American shooting since the battle against the Germans in Hurtgen Forest in 1945, and for the yardage, it was not much off World War I's all-time record.

Our guns shot two full feet and God knows how many Chinese Communists right off the top of Triangle Hill, which is almost 2,000 feet high. But we still couldn't take it and hold it.

By the time this battle guttered out right where it had started the ROK infantry had lost 6,500 casualties and the 7th Division more than 3,000. This is almost 10,000 men, killed and wounded.

To get some idea of the intensity of this fighting compared to the earlier parts of the war, remember that Gen. MaCarthur's disaster across the front in North Korea in December, 1950, involved only 12,000 casualties to the entire U.S. 8th Army.

Sniper's Ridge and Triangle Hill were not "across the front." This whole incredible battle was fought on a front less than 12 city blocks wide.

By this time the war had degenerated into a crude and shabby reproduction of the witless slaughter in France and Flanders in World War I.

Along the front during this period you could catch the authentic, sickly air of fatalism that pervades the novel "All Quiet on the Western Front." Only rotation seemed to keep the Army from sinking into a morass of defeatism. Many of the soldiers and some of the officers thought they were doomed, and some of them were.

And then one day the war came to an end.

Sharply at 9:45 p.m., July 27, 1953—with a safety factor of 15 minutes—our men fired their last salvo, yanked the breeches open and left them open. A great silence fell, and at 10 p.m. the fighting ended.

Kenya, Where Nature Put Wine, Man Vinegar

By SAUL PETT

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — We drove up toward the Equator, to the beautiful white highlands of Kenya, where nature put wine in the air and man added vinegar.

A mile and more above sea level, we drove in bright clean sunlight, in heady atmosphere, under a brilliant blue sky.

We climbed the hills and curved around deep green valleys burst [illegible] with banana and palm leaves, and we slowed down to let the baboons cross. We passed a sign saying, "Elephants, rhino and buffalo in forest. Please drive carefully." And a mile later, we passed a sign announcing an exclusive polo club.

We drove through native settlements, bedlams of round huts walled with mud and sticks and roofed with dried grass. The driver said the Kikuyus hadn't changed that way until the Emergency, the three years of Mau Mau atrocities against white and black.

We saw the northern horizon tilt to with 50 miles of Kenya. Visible only up to its massive haunches, hiding its 17,000 foot face behind a veil of clouds. We were eight miles south of the Equator but the air was cool, freshened by the winds off the mountain.

This was the heart of the highlands, the living of the proud white settler and citadel of the strongest opposition to the Africans' march toward self-rule and independence in Kenya. In this British colony, the black man outnumbers the white man 24 to 1.

We drove up to the 15,000-acre cattle ranch of Group Capt. Evelyn R. Briggs, formerly of the Royal Air Force and a settler here since 1947.

A tall, dignified British gentleman, Briggs pulled a pipe from his bush jacket and quietly explained the position of the United party he heads. They want, he said, a "political standstill" until more Africans are educated, until Africans show they are capable of government with "tolerance, responsibility and integrity."

All this, he said, will take time (or he didn't say how much). He pointed out that the six million Africans in Kenya have no professional class—only seven lawyers, one accountant, 23 doctors, no engineers, no surveyors, no dentists.

"And yet they want to control everything now. If they did, it would be economic disaster, capital would flow out, the civil service would disappear and, like the Congo, there would be a breakdown in law and order. Most European farmers would leave—in fact, many already are selling out at a loss rather than face a future where their land would be expropriated and they'd live under an African dictatorship."

Trailed by his boxers, Briggs showed us around his handsome cedar and stone house, which is surrounded by a thick, carefully clipped lawn, flower gardens and a tall hedge.

Briggs introduced us to his chic, attractive wife and she led us to the terrace where we met some of their friends sedately drinking gin.

And then quite suddenly on a sunny afternoon, the conversation turned without change of temper to guns. To increased racial tension, to talk of a possible revival of Mau Mau and the rise in native crime. The men discussed the relative merits of a .45 Colt and an Italian Beretta.

"We're carrying guns again, you know," Briggs explained. "I do under my jacket and my wife does in her purse. We've heard there have been Mau Mau oath-taking ceremonies again. This far there has been little actual violence except an occasional stoning of a white man's car."

Next, we visited the 500-acre farm of Jim Hughes, a wiry, tough extrovert of 63, who looks 43. Hughes is called an extremist but many people admit privately that he simply voices opinions they're too polite to express.

He made news early this year when the Kenya delegation returned from the London conference, where the British rocked the white settlers with a blueprint for Kenya's future. As a first step toward independence at an unspecified date, Africans were given a larger franchise, which would assume them a majority in the Legislature and several ministries.

Returning to Nairobi airport, Michael Blundell, leader of the Kenya moderates, ran into a one-man ambush. Hughes threw 39 50-cent pieces at him, shouting, "You bloody Judas, you sold us out!"

And on the lovely sunny day we saw him, Jim Hughes was still steaming.

He denounced "the bloody wind of change" in Africa, the British for yielding to it and to the "semicolonialism of America." He alternately referred to Africans as "bloody apes" and "illiterate baboons" but said his own boys were all right although he doesn't trust them because "If they'd kill their own fathers and mothers, why not their boss?"

Then: "Boy! Tea!"

And while a uniformed, bare-footed African served, Hughes said, "I'd start a revolution if I could get 1,000 gutsy blokes together." But he didn't finish the thought. Instead, he said, he'd sell out if he could get a fair price and go to South Africa "and fight along side them there for the survival of the white race."

"I don't know whether there'll be violence when the Africans take over, but I'd welcome it. I'd shoot them down by the hundreds—not my farm boys but Tom Mboya and those other political fiends."

And his eyes burned and he said, "I tell you I can see the physical enemy. I can see his face and that one I'd like to kill."

On the way back to Nairobi, we rolled through the same lovely landscape but somehow the poetry was gone. Next day, we saw Tom Mboya, the young (30), coppery, black politician whom many think will be Kenya's first prime minister.

He was in his office at the new modern headquarters of the Kenya Federation of Labor, which he heads. Mboya wore a dark gray suit, white shirt, striped tie. He talked confidently but softly.

He referred to the white settlers as "immigrants" (the British started colonizing here only 60 years ago), and he said they have nothing to fear under a native government. He spoke of land reform, and said one man's acreage would be limited to a maximum and the land over that would be bought at a "fair price" and distributed among Africans.

This is a paramount issue, he said, because: "While the African may be simple-minded, he sees what he sees. He travels by bus or walks from his overcrowded reserve, where he owns nothing, and he sees the vast rich beautiful highlands fenced in by the white man. He sees they have so much and he has so little."

He agreed that African illiteracy and lack of training might be a problem in an independent government but said independence could not wait beyond early 1962, that white civil servants would be encouraged to stay, that the chaos of the Congo could be avoided because the transition in Kenya would not be overnight.

Between answering phone calls, Mboya denied there was a Mau Mau revival brewing and said he had always opposed the terror. But Mboya, like all other African politicians, is clamoring for the release of Jomo Kenyatta, the legendary leader whom the British imprisoned before the emergency as the organizer of the terror.

We left Tom Mboya's office and moved around the big modern city of Nairobi, where there seemed to be much less tension than upcountry. Some whites have left, others talk about it, but most seem to be staying.

"I don't think a black government actually will make much difference," said Mrs. Freddie Yowell, who runs a photography studio. "But I shall probably have to put in my window a row of black baby photographs instead of the white."

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Summer is certainly reading time and the people of Ouachita Parish are taking advantage of the excellent library facilities available to them. Each afternoon the reference rooms are crowded with students who are attending summer school and have reference work in connection with their studies. The vacation reading club with the theme "Fishing is Fun" is having excellent response all over the Parish. Each Wednesday Morning at 10:00 the Junior Charity League members hold story hours at the Monroe and West Monroe libraries. The Ouachita Parish Public Library is taking it's rightful place as a leader of the cultural life of the community.

No matter what other activities a library takes on, it's chief stock in trade is books and the Ouachita Parish Public Library book collection is growing every week. "The Stars in Their Courses" is the title of a new book by Harry Brown. It has a modern setting and will be widely read. A delightful family story is "The Lovely Ambition" by Mary Ellen Chase. It is the kind of book that everyone will enjoy and it is wonderful to find a book that shows a pleasant well ordered world. A new mystery story which will be eagerly received is "The Judge is Reversed", by Frances and Richard Lockridge.

In the field of non - fiction there are titles for everyone. "The Right to Learn" By Glenn McCracken is an interesting commentary on methods of teaching reading and what is wrong with them. Those who do handwork will want to see "Samplers and Stitches" by Grace Christie. It is a valuable book and has many excellent ideas. Many people in this community are interested in photography and will be happy to know that we have a new book called "Photography for Everyone" written by Fritz Henle and H. M. Kinzer. It is a beautiful and valuable book. The many chess players in the community will be interested in Irving Chernov's "Combinations the Heart of Chess."

Rudolf Flesch is a master of the art of speaking and writing effectively. His latest book is called "How to Write, Speak and Think More Effectively" and will be widely used. An interesting travel book with the location in China is "All the Emperor's Horses" by David Kidd. "Back to Bokhara" by Fitzroy MacLean is another exciting travel book about an out of the way country. Two very valuable books which will be most useful to students of Latin are "A Day in Old Rome" by W. S. Davis and "Roman life in the days of Cicero" by Alfred J. Church. Both of these books have been out of print for many years and we are happy to have them available now. A gay and delightful biography is "The Merry Monarch; the Life and Likeness of Charles II" written by Hesketh Pearson. Another excellent biography is that of Charles De Gaulle. It is called "The Man Who is France" and was written by Stanley Frederick Clark.

Year-Round Reading Set Summertime

THE SELF - STARTING WHEEL, by William Murray. Dutton. $3.75.

It began back in Rome where three Americans were getting an education, or at least an experience, on GI Bill money. Tim Haggard, the narrator, was with a friend Walter when Max appears, finagles an apartment for them, and then starts to make extra - miserable for them the life he had in a way made possible.

Max is a truth sayer, and in New York and on the Long Island beaches where the story unfolds, he tears away veils, strips off masks, slays all reticence and make-believe. This is the hectic exposure of phoneys on the mad fringe of the creative world — the wrist - slapping literary agent, for instance, and the insatiterable successful inspirational - minister-author who ditches out pap, and the magazine editors so smart at developing best - selling features which have no character at all. There are occasional pointed laughs, like eating the record and playing the pizza, and the end comes zanily with the start of a swim for Portugal.

You'll recognize some of these people — I knew a fellow who set out to swim to Europe. But everybody writes about somebody, and the idea here is, who's crazier. The fraudulent evangelist, the man who'll never believe he can't sing, the agent so tactilely successful, the Long Island Nietzche, or we who are fools enough to believe in them? It's the frilly summertime life, but good for year-round reading.

Kind Words For A Man Of Letters

Robert Frost: The Trial by Experience. By Elizabeth Shepley Sergeant. Holt, Rinehart and Winston. 86.

Some one asked Frost whether he regarded poetry as an escape, and Miss Sergeant remembers his reply: "No. Poetry is a way of taking life by the throat."

The question is an embarrassing recognition of the low esteem in which poetry is held by two many people. The denial of it, however, manly and courageous, has in effect been acted out by Frost in almost every hour of his 86 years, and it is the substance and story told feelingly in this book. Miss Sergeant calls Frost self-made. She specified his, and sometimes his family's, painful and wounding sacrifices for the holy cause of poetry. She says he arrived at crucial decisions by instinct, or in his words:

"I am the most unconscious thing. I never know where I am while things are going on." But afterward he could always sit down and write a poem about the road not taken, or the one less traveled by.

Born in San Francisco, he was 80 before he decided that his birth year was 1874 instead of 1875; he celebrated his 80th birthday in 1955, his 85th in 1959. His father died when he was 10, and he came back with his mother to Lawrence, Mass., a mill town. He got a poem in a school paper, fell in love with a fellow pupil Elinor White, made his first sale of a poem in 1894, married the girl in 1895. His prospects were incredibly slight. He studied at Harvard and Dartmouth briefly. His grandfather, dubious about his future, bought him a farm in Derry, N. H. He did a farmer's chores, but on his own schedule, milking for instance at noon and midnight, reading by kerosene lamp and sometimes writing. He taught nearby, and in Plymouth, N. H., then sold the farm and with the resulting $1,000, minus $120 steamer fare — the children went free — sailed for England.

How improvident could a man be, how impractical, unshrewd, lacking in Yankee smartness! All the copybook maxims condemn such a course — which nevertheless got him his first book publication in England ("North of Boston," 1914) and by Ezra Pound, 20 years after he decided to be a poet.

He has had a notable career as teacher at Michigan, Dartmouth, Harvard and above all Amherst; he holds more honorary degrees than he can count; he has been granted four Pulitzers; and it is absolutely inexcusable that this voice, one of the greatest, richest and warmest in American letters, has never yet received a Nobel prize — but he's very much alive and kicking and there's time yet.

Miss Sergeant stresses the tragic experiences, and the poet's serious side. She does not always evoke his wit, though she notes it, nor his wonderful genial warmth. But the incalculable worth is all here.

Decade And Half Of 'Buoyancy'

THE GOOD YEARS: From 1900 to the First World War. By Walter Lord. Harper.

To be sure, there were calamity, disaster and tragedy: Boxer Rebellion, San Francisco earthquake, 1907 panic, evil and wicked child labor North and, even longer, South.

But just the same, Lord's phrase is both general and accurate, they were "good years." Even the Boxer Rebellion, enacted in costume, with decorum hardly ever ruffled though heads rolled, with almost as many heroes as there were besieged, with official blundering easy to understand and hard to condemn — even the Boxer business was a romantic, story book episode. The assassination at the Buffalo exposition by Leon Czolgosz ended a gentle, considerate, Christian life and career, but launched Teddy Roosevelt as spectacularly as it wrote off McKinley, and Lord heads his chapter with a vigorous outcry by party boss and senator, Mark Hanna:

Roosevelt the trust buster had his colorful run-ins with J. Pierpont Morgan who almost single - handed staunched the panic flood. And if child labor was appalling, its defenders are mercilessly publicized here and one of its most valiant foes is memoralized: Massachusetts' Mrs. Glendower Evans.

But those 15 years were predominantly pleasant. The millionaire rushed about in his special train. On your first $50,000 the tax collector took only 2 per cent — though you already used Form 1040. Cook claimed the discovery of the North Pole. There were the early experimental autos — in a California town the Cadillac agency was held by a 13-year-old boy, and a cop on a bike overtook a speeder. The Wright brothers found it almost as hard to interest the public in flying as actually to fly. Suffragettes rallied in Carnegie Hall. Teddy Roosevelt had a bully time at the pageantry of Edward VII's funeral. Wilson was nominated at Baltimore. The archduke and his wife were assassinated at Sarajevo.

Calendar - wise, the 15 years which unroll stirringly in this book belong in the 20th Century, but in reality they are 19th Century and indeed write finis to our past. In Lord's words, the years are not only good, they are confident, buoyant, spirited. This is their warm, fond and understanding story. It is the bounteous recall of a wonderful time of innocence and youth. You'll dote on it.

Ordeal In South Korea

Remember Pork Chop Hill, And Heart Break Ridge

Editor's note—Ten years ago on June 25, Communist forces struck in Korea and a bitter, frustrating struggle began. The ordeal was followed by a peace without victory, a peace without elation. In the following article, AP's chief of bureau in Tokyo—who helped cover much of the Korean War—recalls its anguish, horror, and heroism.

By JOHN RANDOLPH
Associated Press Staff Writer

Memories of death and destruction, bravery, misery and blood live in the mind forever. They haunt us like restless ghosts.

That's the way it is with the Korean War, a dirty, obscene—and glorious—war. It began one quiet Sunday morning when Communist tanks roared out of the North on June 25, 1950, and ripped across the 38th Parallel into the South.

For 31 of its 37 months, I was part of that war. I watched its agony and wonder.

Much has happened since then, in the world at large and in Korea where the government of President Syngman Rhee, who had long led his nation in war and peace, was overthrown recently by a popular uprising. But 10 years after, the sights and sounds and feelings of the Korean War still come flooding back.

My first vivid recollection was in Tokyo, in December, 1950, when I was sent to interview the human wreckage of the 10th Corps in Tokyo General Hospital. There was a man whose hands and feet had frozen while he lay wounded beside the Chosin Reservoir. They were as black as four pieces of soft coal. He was full of penicillin and floating in a morphine fog, but he could still talk. The doctors told me they probably would not have to amputate everything—some fingers and toes would be saved. I remember how a little Japanese nurse, in her white starched cap, gave him another injection while he told me, in a dull, faraway voice, how the Chinese Communists had climbed up on the stalled trucks and submachinegunned the American wounded trapped in the icy valleys. He had pretended death—and survived. But he did not look at his hands.

Then there are memories of the withdrawals, the villages burning in the night, the exhausted, beaten men. The short, stocky, Republic of Korea (ROK) soldiers retreating down the snowy road, their feet wrapped in bloody rags but carrying their weapons.

This was the time of the refugees.

They say that in January, 1951, there were two million Koreans on the roads fleeing from the Communists. All of these people had seen the Reds at firsthand in the first three months of the invasion. Their flight from the second wave in the middle of that bitter winter was the most eloquent damnation of communism the world saw until Hungary revolted. These people were not the politicians, the wealthy, or even the "kulaks." They were the little people. They were voting with their feet, and every step was pain.

There was the sick-faced American lieutenant who had just seen a young wife give birth to her baby in a ditch by the road, cut the cord with her teeth, strangle the fresh born child, leave it in the ditch and get up to march south with her other children.

There was the farm family pushing a heaped-up oxcart that tumbled over an embankment into a stream. There was no chance, no help, no time to pick up anything.

They stood there, five or six of them, looking at each other stupidly as realization sank in that they were alone in the middle of Korea, on the edge of no-man's-land, on that twilight winter road, with nothing but the clothes they wore.

There was the old couple walking down the railroad track at Pyongtaek with their daughter, her husband, their two small babies and a boy of about 6. Night was falling, and a wet snow was soaking their quilted cotton clothing. The old woman could walk no more. For her it was the end of the road, the final end, and she knew it. There was a short argument, but she rejected all help. Desperately, fiercely, she gestured them onward. They carried her to the shelter of a railroad shack beside the tracks and started walking south again. But after about 20 steps the old man shook his head, turned around, and walked back to die beside his wife when the deep cold came with midnight to freeze them to death in their wet clothes. The young couple looked at them for a moment with bowed heads, then silently turned and marched on with the children.

The the army pulled itself together and fought again in its bloody-named "Operation Killer." This was savage, swaying, fighting—stand where you are and die in your tracks.

The names of the battles were Wonju, Chipyong, and Hoengsong where the third Chinese Communist human-sea dashed against a modern army that was learning how to fight and didn't dare retreat because there was nothing more to retreat to.

At Chipyong, the 23rd Infantry with the French Battalion fought one of the finest regimental battles in the history of the American Army—probably the finest regimental action of the entire war.

Surrounded on a low ring of hills around Chipyong for three days—and 12 miles deep inside the Communist lines—the 23rd and the French gave more than they got and the French volunteers wrapped their heads in red French paratrooper scarves and gave the startled Chinese Communists a "mansei" charge of their own with bayonets.

One American infantry company, reduced to a second lieutenant and 19 men and driven off the ridge, pulled itself together and counterattacked until the artillery drove the Chinese Communists off the crestline.

After the battle, by actual count, 1,800 dead Communists covered the slopes around Chipyong—against less than 90 dead inside the perimeter.

The Eighth Army had become professional.

April and May saw the last great Chinese Communist human sea attacks—the biggest battles of the war. These were real actions—whole armies in motion, roaring tank columns and the thunder of an Allied artillery that at last had enough ammunition.

The 8th Army, and to some extent the green and much-slandered ROK army, had learned how to handle the human-sea.

Across the front in April and May the human-sea had been a failure, and the Communists were fighting only light delaying actions north of the 38th Parallel when Soviet Russia suggested an armistice late in June.

To create a mood for peace, we stopped our offensive, and the Communists dug in and brought up reserves. When the armistice still eluded us late in August, we started fighting again—and discovered a new war. The Communists now had seemingly unlimited mortars and artillery, their bunkers were 30 feet deep on selected ridgelines and every hill battle was a Verdun and a bloodbath.

Heartbreak Ridge was the prototype. AP named that one, too, for the Army would not let correspondents use the meter-heights of the hills—the normal military identification. Heartbreak lasted a full month, where earlier hills had usually taken one day or at the most three. It cost the still splendid 23rd Infantry and the French almost 10 times the price of Chipyong.

From then on until the last night of the war, these violent hill battles flared up and burned like volcanoes as either the Allies or the Communists decided to straighten the line here, or test something there.

These savage hill battles were fought without any hope of victory. No one believed in victory any more—that had been suffocated under the ooze of the Panmunjom armistice talks. These fights were often without any real purpose or even justification. Even worse, they were fought without any relation to the rest of the front that might have spread out and equalized the pain and suffering.

The film "Pork Chop Hill" (this was a GI name), shows a slice of the fighting of this period—how men could fight bravely because of their self-respect, their orders, and their duty, and not because it was worth anything, or because they hoped to win. Yet this ultimate courage was strained here and there as this unnatural war began to effect the 8th Army. As death and rotation eliminated the veterans, efficiency and leadership went down. There were a few (not many) cases of American infantry from good regiments throwing down their guns and running away from the horrors of these hill attacks. The Army tried to suppress these incidents, but they are true, and you can believe them. Americans can run, too.

Pork Chop Hill was horrible, but it was by no means the worst. That distinction belong to a combined battle called "Snipers Ridge and Triangle Hill" on our side, and "Samkyangryang" by the Communists. It was so awful that Peiping Radio was shocked into broadcasting a fairly accurate account of it that exaggerated our casualties only 100 per cent—which is not really bad reporting by an enemy in wartime.

This frightful battle was fought partly by the U.S. 7th Division, but mostly by the ROK Second Division and a regiment from the ROK 9th, which latter had just won its defense of White Horse Mountain (a true Korean name) and had proved how really well and hard the new ROK army could fight.

This new battle proved it again. For more than six weeks in October and November, 1952, the fighting seesawed on Sniper's Ridge and up and down the slopes of Triangle Hill. I covered all but the first two weeks of it.

By the end, as the rest of the front grew still, we had 18 battalions of artillery — almost 300 guns—concentrated on this little slice of front using up ammunition by the shipload. It was the heaviest American shooting since the battle against the Germans in Hurtgen Forest in 1945, and for the yardage, it was not much off World War I's all-time record.

Our guns shot two tull feet and God knows how many Chinese Communists right off the top of Triangle Hill, which is almost 2,000 feet high. But we still couldn't take it and hold it.

By the time this battle guttered out right where it had started the ROK infantry had lost 6,500 casualties and the 7th Division more than 3,000. This is almost 10,000 men, killed and wounded.

To get some idea of the intensity of this fighting compared to the earlier parts of the war, remember that Gen. MaCarthur's disaster across the front in North Korea in December, 1950, involved only 12,000 casualties to the entire U.S. 8th Army.

Sniper's Ridge and Triangle Hill were not 'across the front." This whole incredible battle was fought on a front less than 12 city blocks wide.

By this time the war had degenerated into a crude and shabby reproduction of the witless slaughter in France and Flanders in World War I.

Along the front during this period you could catch the authentic, sickly air of fatalism that pervades the novel "All Quiet on the Western Front." Only rotation seemed to keep the Army from sinking into a morass of defeatism. Many of the soldiers and some of the officers thought they were doomed, and some of them were.

And then one day the war came to an end.

Sharply at 9:45 p.m., July 27, 1953—with a safety factor of 15 minutes—our men fired their last salvo, yanked the breeches open and left them open. A great silence fell, and at 10 p.m. the fighting ended.

Kenya, Where Nature Put Wine, Man Vinegar

By SAUL PETT

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — We drove up toward the Equator, to the beautiful white highlands of Kenya, where nature put wine in the air and man added vinegar.

A mile and more above sea level, we drove in bright clean sunlight, in heady atmosphere, under a brilliant blue sky.

We climbed the hills and curved around deep green valleys bursting with banana and palm leaves, and we slowed down to let the baboons cross. We passed a sign saying, "Elephants, rhino and buffalo in forest. Please drive carefully." And a mile later, we passed a sign announcing an exclusive polo club.

We drove through native settlements, beehives of round huts walled with mud and sticks and roofed with dried grass. The driver said the Kikyuus hadn't clustered that way until the Emergency, the three years of Mau Mau atrocities against white and black.

We saw the northern horizon fill up with Mt. Kenya, visible only up to its massive haunches, hiding its 17,000-foot face behind a veil of clouds. We were eight miles south of the Equator but the air was cool, freshened by the winds off the mountain.

This was the heart of the highlands, the home of the proud white settler and citadel of the strongest opposition to the Africans' march toward self-rule and independence in Kenya. In this British colony, the black man outnumbers the white man 94 to 1.

We drove up to the 15,000-acre cattle rance of Group. Capt. Llewellyn R. Briggs, formerly of the Royal Air Force and a settler here since 1947.

A tall, dignified British gentleman, Briggs pulled a pipe from his bush jacket and quietly explained the position of the United party he leads. They want, he said, a "political standstill" until more Africans are educated, until Africans show they are capable of government with "tolerance, responsibility and integrity."

All this, he said, will take time but he didn't say how much. He pointed out that the six million Africans in Kenya have no professional class—only seven lawyers, one accountant, 23 doctors, no engineers, no surveyors, no dentists.

"And yet they want to control everything now. If they did, it would be economic disaster, capital would flow out, the civil service would disappear and, like the Congo, there would be a breakdown in law and order. Most European farmers would leave—in fact, many already are selling out at a loss rather than face a future where their land would be expropriated and they'd live under an African dictatorship."

Trailed by his boxers, Briggs showed us around his handsome cedar and stone house, which is surrounded by a thick, carefully clipped lawn, flower gardens and a tall hedge.

Briggs introduced us to his chic, attractive wife and she led us to the terrace where we met some of their friends sedately drinking gin.

And then quite suddenly on a sunny afternoon, the conversation turned without change of temper to guns. To increased racial tension, to talk of a possible revival of Mau Mau and the rise in native crime. The men discussed the relative merits of a .45 Colt and an Italian Beretta.

"We're carrying guns again, you know," Briggs explained. "I do under my jacket and my wife does in her purse. We've heard there have been Mau Mau oath-taking ceremonies again. Thus far there has been little actual violence except an occasional stoning of a white man's car."

Next, we visited the 500-acre farm of Jim Hughes, a wiry, tough extrovert of 63, who looks 43. Hughes is called an extremist but many people admit privately that he simply voices opinions they're too polite to express.

He made news early this year when the Kenya delegation returned from the London conference, where the British rocked the white settlers with a blueprint for Kenya's future. As a first step toward independence at an unspecified date, Africans were given a larger franchise, which would assume them a majority in the Legislature and several ministries.

Returning to Nairobi airport, Michael Blundell, leader of the Kenya moderates, ran into a one-man ambush. Hughes threw 30 50-cent pieces at him, shouting, "You bloody Judas, you sold us out!"

And on the lovely sunny day we saw him, Jim Hughes was still steaming.

He denounced "the bloody wind of change" in Africa, the British for yielding to it and to the "anticolonialism of America." He alternately referred to Africans as "bloody apes" and "illiterate baboons" but said his own boys were all right although he doesn't trust them because "If they'd kill their own fathers and mothers, why not their boss?"

Then: "Boy! Tea!"

And while a uniformed, barefooted African served, Hughes said, "I'd start a revolution if I could get 1,000 gutsy blokes together." But he didn't finish the thought. Instead, he said, he'd sell out if he could get a fair price and go to South Africa "and fight along side them there for the survival of the white race."

"I don't know whether there'll be violence when the Africans take over, but I'd welcome it. I'd shoot them down by the hundreds—not my farm boys but Tom Mboya and those other political frauds."

And his eyes burned and he said, "I tell you I can see the physical enemy. I can see his face and that one I'd like to kill."

On the way back to Nairobi, we rolled through the same lovely landscape but somehow the poetry was gone. Next day, we saw Tom Mboya, the young (30), coppery, black politician whom many think will be Kenya's first prime minister.

He was in his office at the new modern headquarters of the Kenya Federation of Labor, which he heads. Mboya wore a dark gray suit, white shirt, striped tie. He talked confidently but softly.

He referred to the white settlers as "immigrants" (the British started colonizing here only 60 years ago), and he said they have nothing to fear under a native government. He spoke of land reform, and said one man's acreage would be limited to a maximum and the land over that would be bought at a "fair price" and distributed among Africans.

This is a paramount issue, he said, because: "While the African may be simple-minded, he sees what he sees. He travels by bus or walks from his overcrowded reserve, where he owns nothing, and he sees the vast rich beautiful highlands fenced in by the white man. He sees they have so much and he has so little."

He agreed that African illiteracy and lack of training might be a problem in an independent government but said independence could not wait beyond early 1962, that white civil servants would be encouraged to stay, that the chaos of the Congo could be avoided because the transition in Kenya would not be overnight.

Between answering phone calls, Mboya denied there was a Mau Mau revival brewing and said he had always opposed the terror. But Mboya, like all other African politicians, is clamoring for the release of Jomo Kenyatta, the legendary leader whom the British imprisoned before the emergency as the organizer of the terror.

We left Tom Mboya's office and moved around the big modern city of Nairobi, where there seemed to be much less tension than upcountry. Some whites have left, others talk about it, but most seem to be staying.

"I don't think a black government actually will make much difference," said Mrs. Freddie Yowell, who runs a photography studio. "But I shall probably have to put in my window a row of black baby photographs instead of the white."

Guide To Good Reading

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Summer is certainly reading time and the people of Ouachita Parish are taking advantage of the excellent library facilities available to them. Each afternoon the reference rooms are crowded with students who are attending summer school and have reference work in connection with their studies. The vacation reading club with the theme "Fishing is Fun" is having excellent response all over the Parish. Each Wednesday Morning at 10:00 the Junior Charity League members hold story hours at the Monroe and West Monroe libraries. The Ouachita Parish Public Library is taking it's rightful place as a leader of the cultural life of the community.

No matter what other activities a library takes on, it's chief stock in trade is books and the Ouachita Parish Public Library book collection is growing every week. "The Stars in Their Courses" is the title of a new book by Harry Brown. It has a modern setting and will be widely read. A delightful family story is "The Lovely Ambition" by Mary Ellen Chase. It is the kind of book that everyone will enjoy and it is wonderful to find a book that shows a pleasant well ordered world. A new mystery story which will be eagerly received is "The Julge is Reversed", by Frances and Richard Lockridge.

In the field of non - fiction there are titles for everyone. "The Right to Learn" By Glenn McCracken is an interesting commentary on methods of teaching reading and what is wrong with them. Those who do handwork will want to see "Samplers and Stitches" by Grace Christie. It is a valuable book and has many excellent ideas. Many people in this community are interested in photography and will be happy to know that we have a new book called "Photography for Everyone" written by Fritz Henle and H. M. Kinzer. It is a beautiful and valuable book. The many chess players in the community will be interested in Irving Chernov's "Combinations the Heart of Chess."

Rudolf Flesch is a master of the art of speaking and writing effectively. His latest book is called "How to Write, Speak and Think More Effectively" and will be widely used. An interesting travel book with the location in China is "All the Emperor's Horses" by David Kidd. "Back to Bokhara" by Fitzroy MacLean is another exciting travel book about an out of the way country. Two very valuable books which will be most useful to students of Latin are "A Day in Old Rome" by W. S. Davis and "Roman life in the days of Cicero" by Alfred J. Church. Both of these books have been out of print for many years and we are happy to have them available now. A gay and delightful biography is "The Merry Monarch; the Life and Likeness of Charles II" written by Hesketh Pearson. Another excellent biography is that of Charles De Gaulle. It is called "The Man Who is France" and was written by Stanley Frederick Clark.

Year-Round Reading Set Summertime

THE SELF - STARTING WHEEL, by William Murray. Dutton. $3.75.

It began back in Rome where three Americans were getting an education, or at least an experience, on GI Bill money. Tim Haggard, the narrator, was with a friend Walter when Max appears, finagles an apartment for them, and then starts to make extra - miserable for them the life he had in a way made possible.

Max is a truth sayer, and in New York and on the Long Island beaches where the story unfolds, he tears away veils, strips off masks, slays all reticence and make-believe. This is the hectic exposure of phoneys on the mad fringe of the creative world — the wrist - slapping literary agent, for instance, and the insufferable successful inspirational - minister-author who dishes out pap, and the magazine editors so smart at developing best - selling features which have no character at all. There are occasional pointed laughs, like eating the record and playing the pizza, and the end comes zanily with the start of a swim for Portugal.

You'll recognize some of these people — I knew a fellow who set out to swim to Europe. But everybody writes about somebody, and the idea here is, who's crazier: The fraudulent evangelist, the man who'll never believe he can't sing, the agent so facilely successful, the Long Island Nietzche, or we who are fools enough to believe in them? It's the frilly summertime life, but good for year-round reading.

1. CATHY'S CLOWN, Everly Brothers
2. STUCK ON YOU, Elvis Presley
3. GOOD TIMIN', Jimmy Jones
4. NIGHT, Jackie Wilson
5. HE'LL HAVE TO STAY, Jeanne Black.
6. EVERYBODY'S SOMEBODY'S FOOL, Connie Francis
7. PAPER ROSES, Anita Bryant
8. BURNING BRIDGES, Jack Scott
9. SWINGIN' SCHOOL, Bobby Rydell
10. GREENFIELDS, Brothers Four

Kind Words For A Man Of Letters

Robert Frost: The Trial by Experience. By Elizabeth Shepley Sergeant. Holt, Rinehart and Winston. $6.

Some one asked Frost whether he regarded poetry as an escape, and Miss Sergeant remembers his reply: "No. Poetry is a way of taking life by the throat."

The question is an embarrassing recognition of the low esteem in which poetry is held by two many people. The denial of it, however, manly and courageous, has in effect been acted out by Frost in almost every hour of his 86 years, and it is the substance and story told feelingly in this book. Miss Sergeant calls Frost self-made. She specified his, and sometimes his family's, painful and wounding sacrifices for the holy cause of poetry. She says he arrived at crucial decisions by instinct, or in his words:

"I am the most unconscious thing. I never know where I am while things are going on." But afterward he could always sit down and write a poem about the road not taken, or the one less traveled by.

Born in San Francisco, he was 80 before he decided that his birth year was 1874 instead of 1875; he celebrated his 80th birthday in 1955, his 85th in 1959. His father died when he was 10, and he came back with his mother to Lawrence, Mass., a mill town. He got a poem in a school paper; fell in love with a fellow pupil Elinor White, made his first sale of a poem in 1894, married the girl in 1895. His prospects were incredibly slight. He studied at Harvard and Dartmouth briefly. His grandfather, dubious about his future, bought him a farm in Derry, N. H. He did a farmer's chores, but on his own schedule, milking for instance at noon and midnight, reading by kerosene lamp and sometimes writing. He taught nearby, and in Plymouth, N. H., then sold the farm and with the resulting $1,000, minus $120 steamer fare — the children went free — sailed for England.

How improvident could a man be, how impractical, unshrewd, lacking in Yankee smartness! All the copybook maxims condemn such a course — which nevertheless got him his first book publication in England ("North of Boston," 1914) and by Ezra Pound, 20 years after he decided to be a poet.

He has had a notable career as teacher at Michigan, Dartmouth, Harvard and above all Amherst; he holds more honorary degrees than he can count; he has been granted four Pulitzers; and it is absolutely inexcusable that this voice, one of the greatest, richest and warmest in American letters, has never yet received a Nobel prize — but he's very much alive and kicking and there's time yet.

Miss Sergeant stresses the tragic experiences, and the poet's serious side. She does not always evoke his wit, though she notes it, nor his wonderful genial warmth. But the incalculable worth is all here.

Decade And Half Of 'Buoyancy'

To be sure, there were calamity, disaster and tragedy: Boxer Rebellion, San Francisco earthquake, 1907 panic, evil and wicked child labor North and, even longer, South.

But just the same, Lord's phrase is both general and accurate, they were "good years." Even the Boxer Rebellion, enacted in costume, with decorum hardly ever ruffled though heads rolled, with almost as many heroes as there were besieged, with official blundering easy to understand and hard to condemn — even the Boxer business was a romantic, story book episode. The assassination at the Buffalo exposition by Leon Czolgosz ended a gentle, considerate, Christian life and career, but launched Teddy Roosevelt as spectacularly as it wrote off McKinley, and Lord heads his chapter with a vigorous outcry by party boss and senator, Mark Hanna:

Roosevelt the trust buster had his colorful run-ins with J. Pierpont Morgan who almost single - handed staunched the panic flood. And if child labor was appalling, its defenders are mercilessly publicized here and one of its most valiant foes is memoralized: Massachusetts' Mrs. Glendower Evans.

But those 15 years were predominantly pleasant. The millionaire rushed about in his special train. On your first $50,000 the tax collector took only 2 per cent — though you already used Form 1040. Cook claimed the discovery of the North Pole. There were the early experimental autos — in a California town the Cadillac agency was held by a 13-year-old boy, and a cop on a bike overtook a speeder. The Wright brothers found it almost as hard to interest the public in flying as actually to fly. Suffragettes rallied in Carnegie Hall. Teddy Roosevelt had a bully time at the pageantry of Edward VII's funeral. Wilson was nominated at Baltimore. The archduke and his wife were assassinated at Sarajevo.

Calendar - wise, the 15 years which unroll stirringly in this book belong in the 20th Century, but in reality they are 19th Century and indeed write finis to our past. In Lord's words, the years are not only good, they are confident, buoyant, spirited. This is their warm, fond and understanding story. It is the bounteous recall of a wonderful time of innocence and youth. You'll dote on it.

Los Angeles Dodgers Among Best In Sports

The Los Angeles Dodgers, by Paul Zimmerman (Coward - McCann): A story of how the baseball tree that grew in Brooklyn came to flourish to a world's championship on the West Coast. Oldtimers who remember the stories about the "Daffy Dodgers" of their Brooklyn days will be regaled with the ackzy Vance, Bobo Newsom, counts of Babe Herman, Daz-Casey Stengel. There's a game - by - game re-creation of both the playoff with Milwaukee and the World Series. And for the hero - worshippers there are chapters on manager Walt Alston, the top players and the "brass" of the club. Zimmerman, sports editor of the Los Angeles Times, devotes much of his book to recent history including the story of Chavez Ravine, the downtown canyon in which the Dodgers hope to build their $12 million baseball park, and the lengthy litigation which has held up that program. A worthy addition to the sports fan's library and for the casual baseball follower an enjoyable book.

IN THE FUTURE

Simple Table Type Altar May Come Into Wider Use

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The altar of the future may be a simple table located in the middle of the church.

The trend is moving that way in the opinion of Dr. Edward S. Frey, executive director of the department of church architecture of the United Lutheran Church of America.

"In the first five years of our department," says Frey, "we didn't see a single plan to indicate such a trend.

"But in the last three years we've seen about 15 out of a thousand, and two or three hundred of the others featured free-standing altars, that is, altars moved slightly away from the wall."

Pastor Frey, who notes the trend in Roman Catholic and Reformed as well as Lutheran churches, attributes the shifting altar to the liturgical revival of the past 30 years.

"It's designed to inspire a greater participation on the part of the people in the central act of worship—the Eucharist," he says.

"The early basilicas had altars at one end of the church but not against the wall. Often the clergymen stood behind the altar facing the people.

"It wasn't until medieval times that the concept developed of the congregation as spectators rather than participants. Then the altar started getting remote from the people."

"Perhaps, as of this moment," he adds, "more Roman Catholic than Protestant churches are moving the altar to the people."

Pastor Frey also detects a trend toward simplication of altars making them ministerial rather than mysterious or dramatic.

"The mysterious altars, the kind used in the Eastern churches, are so completely screened off from the people that you can see them only if you're sitting directly in front of the door leading to it.

"The dramatic altars, like the one in St. Peter's in Rome with its highlighting, canopy and gilt, grew out of the

IN THE FUTURE

Simple Table Type Altar May Come Into Wider Use

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The altar of the future may be a simple table located in the middle of the church.

The trend is moving that way in the opinion of Dr. Edward S. Frey, executive director of the department of church architecture of the United Lutheran Church of America.

"In the first five years of our department," says Frey, "we didn't see a single plan to indicate such a trend.

"But in the last three years we've seen about 15 out of a thousand, and two or three hundred of the others featured free-standing altars, that is, altars moved slightly away from the wall."

Pastor Frey, who notes the trend in Roman Catholic and Reformed as well as Lutheran churches, attributes the shifting altar to the liturgical revival of the past 30 years.

"It's designed to inspire a greater participation on the part of the people in the central act of worship—the Eucharist," he says.

Pastor Frey sees the trend toward central altars, not as a modern innovation, but as a return to the practices of the church in apostolic times.

"The early church," he says, "met together as an intimate group. Many of the oldest churches were octagonal or circular with the altar in the middle.

"The early basilicas had altars at one end of the church but not against the wall. Often the clergymen stood behind the altar facing the people.

"It wasn't until medieval times that the concept developed of the congregation as spectators rather than participants. Then the altar started getting remote from the people."

"Perhaps, as of this moment," he adds, "more Roman Catholic than Protestant churches are moving the altar to the people."

Pastor Frey also detects a trend toward simplication of altars making them ministerial rather than mysterious or dramatic.

"The mysterious altars, the kind used in the Eastern churches, are so completely screened off from the people that you can see them only if you're sitting directly in front of the door leading to it.

"The dramatic altars, like the one in St. Peter's in Rome with its highlighting, canopy and gilt, grew out of the ornateness of the Renaissance.

"The ministerial altars, which appear mostly in the Reformed churches, are little more than tables where people gather for the sacraments.

"Lately, altars have been emphasizing this table quality—closer and closer to the people."

ANSWERS SOUGHT

Religious Views Of Youth Change

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Johnny attended Sunday school faithfully from the time he was old enough to toddle until he graduated from high school. His parents were pleased that he was getting such fine religious training.

The other day Johnny came home from his freshman year at college. He shocked his mother and father by refusing to go to church with them. He said he just wasn't interested in that stuff any more.

Johnny's story is not uncommon. Thousands of boys and girls leave the church during their late teens and early twenties. Some return when they are older. Many never come back.

Why does it happen? What causes the great exodus of church members in the 16 to 24 age bracket?

SOUGHT

The Episcopalian, a magazine published by the Episcopal Church, sought answers from college chaplains, heads of secondary schools and others who are closely associated with young people.

They offered one comforting explanation, and several others that parents and pastors may find disturbing.

The comforting explanation is that Johnny inevitably goes through a period of adolescent rebellion in which he asserts his right to think for himself. His rejection of religon may therefore be a temporary gesture, intended to dramatize his independence of adult authority.

In this connection, it was pointed out that the positive affirmations of faith may seem, to a robust young person, less important than the restraints imposed by religion. Young people are eager to sample all of life's experiences, and a moral code gets in their way. When they are older they will be able to see why the moral code is necessary; right now it is just a nuisance.

OTHER REASON

But there are other reasons why Johnny leaves the church—reasons which cannot be written off as the by-products of a developmental phase.

A majority of the chaplains and educators said young people are not getting a sufficiently mature view of the Christian faith, during their years in Sunday school, to tide them through the period of doubt and questioning that begins late in high school or early in college.

NEVER READ BIBLE

"In spite of Sunday school," said the Rev. Clarence Lambelet, chaplain at Rutgers Uiversity, "most young people have never read the Bible, have no comprehension of basic doctrines on man

'Wild River' Opens Today At Paramount

"Wild River," Elia Kazan's explosive CinemaScope, De Luxe Color production for Twentieth Century-Fox of the clash between the proud people of Tennessee and a federal agent ordered to clear them from their ancestral homes to make way for the mighty TVA project, will have its local premiere today at the Paramount Theatre.

Starring beautiful Lee Remick, as a gentle country girl, and Montgomery Clift as the government agent assigned to move Jo Van Fleet, who is cast as Miss Remick's grandmother and the last holdout in the path of the dam, the Paul Osborne script, taken from a best selling novel by famed writer, William Bradford Huie, combines action and romance with a true story taken from one of the harshest cultural clashes in America's recent history.

LOCATION

The film was made entirely on location in Cleveland, Tennessee. That is producer-director Kazan's way of working . . . filming the story where it happened. He made a movie about stevedores and filmed it right on the New Jersey docks. The film was "On the Waterfront," awarded the Oscar for the Best Picture of its year. Marlon Brando, Eva Marie Saint, and director Kazan also received Oscars for this film.

"Wild River" star Montgomery Clift has never won an Oscar, but he has received more nominations for Best Actor of the Year than just about any male star in Hollywood. He has appeared in an amazing number of Hollywood's finest films. Among them are "The Search," "The Big Lift," "A Place in the Sun," "From Here to Eternity," and "The Young Lions."

Lee Remick was so good in her first movie that Jerry Wald did not hesitate to co-star her in her second film with such famous film figures as Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Anthony Franciosa and Orson Welles. Shortly after this film ("The Long, Hot Summer"), Miss Remick had the key role of the accused victim in "Anatomy of a Murder," co-starring with Jimmy Stewart. Kazan and Wald and dozens of others who should know, predict for her one of the brightest careers in filmdom.

TRIUMPHS

Broadway actress Jo Van Fleet has scored triumphs in Shakespeare's "Winter's Tale" and "King Lear;" she was superb in the Kazan directed production of Tennessee Williams' difficult "Camino Real." Her pictures include "I'll Cry Tomorrow," "Rose Tattoo," and Kazan's "East of Eden," for which she won an academy award for Best Supporting Actress.

Key roles in "Wild River" are filled by some of America's finest and most exciting character actors. Jay C. Flippen, James Westerfield, Frank Overton, Malcolm Atterbury, and Albert Salmi are probably unknown names. But their talent is unmistakable.

A superb cast, a taut and powerful script, exciting, graphic photography and the astute direction of Kazan are all welded together in an emotional torrent, the "Wild River."

'ST. FRANCIS'

Officials Seek 'Proper' Star

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Every producer and director has casting headaches these days but none like Plato Skouras and Mike Curtiz.

How do you find a male star to play St. Francis of Assisi?

Curtiz, the Hungarian-born director, says one of the biggest drawing stars in the business approached him about doing the part.

"Money didn't seem to be any object, but he wasn't right for the part," observed Curtiz. The star? Frank Sinatra.

That was Laurence Harvey, the British star.

INTERESTING

Mike says the role is the most interesting he has seen in 30 years of moviemaking.

"St. Francis was one of the greatest saints in history, but he was a playboy first. And we're presenting him as a man first and a saint later.

"Francis was a happy man with great wit. He suffered, but he laughed it off. He was not a solemn man.

Curtizis ready to give up on big stars. This week he is testing lesser-known and unknown actors.

WITH SOFT MUSIC

Dental Hospital Setup Luxurious

By RALPH DIGHTON

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A pretty receptionist takes your name and directs you to a room down the hall.

There you sink back into a luxurious, foam-cushioned contour couch and wait.

FIRST

This guy is a dentist and this is Southern California's first all-dental hospital, which opened last December.

Despite its plush furnishings, high speed air-driven drill's (virtually painless) and pleasant atmosphere, the hospital is not besieged by patients. The reasons are two:

1. Its fees are having a quieting effect on many a minor toothache.

2. An impressive number of dentists won't use it.

The minimum charge is $85, plus your dentist's fee. This entitles you to use of the operatory and a bed in a recovery room if you need it. If you need to stay overnight, you can sleep in a two-bed room for $50 or pay $60 for a private room with a patio.

You'll have your own TV and radio, an electrically adjustable bed and cheerfully luxurious decor. Any special care you need, or medicines, will be provided at no extra charge.

GOOD FOOD

"And the food is really good," says John Hay, president of the American Hospital Management Corp., which runs the place. "We have a dietitian for special cases, but most of the cooking is done by a caterer."

Of the 500 dentists who have applied for and been included in its staff, only 30 have brought patients to the hospital.

"Dentists have never had a hospital before," says one, "and we've equipped our offices to handle all but the most extreme cases. My patients won't pay the extra charge for hospital care when they can get adequate care, closer to home, in my office."

Another points out that to make the trip into the hospital worthwhile, he has to schedule a full day of cases there. This is hard to arrange, he says "because toothaches don't come on schedule."

VIEWS

Oral surgeons say there are not enough medical doctors available to handle emergencies such as heart stoppages and blood clots.

Hay counters that there is one M.D. anesthesiologist on duty at all times and a general practitioner on call 24 hours a day.

What does the hospital do with the 150 calls a week it gets from people who don't have their own dentist?

These have become the greatest source of revenue of the hospital to date. They are treated by dentists under contract in an out-patient clinic that operates seven days a week.

The success of the clinic has pointed the way to the hospital's future.

TOUGH START

NEW YORK (AP) — Arnold Portocarrero, big right hander with Baltimore, worked 24 exhibition innings this spring and gave up only one earned run. When he faced the Yankees in relief, two singles, a walk and a sacrifice fly netted a run in his first appearance of the American League season.

Barbara Warmly Greeted

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—Barbara Eisenhower got a warm reception on her sightseeing tour here Saturday.

She visited two temples, the headquarters of the Chinese Women's Anti-Aggression League, a nursery and a kindergarten.

Her one request—for a ride in a pedicab, a small two-wheeled vehicle drawn by a man—was vetoed tactfully by Mrs. Everett F. Drumright, wife of the U. S. ambassador here and a companion on Barabara's tour.

Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Nationalist Chinese leader, made a call on Barbara at the Grand Hotel. The meeting, although brief, was extremely cordial. It took place before Barbara had a Chinese lunch with President Eisenhower, her husband, Lt. Col. John Eisenhower, and members of the American community here.

Forks and knives are available, but Barbara chose chopsticks which she managed well after brief instruction.

Barbara, who had arrived in Taipei in a tweed suit, changed for lunch into a dress with a matching jacket of plum-colored flowered print on white.

After lunch she changed into a moss-green suit accented at the neck and on the side by large mother-of-pearl buttons. She wore a white bandeau.

Her first stop on her sightseeing tour was the largest Confucian temple in Taipei. Worshippers appeared delighted and excited to see her. After another unheralded appearance at a picturesque Buddhist temple, Barbara visited the Women's Anti-Aggression League in downtown Taipei.

"Oh, no!" exclaimed Barbara. The child was not hurt seriously and bravely kept back tears as she rubbed her head. Barbara patted her reassuringly and the girl smiled.

League women gave Barbara earrings and a brooch made of polished fishbone and inscribed with Chinese characters symbolizing good luck and happiness.

"How beautiful," exclaimed Barbara. "Thank you very, very much."

At the nursery she shook hands with the children and seemed reluctant to leave. She said she misses her own children.

Before starting the tour Barbara was measured for a cheongsam—the high slitted, form-fitting gowns Chinese women wear. Her husband said he found them "very fascinating."

Richard Conte Has Own Style For Drama Role

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Richard Conte doesn't concern himself with the well-known acting methods — he has his own.

"I've discovered that personality is based upon the dynamics of the individual and orientation to one's work is the key," Conte says. "Orientation is the source of energy and out of that comes the pleasure for work which is the secret of life.

"Orientation, energy and therefore pleasure. If you derive pleasure from it, it has to be good and you'll have the energy. I stress energy because it's in nature."

An actor can always make a role alive and interesting if he understands about orientation and energy, Conte believes.

His acting theory also considers motivation:

"A lot of people are under the delusion that money is happiness. This is not true. It's the orientation. It's doing your job the best way you know how and from that comes money."

Squabble Over Mafia Continues

By JAMES BACON
Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Is the Mafia myth or fact? Even some law enforcement officials are on opposite sides of this centuries-old controversy.

No national group, unless perhaps the American Indian, puts more pressure on moviemakers than Americans of Italian descent, most of whom object to the way the movies and TV portray Italians.

The Italian League Against Discrimination contends, via Flavius N. Costerella, assistant attorney general of the state of New York, that there is no so-called Italian criminal any more than there is any other ethnic group criminal.

BLAME

Martin Mooney, an Irishman who was a crime reporter before he became a Hollywood writer, blames it all on "that Mafia myth — the prevalent opinion that syndicated crime in the United States is controlled by the Mafia. This colossal lie was sold to the public via motion pictures and now television."

Daily Variety, the showbusiness tradepaper, quoted an official of the Pennsylvania Grand Council of the Sons of Italy as saying substitution of Mafia for Italian does nothing to lessen the stigma.

"By saying Mafia, they are saying crime is controlled by Italian Americans. This is a dastardly attack and it is not warranted."

Criticism has even come from within the industry. Sicilian born Frank Capra, president of the Screen Directors Guild, says there is "a ridiculous over - exposure of Italians as contemptible killers."

TARGET

Target for much of the Italian fury is Producer - Director Richard Wilson, no stranger to civic hot water. He, with Orson Welles, staged that famous 1938 broadcast that had many radio listeners believing that invaders from Mars had landed on the Eastern seaboard.

Last year Wilson directed Rod Steiger in the highly successful "Al Capone." Later this year, audiences will see "Pay or Die," a Mafia expose.

Like the Mars broadcast, both movies have a documentary realism that stirs up controversy. Both films also reflect extensive research.

"Does the Mafia exist?" asks Wilson. "Our movies have taken a positive stand that it does. Our research with congressional committees, the FBI, narcotics agents and police convinced us fully that the Mafia controls organized crime in this country — and is still a problem in Italy."

Wilson says he is prejudiced only in favor of Italians.

CONCEPT

"The concept of the Italian gangster has been so planted in the moviegoing mind that lazy writers and directors know they can save three pages of expository script by giving a vicious hoodlum an Italian name. There were just as vicious gangsters of other nationalities but Capone wiped out most of them.

"In our research for Capone, we found out that Dion O'Bannion, the Irish boss of Chicago's North Side was just as mean and contemptible as Capone except for one thing — he couldn't stomach Capone's trafficking in prostitution.

"Some cities, notably Cleveland and Detroit, had strong Jewish influences in the Prohibition mobs. You will find hoodlums of every nationality in every zone."

DIFFERENT

Wilson was the first to ever call Capone and his lieutenants by their right names. He's done the same with "Pay or Die," in which Ernest Borgnine plays Lt. Joe Petrosino, an authentic American police hero who was such a foe of the Mafia that he eventually was slain in Palermo, Sicily, reportedly in a Mafia plot.

"After 'Capone'," says Wilson, "I jumped at the chance to do a story on the Italian community's own fight against the Mafia. Our research showed us that the Mafia's first victims in this country were its own people. It's all a matter of police record."

Capone, as most Italians agree, is the real villain. One Italian moviemaker explains why:

"Americans worship success. Capone was the most ruthless, the most colorful, the meanest, the dirtiest, the craziest but also the most successful American hoodlum. He's the national shame that all Italians must suffer."

MANY VOICES

Bernardi is Lt. Jacoby in the "Peter Gunn" television series at $750 a week or thereabouts. But it's his sideline of supplying voices for commercials that really keeps the money flowing in.

"I could make more money if I'd forget about acting and do commercials full time," he says. He admits he'd be rich but completely anonymous.

AT THE JIM

'Sign Of Zorro' Due Wednesday

In "The Sign of Zorro," the Walt Disney Studios preserve to the hilt the prowess and fabulous character which Johnston McCulley wrote into his slashing novel three - generations - of - readers ago.

The romantic action drama will serve to rank the famous masked rider against evil doers of Spanish California securely among the all - time top fiction heroes of popular favor — the Robin Hoods, the Don Quixotes, the Monroe Cristos, the D'Artagnans and all that honorable company.

Guy Williams, well known American star, plays the Zorro role with the dash and fire and romantic fervor required of the character. But he also has the sincerity which gives the avenger a credible human appeal and the story of his escapades believability instead of the theatrical swashbuckling often associated with the classic latter - day hero.

With Britt Lomond as Williams' adversary and a company of brilliant talents in support, Co - Directors Norman Foster and Lewis R. Foster give "The Sign of Zorro" top entertainment quality in a blend of fun and fury addressed to adults as well as young audiences.

The story, in brief, tells the return of the young Don Diego from school in Spain to find his father and his neighbors in the ruthless power of the local commandant of constabulary. Aided by his man servant and astride his remarkable horse, Tornado, he sets out to thwart and finally to defeat the savage official and his cohorts, in a series of exciting escapades and thrilling encounters. Swordplay, feats of horsemanship, tricks of wit, gallantry and romantic interludes keep the action at top pitch and the clash of characters fascinating.

One thing this most stirring rider and fabulous swordsman does which too often is neglected in current tales of derring - do and the over - tolerant hero: it properly punishes the villain. And too, Zorro as he was originally written, is no stuffy, posturing paragon. He rides and fights simply for the protection of his helpless neighbors against savage tyranny of a military commandant along the old King's Highway.

Connecticut Demos Back Kennedy

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Connecticut Democrats voted Saturday to support Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts for the presidential nomination and rejected an effort for Adlai E. Stevenson.

The Connecticut Democratic Convention endorsed Kennedy and instructed the 42-member delegation, with half a vote each, to support him as a unit at the party's national convention in Los Angeles.

But before it did so, there was a brief floor fight in behalf of Stevenson.

An amendment to the Kennedy endorsement resolution was offered urging that Stevenson be supported for the nomination if it becomes apparent that Kennedy won't get it.

But the amendment was shouted down on a voice vote although it appeared to have substantial support.

The question was not Kennedy vs. Stevenson. It was whether the delegates should be committed to Stevenson in any way.

Later, Gov. Abraham Ribicoff sought to soften the blow for Stevenson supporters. In a speech, he praised Stevenson as a great American and said he knew Stevenson would have a major role in America's future.

Ribicoff, Rep. Chester Bowles and state party Chairman John M. Bailey have been major figures in Kennedy's national campaign.

Delegates renominated U. S. Rep. Frank Kowalski for Congressman at large and adopted a platform that virtually assured some sort of tax increase by the 1961 General Assembly to pay for more state aid to education.

'Wild River' Opens Today At Paramount

"Wild River," Elia Kazan's explosive CinemaScope, De Luxe Color production for Twentieth Century-Fox of the clash between the proud people of Tennessee and a federal agent ordered to clear them from their ancestral homes to make way for the mighty TVA project, will have its local premiere today at the Paramount Theatre.

Starring beautiful Lee Remick, as a gentle country girl, and Montgomery Clift as the government agent assigned to move Jo Van Fleet, who is cast as Miss Remick's grandmother and the last holdout in the path of the dam, the Paul Osborne script, taken from a best selling novel by famed writer, William Bradford Huie, combines action and romance with a true story taken from one of the harshest cultural clashes in America's recent history.

LOCATION

The film was made entirely on location in Cleveland, Tennesses. That is producer-director Kazan's way of working . . . filming the story where it happened. He made a movie about stevedores and filmed it right on the New Jersey docks. The film was "On the Waterfront," awarded the Oscar for the Best Picture of its year. Marlon Brando, Eva Marie Saint, and director Kazan also received Oscars for this film.

"Wild River" star Montgomery Clift has never won an Oscar, but he has received more nominations for Best Actor of the Year than just about any male star in Hollywood. He has appeared in an amazing number of Hollywood's finest films. Among them are "The Search," "The Big Lift," "A Place in the Sun," "From Here to Eternity," and "The Young Lions."

Lee Remick was so good in her first movie that Jerry Wald did not hesitate to co-star her in her second film with such famous film figures as Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Anthony Franciosa and Orson Welles. Shortly after this film ("The Long, Hot Summer"), Miss Remick had the key role of the assault victim in "Anatomy of a Murder," co-starring with Jimmy Stewart. Kazan and Wald and dozens of others who should know, predict for her one of the brightest careers in filmdom.

TRIUMPHS

Broadway actress Jo Van Fleet has scored triumphs in Shakespeare's "Winter's Tale" and "King Lear;" she was superb in the Kazan directed production of Tennessee Williams' difficult "Camino Real." Her pictures include "I'll Cry Tomorrow," "Rose Tatoo," and Kazan's "East of Eden," for which she won an academy award for Best Supporting Actress.

Key roles in "Wild River" are filled by some of America's finest and most exciting character actors. Jay C. Flippen, James Westerfield, Frank Overton, Malcolm Attabury, and Albert Salmi are probably unknown names. But their talent is unmistakable.

A superb cast, a taut and powerful script, exciting, graphic phogography and the astute direction of Kazan are all welded together in an emotional torrent, the "Wild River."

'ST. FRANCIS'

Officials Seek 'Proper' Star

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Every producer and director has casting headaches these days but none like Plato Skouras and Mike Curtiz.

How do you find a male star to play St. Francis of Assisi?

Curtiz, the Hungarian-born director, says one of the biggest drawing stars in the business approached him about doing the part.

"Money dien't seem to be any object, but he wasn't right for the part," observed Curtiz. The star? Frank Sinatra.

That was Laurence Harvey, the British star.

INTERESTING

Mike says the role is the most interesting he has seen in 30 years of moviemaking.

"St. Francis was one of the greatest saints in history, but he was a playboy first. And we're presenting him as a man first and a saint later.

"Francis was a happy man with great wit. He suffered, but he laughed it off. He was not a solemn man.

Curtizis ready to give up on big stars. This week he is testing lesser-known and unknown actors.

Richard Conte Has Own Style For Drama Role

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Richard Conte doesn't concern himself with the well-known acting methods — he has his own.

"I've discovered that personality is based upon the dynamics of the individual and orientation to one's work is the key," Conte says. "Orientation is the source of energy and out of that comes the pleasure for work which is the secret of life.

"Orientation, energy and therefore pleasure. If you derive pleasure from it, it has to be good and you'll have the energy. I stress energy because it's in nature."

An actor can always make a role alive and interesting if he understands about orientation and energy, Conte believes.

His acting theory also considers motivation:

"A lot of people are under the delusion that money is happiness. This is not true. It's the orientation. It's doing your job the best way you know how and from that comes money."

Squabble Over Mafia Continues

By JAMES BACON
Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Is the Mafia myth or fact? Even some law enforcement officials are on opposite sides of this centuries-old controversey.

No national group, unless perhaps the American Indian, puts more pressure on moviemakers than Americans of Italian descent, most of whom object to the way the movies and TV portray Italians.

The Italian League Against Discrimination contends, via Flavius N. Costerella, assistant attorney general of the state of New York, that there is no so-called Italian criminal any more than there is any other ethnic group criminal.

BLAME

Martin Mooney, an Irishman who was a crime reporter before he became a Hollywood writer, blames it all on "that Mafia myth — the prevalent opinion that syndicated crime in the United States is controlled by the Mafia. This colossal lie was sold to the public via motion pictures and now television."

Daily Variety, the showbusiness tradepaper, quoted an official of the Pennsylvania Grand Council of the Sons of Italy as saying substitution of Mafia for Italian does nothing to lessen the stigma.

"By saying Mafia, they are saying crime is controlled by Italian Americans. This is a dastardly attack and it is not warranted."

Criticism has even come from within the industry. Sicilian born Frank Capra, president of the Screen Directors Guild, says there is "a ridiculous over - exposure of Italians as contemptible killers."

TARGET

Target for much of the Italian fury is Producer - Director Richard Wilson, no stranger to civic hot water. He, with Orson Welles, staged that famous 1933 broadcast that had many radio listeners believing that invaders from Mars had landed on the Eastern seaboard.

Last year Wilson directed Rod Steiger in the highly successful "Al Capone." Later this year, audiences will see "Pay or Die," a Mafia expose.

Like the Mars broadcast, both movies have a documentary realism that stirs up controversy. Both films also reflect extensive research.

"Does the Mafia exist?" asks Wilson. "Our movies have taken a positive stand that it does. Our research with congressional committees, the FBI, narcotics agents and police convinced us fully that the Mafia controls organized crime in this country — and is still a problem in Italy."

Wlison says he is prejudiced only in favor of Italians.

CONCEPT

"The concept of the Italian gangster has been so planted in the moviegoing mind that lazy writers and directors know they can save three pages of expository script by giving a vicious hoodlum an Italian name. There were just as vicious gangsters of other nationalities but Capone wiped out most of them.

"In our research for Capone, we found out that Dion O'Bannion, the Irish boss of Chicago's North Side was just as mean and contemptible as Capone except for one thing — he couldn't stomach Capone's trafficking in prostitution.

"Some cities, notably Cleveland and Detroit, had strong Jewish influences in the Prohibition mobs. You will find hoodlums of every nationality in every gang."

DIFFERENT

Wilson was the first to ever call Capone and his lieutenants by their right names. He's done the same with "Pay or Die," in which Ernest Borgnine plays Lt. Joe Petrosino, an authentic American police hero who was such a foe of the Mafia that he eventually was slain in Palermo, Sicily, reportedly in a Mafia plot.

"After 'Capone'," says Wilson, "I jumped at the chance to do a story on the Italian community's own fight against the Mafia. Our research showed us that the Mafia's first victims in this country were its own people. It's all a matter of police record."

Capone, as most Italians agree, is the real villain. One Italian moviemaker explains why:

"Americans worship success. Capone was the most ruthless, the most colorful, the meanest, the dirtiest, the craziest but also the most successful American hoodlum. He's the national shame that all Italians must suffer."

MANY VOICES

Bernardi is Lt. Jacoby in the "Peter Gunn" television series at $750 a week or thereabouts. But it's his sideline of supplying voices for commercials that really keeps the money flowing in.

He's heard in varying pitches and dialects, extolling products from perfume to gasoline.

"I could make more money if I'd forget about acting and do commercials full time," he says. He admits he'd be rich but completely anonymous.

WITH SOFT MUSIC

Dental Hospital Setup Luxurious

By RALPH DIGHTON

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A pretty receptionist takes your name and directs you to a room down the hall.

There you sink back into a luxurious, foam-cushioned contour couch and wait.

FIRST

This guy is a dentist and this is Southern California's first all-dental hospital, which opened last December.

Despite its plush furnishings, high speed air-driven drills (virtually painless) and pleasant atmosphere, the hospital is not besieged by patients. The reasons are two

1. Its fees are having a quieting effect on many a minor toothache.

2. An impressive number of dentists won't use it.

The minimum charge is $35, plus your dentist's fee. This entitles you to use of the operatory and a bed in a recovery room if you need it. If you need to stay overnight, you can sleep in a two-bed room for $50 or pay $60 for a private room with a patio.

You'll have your own TV and radio, an electrically adjustable bed and cheerfully luxurious decor. Any special care you need, or medicines, will be provided at no extra charge.

GOOD FOOD

"And the food is really good," says John Hay, president of the American Hospital Management Corp., which runs the place. "We have a dietitian for special cases, but most of the cooking is done by a caterer."

Of the 500 dentists who have applied for and been included in its staff, only 80 have brought patients to the hospital.

"Dentists have never had a hospital before," says one, "and we've equipped our offices to handle all but the most extreme cases. My patients won't pay the extra charge for hospital care when they can get adequate care, closer to home, in my office."

Another points out that to make the trip into the hospital worthwhile, he has to schedule a full day of cases there. This is hard to arrange, he says "because toothaches don't come on schedule."

VIEWS

Oral surgeons say there are not enough medical doctors available to handle emergencies such as heart stoppages and blood clots.

Hay counters that there is one M.D. anesthesiologist on duty at all times and a general practitioner on call 24 hours a day.

What does the hospital do with the 150 calls a week it gets from people who don't have their own dentist?

These have become the greatest source of revenue of the hospital to date. They are treated by dentists under contract in an out-patient clinic that operates seven days a week.

The success of the clinic has pointed the way to the hospital's future.

TOUGH START

NEW YORK (AP) — Arnold Portocarrero, big right hander with Baltimore, worked 24 exhibition innings this spring and gave up only one earned run. When he faced the Yankees in relief, two singles, a walk and a sacrifice fly netted a run in his first appearance of the American League season.

Barbara Warmly Greeted

TAIEPI, Formosa (AP)—Barbara Eisenhower got a warm reception on her sightseeing tour here Saturday.

She visited two temples, the headquarters of the Chinse Women's Anti-Aggression League, a nursery and a kindergarten.

Her one request—for a ride in a predicab, a small two-wheeled vehicle drawn by a man—was vetoed tactfully by Mrs. Everett F. Drumright, wife of the U. S. ambassador here and a companion on Barabara's tour.

Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Nationalist Chinese leader, made a call on Barbara at the Grand Hotel. The meeting, although brief, was extremely cordial. It took place before Barbara had a Chinese lunch with President Eisenhower, her husband, Lt. Col. John Eisenhower, and members of the American community here.

Forks and knives are available, but Barbara chose chopsticks which she managed well after brief instruction.

Barbara, who had arrived in Taipei in a tweed suit, changed for lunch into a dress with a matching jacket of plum-colored flowered print on white.

After lunch she changed into a moss-green suit accented at the neck and on the side by large mother-of-pearl buttons. She wore a white bandeau.

Her first stop on her sightseeing tour was the largest Confucian temple in Taipei. Worshippers appeared delighted and excited to see her. After another unheralded appearance at a picturesque Buddhist temple, Barbara visited the Women's Anti-Aggression League in downtown Taipei.

"Oh, no!" exclaimed Barbara. The child was not hurt seriously and bravely kept back tears as she rubbed her head. Barbara patted her reassuringly and the girl smiled.

League women gave Barbara earrings and a brooch made of polished fishbone and inscribed with Chinese characters symbolizing good luck and happiness.

"How beautiful," exclaimed Barbara. "Thank you very, very much."

At the nursery she shook hands with the children and seemed reluctant to leave. She said she misses her own children.

Before starting the tour Barbara was measured for a cheongsam—the high slitted, form-fitting gowns Chinese women wear. Her husband said he found them "very fascinating."

AT THE JIM

'Sign Of Zorro' Due Wednesday

In "The Sign of Zorro," the Walt Disney Studios preserve to the hilt the prowess and fabulous character which Johnston McCulley wrote into his slashing novel three - generations - of - readers ago.

The romantic action drama will serve to rank the famous masked rider against evil doers of Spanish California securely among the all - time top fiction heroes of popular favor — the Robin Hoods, the Don Quixotes, the Monroe Cristos, the D'Artagnans and all that honorable company.

Guy Williams, well known American star, plays the Zorro role with the dash and fire and romantic fervor required of the character. But he also has the sincerity which gives the avenger a credible human appeal and the story of his escapades believability instead of the theatrical swashbuckling often associated with the classic latter - day hero.

With Britt Lomond as Williams' adversary and a company of brilliant talents in support, Co - Directors Norman Foster and Lewis R. Foster give "The Sign of Zorro" top entertainment quality in a blend of fun and fury addressed to adults as well as young audiences.

The story, in brief, tells the return of the young Don Diego from school in Spain to find his father and his neighbors in the ruthless power of the local commandant of constabulary. Aided by his man servant and astride his remarkable horse, Tornado, he sets out to thwart and finally to defeat the savage official and his cohorts, in a series of exciting escapades and thrilling encounters. Swordplay, feats of horsemanship, tricks of wit, gallantry and romantic interludes keep the action at top pitch and the clash of characters fascinating.

One thing this most stirring rider and fabulous swordsman does which too often is neglected in current tales of derring - do and the over - tolerant hero: it properly punishes the villain. And too, Zorro as he was originally written, is no stuffy, posturing paragon. He rides and fights simply for the protection of his helpless neighbors against savage tyranny of a military commandant along the old King's Highway.

"The Sign of Zorro" was produced by William H. Anderson.

Connecticut Demos Back Kennedy

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Connecticut Democrats voted Saturday to support Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts for the presidential nomination and rejected an effort for Adlai E. Stevenson.

The Connecticut Democratic Convention endorsed Kennedy and instructed the 42-member delegation, with half a vote each, to support him as a unit at the party's national convention in Los Angeles.

But before it did so, there was a brief floor fight in behalf of Stevenson.

An amendment to the Kennedy endorsement resolution was offered urging that Stevenson be supported for the nomination if it becomes apparent that Kennedy won't get it.

But the amendment was shouted down on a voice vote although it appeared to have substanital support.

The question was not Kennedy vs. Stevenson. It was whether the delegates should be committed to Stevenson in any way.

Later, Gov. Abraham Ribicoff sought to soften the blow for Stevenson supporters. In a speech, he praised Stevenson as a great American and said he knew Stevenson would have a major role in America's future.

Ribicoff, Rep. Chester Bowles and state party Chairman John M. Bailey have been major figures in Kennedy's national campaign.

Delegates renominated Rep. Frank Kowalski for congressman at large and adopted a platform that virtually assured some sort of tax increase by the 1961 General Assembly to pay for more state aid to education.

Bombers Cop 12-5 Verdict Over Chisox

CHICAGO (AP) —Mammoth home runs by Mickey Mantle, Roger Maris and Moose Skowron helped pound crash the Chicago White Sox 12-5 Saturday and powered the New York Yankees into the American League lead.

The triumph, coupled with Baltimore's 5-3 loss to Detroit, lifted the Yankees into first place, two percentage points ahead of the Orioles.

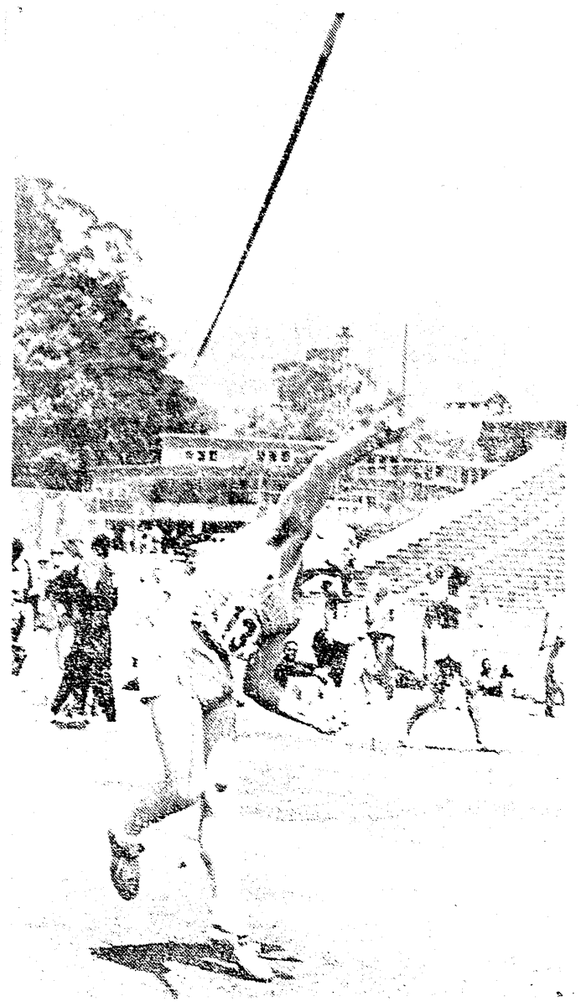
Ryne Gria, recalled from Richmond 10 days ago where he had a 7-2 record, was the winning pitcher. Gria took over for starter Bob Turley in the fourth inning and pitched hitless ball until the eighth inning when he yielded a two-run homer to Roy Sievers.

While Gria was limiting the Sox, the Yankees had their bats working. They scored three runs in the first with Berra singling home one and Skowron doubling home the other two. Berra singled home another in the third for a 4-0 lead.

The Sox scored three times in the third when Jim Rivera, subbing for Al Smith who was out with a cold, led off with a home run. However, the Sox were out of contention minutes later.

With two out and one on in the fourth, Mantle drove his 15th homer in to the centerfield bleachers. Maris, who scored two runs and had three hits, followed with his 16th homer, a blast into the right field upper deck. Skowron got in his big homer in the seventh.

Early Wynn, the first of five Sox pitchers suffered his sixth loss against four victories.



BILL ALLEY of Kansas lets fly with a record throw of the javelin at the NCAA Meet in Berkeley, Calif., yesterday. The toss was good for 248 feet, nine inches, eclipsing the old NCAA record of 237-5 ½ set by Jon Pyle of Purdue Lockwood in 1958. (AP Wirephoto)

Dobbek Hits 2 Homers As Nats Win, 7-2

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Dick Hyde coasted out of Kansas City pitching again Saturday night, hitting two home runs as the Washington Senators defeated the Athletics 7-2.

Dobbek drove in two runs in the Senators' 3-1 conquest of the A's Friday night.

Both his homers were off starting and losing pitcher Ken Johnson (2-5), who yielded seven hits and six of the Senators' runs, four of them unearned.

The winning pitcher was Hal Woodeshick (3-1), who held the A's to three hits through the first five innings but weakened in the sixth.

He yielded to Truman Clevenger with the bases loaded on a double and a pair of walks, and nobody out. Clevenger slammed the door except for a run that scored on an infield out. Chuck Stobbs took over in the eighth with two on and nobody out, and finished up.

Hogan Wilts On Final Two Holes

DENVER (AP) — Arnold Palmer came from seven strokes off the pace with a 6-under-par 65 fourth round Saturday and won the National Open golf title as Ben Hogan faltered on the final two holes in quest of his coveted and unprecedented fifth championship.

Never before in the 60-year history of the Open had a man made up more than five strokes in the final round. But Palmer flamed his way around the scared 7,004 yards of the Cherry Hills Country Club for a total of 280 that brought him the title to go with the Masters crown he won in April.

Palmer, who meets a challenge as an old friend, started the 36-hole windup eight strokes behind Mike Souchak and in a tie for 15th place. A 1-over-par 72 in the morning's third round gave no indication of the fireworks ahead.

After lunch he tore through the first nine of the final round in 30 strokes, tying the Open record. He tallied six birdies, two pars and a bogey. Coming home he stayed close to par as Ben murdered fairways and greens of the 35-35—70 Hogan aberrantly aired and dropped the chances of the others.

Hogan, grim and determined, was even with Palmer until the final two holes. There the Hawk became the victim of the two water hazards. On the 17th, he put his second into the mud near the moat. After knocking the ball on the green with still a chance for a par, he missed a 10-footer.

On the 18th, Hogan collapsed to a 3-over-par 7 when he drove into the lake and also encountered the rough and a trap before reaching the green.

Souchak, the leader through the first three rounds after setting a 36-hole championship record, skidded to 75 and a total of 283.

Palmer is the first man to win the Open with a subpar total since Hogan did it in 1953.

Jack Nicklaus, the amateur champion from Columbus, Ohio, grabbed second place with a final-round 71 for a 282 total. He knocked in an eagle 3 on the 537-yard fifth, which he reached with two irons and took over the temporary lead at the 63rd hole.

Then he began three-putting. Hammertoss position is the best of any amateur in the Open since Johnny Goodman won it in 1937. Nicklaus' score of 9 was the lowest ever for an amateur.

Six tied for third place at 286, including the veteran E. J. "Dutch" Harrison, who had a final round of 69. Also in the bracket was Souchak, the leader at the halfway mark by three strokes with a record 135. He ballooned to a 78 in the morning's round and then sliced to 75 on the final trip, missing an 18-inch putt on the final hole to complete his collapse.

Others tied for third were Dow Finsterwald, Jack Fleck, Jerry Barber and Ted Kroll, who finished with a 67.

Palmer's record 65 is the best score ever posted on the par-70 course set up by Gene Sarazen at Evanston, N.Y., in 1972.

Palmer started the final round when earned him $14,400 of the $40,000 prize pot, with four straight birdies. He drove the 346-yard first hole and sat down easily in two and on the second by chipped in from 50 feet 40 up for another birdie 3.

A bogey put on the third meant another birdie 3 and he got his fourth straight with a 40-footer on No. 4. After getting his par on the fifth he resumed his birdie spree on the sixth where he sank another 40-footer and he had only to tap in a 7-footer to get another on the 418-yard seventh.

His only birdie on the homeward nine was the 13th where a drive and a No. 4 iron put him on the green of the par 5 hole in two.

The new champion will represent the United States with Sam Snead in the Canada Cup matches near Dublin next weekend.

"But before I play there I am going to try and straighten out my game," he said. "Guess I'll have to write my own book on how to play golf."

Hogan's difficulties on the final two holes, where he was 4-over par, dropped him all the way to ninth place. His final round score was 75 and the mood on the 17th ended a string of 34 holes in which he had hit the green on all occasions.

In addition to Palmer's record of making up seven strokes in the final round, other scoring records also were yielded by this pretty meadowland course that nestles at the foothills of the Rockies. In his dash to the top on the last 18 Palmer vaulted over 14 rivals. Nicklaus' 282, the lowest score ever registered by an amateur beats the 285 by Marvin "Bud" Ward at Philadelphia in 1939.

Bill Casper, the defending champion, finished with a 72-72 and landed in a deadlock at 295 with Paul Harney and George Bayer, the siege gun of golf.

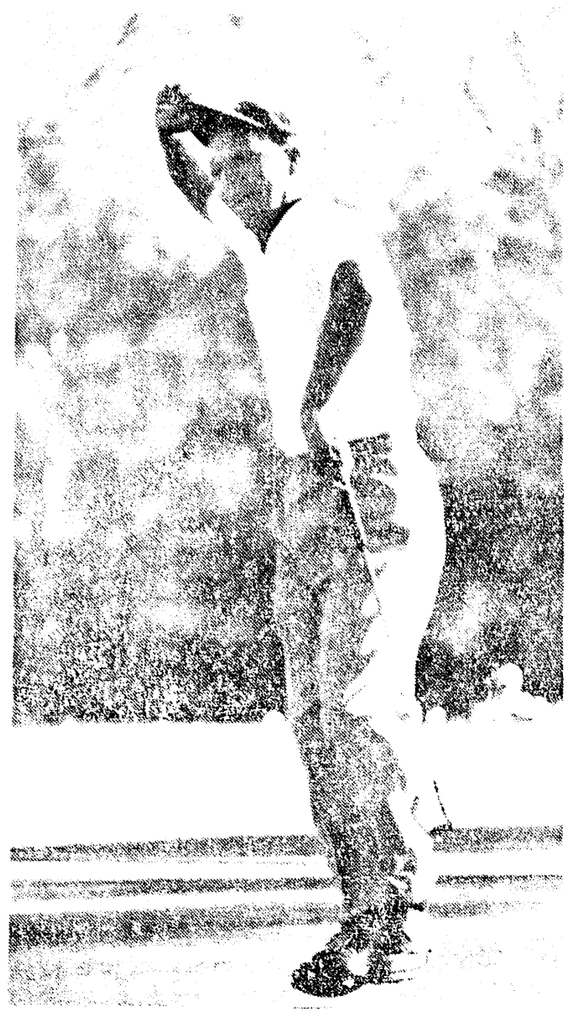
Just as difficulties beset Hogan in his try for the title he previously had won in 1948, 1950, 1951 and 1953, so fate again denied Sam Snead in his 20th try for his first Open crown.

Steaming along under par after 44 holes, Snead took a big seven on the par 4 ninth hole in the morning. His drive landed so close to a bush that he virtually sat on the shrubbery as he tried to pitch out. But he was too strong and the ball went across the fairway into the rough. Next he hit into a trap. Then he scuffed his explosion shot. He was on the green in five and used two putts.

It was a mammoth eight, when a five would have won the title, that cost Snead the 1939 Open crown and started the legend that he could not win the Open. He finished with 289, well down the list, after a final-round 75.

Souchak, who lowered the first 36-hole scoring mark to 135, quickly let the gallery of 15,258 know that this was no going to be his day.

He was scrambling from the start and on the last hole of the third round he gave up half of his four-stroke lead when an amateur camera addict snapped his shutter just as the burly ex-footballer was starting his swing on the tee. The ball went out of bounds and by the time he holed out he had used up six strokes that sent his score to 73.



HAPPY ARNOLD Palmer jumps and rips off his sunshades as he drops the final putt that gave him the National Open championship in Denver Saturday afternoon. Palmer shot a 65 on the final round to overcome a seven-stroke deficit. (AP Wirephoto)

Bucs Win On Hal Smith's Shot In 10th

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Hal Smith slammed a two-run homer in the ninth inning and drove in the winning run with a single in the 10th as Pittsburgh came from three runs behind and defeated Los Angeles 4-3 Saturday night before 63,699.

Los Angeles left-hander Danny McDevitt had a three-hitter going after eight innings and was leading 3-0 going into the ninth. He got two men out and had two strikes on Gino Cimoli when the Pirate outfielder singled. Smith followed with his fifth homer of the season and the Pirates tied it on subsequent singles by Don Hoak and pinch hitter Smokey Burgess.

Elroy Face, who shut the Dodgers out on one hit through the last two innings, picked up his fifth victory in eight decisions. Sherry took the loss, his fourth against five victories.

The Dodgers got their first two runs in the fifth. Maury Wills led off with a single and took second on a wild pitch. Jim Gilliam singled, and Wills scored on a sacrifice fly by Norm Larker. Gilliam came in when Duke Snider singled.

McDevitt opened with a single in the seventh and came in with the third run when Norm Larker singled to right center.

Dave Styron Captures 440, Don 2nd, 3rd

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) — Dave Styron, a sophomore Lamar quartermiler, set a meet and stadium record in winning the 440-dash with a 46.6 clocking in the Albuquerque Invitational Track and Field Meet here last night.

Styron's mate, Don Styron, was third in the backyard in intermediate hurdles with a 50.1 time and finished second to Olympic champion Lee Calhoun in the 120-yard high hurdles in 14.0.

Glenn Davis won the intermediate hurdles with 49.9 time, fastest of the year, and a new meet and stadium record. Dick Howard, 1959 NCAA hurdles champ, was second, also credited with the same time as Don Styron.

Calhoun's time in the high hurdles was 13.6.

Jerry Dross, for the Stroms star on Northeast Louisiana State's undefeated track team during the collegiate season, placed second in the hop, skip and jump with a 47-6 effort. Herman Stokes of the Striders was first with a 48-4 distance.

The Styron Aths ran on an unchanged mile relay team as Glenn Davis and Josh Culbreth that turned in a 3:06.9 time to win. Only one other team was entered and it did not finish the race.

Miss Randolph Takes Lead In Rockton Meet

ROCKTON, Ill. (AP) — Bonnie Randolph of Naples, Fla., toured the Cherrybrad Mackown golf course with a 4-under-par 68 Saturday to take the lead at the end of the second round in the $7,500 Cosmopolitan Women's Golf Tournament.

She had 35-33 to go with her opening round score of 70 for a 36-hole total of 138. Par for the course is 37-35—72. The 54-hole medal play tournament ends Sunday. First prize is $1,375.

Recite Scores Convincing Win

OCEANPORT, N.J. (AP) — Rockburn Farm's Recite returned to her favorite race track Saturday and scored a convincing two-length victory in the $23,100 Regret Handicap for fillies and mares at Monmouth Park.

The 6-5 favorite, Mommy Dear, finished fourth.

Hustled into contention immediately after the break by Larry Gilligan, Recite trailed Mrs. Helen by two lengths down the backstretch, then made her move around the turn. When Mrs. Helen swing a bit wide turning for home, Gilligan went through on the rail and pulled up on even turns with the leader.

After a brief duel, Recite got to the front, then pulled away to win in 1:10 4-5 for the 6 furlongs.

Reds Break Loss String, Beat Chicago

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds snapped out of a six-game losing streak Saturday by combining nine walks with a damaging error and a pair of home runs for a 7-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Young Jay Hook, winning his sixth game as against five defeats, had a shutout until two were out in the ninth when the Cubs scored on a single by Ernie Banks, a walk to Lee Bouchee and a single by George Altman.

Eddie Kasko and Ed Bailey were the home run hitters for the Reds, Bailey's coming with one on in the seventh.

Only two hits, both singles, figured in the scoring of the first four Cincinnati runs. One run was walked in and two scored on Ed Bouchee's error. Seth Morehead, the starting and losing Chicago hurler, issued six of the walks.

The Cub pitchers started being generous in the opening inning. Morehead walked Eddie Kasko and Vada Pinson to start things. Kasko went out on an attempted double steal but Wally Post singled Pinson home.

The fifth, the Reds got three runs on only one hit. The hit was a single by Kasko leading off. Morehead then walked Pinson again and reliever Don Cradwell walked Frank Robinson and Ed Bailey to force in a run and two others came across when Ed Bouchee fumbled Gus Bell's roller.

Kasko got his homer in the sixth with none on and Bailey's came after Roy McMillan had singled.

Bucs Win On Hal Smith's Shot In 10th

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Hal Smith slammed a two-run homer in the ninth inning and drove in the winning run with a single in the 10th as Pittsburgh came from three runs behind and defeated Los Angeles 4-3 Saturday night before 63,699.

Los Angeles left-hander Danny McDevitt had a three-hitter going after eight innings and was leading 3-0 going into the ninth. He got two men out and had two strikes on Gino Cimoli when the Pirate outfielder singled. Smith followed with his fifth homer of the season and the Pirates tied it on subsequent singles by Don Hoak and pinch hitter Smokey Burgess.

Elroy Face, who shut the Dodgers out on one hit through the last two innings, picked up his fifth victory in eight decisions. Sherry took the loss, his fourth against five victories.

The Dodgers got their first two runs in the fifth. Maury Wills led off with a single and took second on a wild pitch. Jim Gilliam singled, and Wills scored on a sacrifice fly by Norm Larker. Gilliam came in when Duke Snider singled.

McDevitt opened with a single in the seventh and came in with the third run when Norm Larker singled to right center.

Bombers Cop 12-5 Verdict Over Chisox

CHICAGO (AP) —Mammoth home runs by Mickey Mantle, Roger Maris and Moose Skowron helped helped crush the Chicago White Sox 12-5 Saturday and powered the New York Yankese into the American League lead.

The triumph, coupled with Baltimore's 5-3 loss to Detroit, lifted the Yankees into first place, two percentage points ahead of the Orioles.

Eli Grba, recalled from Richmond 10 days ago where he had a 7-2 record, was the winning pitcher. Grba took over for starter Bob Turley in the fourth inning and pitched hitless ball until the eighth inning when he yielded a two-run homer to Roy Sievers.

While Grba was taming the Sox, the Yankees had their bats working. They scored three runs in the first with Berra singling home one and Skowron doubling home the other two. Berra singled home another in the third for a 4-0 lead.

The Sox scored three times in the third when Jim Rivera, subbing for Al Smith who was out with a cold, led off with a home run. However, the Sox were out of contention minutes later.

With two out and one on in the fourth, Mantle drove his 14th homer in to the centerfield bullpen. Maris, who scored four runs and had three hits, followed with his 19th homer, a blast into the right field upper deck. Skowron hit his 8th homer in the seventh.

Dobbek Hits 2 Homers As Nats Win, 7-2

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Dan Dobbek teed off on Kansas City pitching again Saturday night, hitting two home runs as the Washington Senators defeated the Athletics 7-2.

Dobbek drove in two runs in the Senators' 3-1 conquest of the A's Friday night.

Both his homers were off starting and losing pitcher Ken Johnson (2-5), who yielded seven hits and six of the Senators' runs, four of them unearned.

The winning pitcher was Hal Woodeshick (3-1), who held the A's to three hits through the first five innings but weakened in the sixth.

He yielded to Truman Clevenger with the bases loaded on a double and a pair of walks, and nobody out. Clevenger slammed the door except for a run that scored on an infield out. Chuck Stobbs took over in the eighth with two on and nobody out, and finished up.

Vols Pound Out Win Over Sports

West Monroe's Vols, after punching across seven runs in a wild first inning, weathered a late rally by Monroe Saturday night to take a 10-9 La-Ark League victory and move into a tie for second place.

Three league games are on tap today, with West Monroe hosting league leading Ruston at Confederate Park, Monroe entertaining Bastrop at Legion Stadium and Dubach traveling to Sterlington. Both Twin Cities contests are slated to begin at 2:30.

Despite the total of 19 runs scored, both starting pitchers went the distance. Portsider Jackie Norman, almost ambushed by his teammates' six errors, recorded the victory. The slim lefthander walked seven and struck out six. Finishing up with a flourish, Norman struck out Carroll George, Vivian Pettit and "Snake" Thompson in the seventh inning to preserve the victory.

The win, West Monroe's fifth against five setbacks, lifted the Vols into a second place deadlock with Bastrop. Monroe, taking its knocks after winning the league title in 1959, dropped further in the cellar with a 3-6 mark.

West Monroe put together eight hits off Sports hurler Billy Joe Thomas in the first inning to plate seven big runs. James Mock singled in Mack Hunt with the first run and successive safeties by Tuffy Antley, George Fruge Norman, Hunt and Robert Perkins and an error opened the gate for the other six.

Monroe bounced back with a lone tally in the second on Fred Southerland's single, an error by Fruge in right field and Bob Betz' first of three hits. Two walks, an error and Southerland's two-run single drove in three more runs in the Monroe third.

But the Vols paraded eight men to the plate in a three-run third to ice the game away.

Monroe made a game of it, chipping away for single runs in the fourth and fifth and scoring three in the sixth before Norman pitched himself out of it.

Antley had a single and a triple and three runs batted in to score the win while Hunt had 3-5 and Mock contributed a pair of singles.

Betz, turning into a slugger after donning pitcher's toe plate, knocked in three runs for the Sports with three singles in four trips.

Miss Randolph Takes Lead In Rockton Meet

ROCKTON, Ill. (AP) — Bonnie Randolph of Naples, Fla., toured the 6,100-yard Macktown golf course with a 4-under-par 68 Saturday to take the lead at the end of the second round in the $7,500 Cosmopolitan Women's Golf Tournament.

She had 35-33 to go with her opening round score of 70 for a 36-hole total of 138. Par for the course is 37-35—72. The 54-hole medal play tournament ends Sunday. First prize is $1,313.

Recite Scores Convincing Win

OCEANPORT, N.J. (AP) — Rockburn Farm's Recite returned to her favorite race track Saturday and scored a convincing two-length victory in the $23,100 Regret Handicap for fillies and mares at Monmouth Park.

The 6-5 favorite, Mommy Dear, finished fourth.

Hustled into contention immediately after the break by Larry Gilligan, Recite trailed Mrs. Hellen by two lengths down the backstretch, then made her move around the turn. When Mrs. Hellen swing a bit wide turning for home, Gilligan went through on the rail and pulled up on even turns with the leader.

After a brief duel, Recite got to the front, then pulled away to win in 1:10 4-5 for the 6 furlongs.

Hogan Wilts On Final Two Holes

DENVER (AP) — Arnold Palmer came from seven strokes off the pace with a 6-under-par 65 fourth round Saturday and won the National Open golf title as Ben Hogan faltered on the final two holes in quest of his coveted and unprecedented fifth championship.

Never before in the 60-year history of the Open had a man made up more than five strokes in the final round. But Palmer flamed his way around the seared 7,004 yards of the Cherry Hills Country Club for a total of 280 that brought him the title to go with the Masters crown he won in April.

Palmer, who meets a challenge as an old friend, started the 36-hole windup eight strokes behind Mike Souchak and in a tie for 15th place. A 1-over-par 72 in the morning's third round gave no indication of the fireworks ahead.

After lunch he tore through the first nine of the final round in 30 strokes, tying the Open record. He tallied six birdies, two pars and a bogey. Coming home he stayed closer to par as the hardened fairways and greens of the 35-36—71 layout alternately lifted and dropped the chances of the others.

Hogan, grim and determined, was even with Palmer until the final two holes. There the Hawk became the victim of the two water hazards. On the 17th, he put his second into the mud near the moat. After knocking the ball on the green with still a chance for a par, he missed a 10-footer.

On the 18th, Hogan collapsed to a 3-over-par 7 when he drove into the lake and also encountered the rough and a trap before reaching the green.

Souchak, the leader through the first three rounds after setting a 36-hole championship record, skidded to 75 and a total of 283.

Palmer is the first man to win the Open with a subpar total since Hogan did it in 1953.

Jack Nicklaus, the amateur champion from Columbus, Ohio, grabbed second place with a final-round 71 for a 282 total. He knocked in an eagle 3 on the 538-yard fifth, which he reached with two irons and took over the temporary lead at the 63rd hole.

Then he began three-putting. His runner-up position is the best by an amateur in the Open since Johnny Goodman won it in 1933. Nicklaus' score of 2" was the lowest ever for an amateur.

Six tied for third place at 293 including the veteran E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, who had a final round of 69. Also in the bracket was Souchak, the leader at the halfway mark by three strokes with a record 135. He ballooned to a 73 in the morning's round and then skied to 75 on the final trip, missing an 18-inch putt on the final hole to complete his collapse.

Others tied for third were Dow Finsterwald, Jack Fleck, Julius Boros and Ted Kroll, who finished with a 67.

Palmer's closing 65 is the best ever and wiped out the previous low of 66 set by Gene Sarazen at Flushing, N.Y., in 1932.

Palmer started the final round, which earned him $14,400 of the $60,000 prize pot, with four straight birdies. He drove the 346-yard first hole and got down easily in two and on the second he chipped in from 90 feet away for another birdie 3.

A 30-foot putt on the third meant another birdie 3 and he got his fourth straight with a 40-footer on No. 4. After getting his par on the fifth he resumed his birdie spree on the sixth where he sank another 40-footer and he had only to tap in a 7-footer to get another on the 411-yard seventh.

His only birdie on the homeward nine was the 11th where a drive and a No. 4 iron put him on the green of the par 5 hole in two.

The new champion will represent the United States with Sam Snead in the Canada Cup matches near Dublin next weekend.

"But before I play there I am going to try and straighten out my game," he said. "Guess I'll read my own book on how to play golf."

Hogan's difficulties on the final two holes, where he was 4-over-par, dropped him all the way to ninth place. His final round score was 73 and the moat on the 17th ended a string of 34 holes in which he had hit the green on approaches.

In addition to Palmer's record of making up seven strokes in the final round, other scoring records also were yielded by this pretty meadow-land course that nestles at the foothills of the Rockies. In his dash to the top on the last 18, Palmer vaulted over 14 rivals. Nickalaus' 282, the lowest score ever registered by an amateur beats the 285 by Marvin (Bud) Ward at Philadelphia in 1939.

Bill Casper, the defending champion, finished with a 73-72 and landed in a deadlock at 286 with Paul Harney and George Bayer, the siege gun of golf.

Just as difficulties beset Hogan in his try for the title he previously had won in 1948, 1950, 1951 and 1953, so fate again denied Sam Snead in his 20th try for his first Open crown.

Steaming along under par after 44 holes, Snead took a big seven on the par 4 ninth hole in the morning. His drive landed so close to a bush that he virtually sat on the shrubbery as he tried to pitch out. But he was too strong and the ball went across the fairway into the rough. Next he hit into a trap. Then he scuffed his explosion shot. He was on the green in five and used two putts.

It was a mammoth eight, when a five would have won the title, that cost Snead the 1939 Open crown and started the legend that he could not win the Open. He finished with 289, well down the list, after a final-round 75.

Souchak, who lowered the first 36-hole scoring mark to 135, quickly let the gallery of 15,258 know that this was not going to be his day.

He was scrambling from the start and on the last hole of the third round he gave up half of his four-stroke lead when an amateur camera addict snapped his shutter just as the burly ex-footballer was starting his swing on the tee. The ball went out of bounds and by the time he holed out he had used up six strokes that sent his score to 73.

Dave Styron Captures 440, Don 2nd, 3rd

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP Special) — Dave Styron, a sprinter turned quartermiler, set a meet and stadium record in winning the 440-dash with a 46.6 clocking in the Albuquerque Invitational Track and Field Meet here last night.

Dave's twin, Don Styron, was third in the 400-yard intermediate hurdles with a 50.1 time and finished second to Olympic champion Lee Calhoun in the 120-yard high hurdles in 14.0.

Glenn Davis won the intermediate hurdles with 49.9 time, fastest of the year, and a new meet and stadium record. Dick Howard, 1959 NCAA hurdles champ, was second, being credited with the same time as Don Styron.

Calhoun's time in the high hurdles was 13.6.

Jerry Dyes, like the Styrons star on Northeast Louisiana State's unbeaten track team during the collegiate season, placed second in the hop-step-jump with a 47-6 effort. Herman Stokes of the Striders was first with a 48-9 distance.

The Styron twins ran on an unattached mile relay team with Glenn Davis and Josh Culberth that turned in a 3:09.9 time to win. Only one other team was entered and it did not finish the race.

Reds Break Loss String, Beat Chicago

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds snapped out of a six-game losing streak Saturday by combing nine walks with a damaging error and a pair of home runs for a 7-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Young Jay Hook, winning his sixth game as against five defeats had a shutout until two were out in the ninth when the Cubs scored on a single by Ernie Banks, a walk to Ed Bouchee and a single by George Altman.

Eddie Kasko and Ed Bailey were the home run hitters for the Reds, Bailey's coming with one on in the seventh.

Only two hits, both singles, figured in the scoring of the first four Cincinnati runs. One run was walked in and two scored on Ed Bouchee's error. Seth Morehead, the starting and losing Chicago hurler, issued six of the walks.

The Cub pitchers started being generous in the opening inning. Morehead walked Eddie Kasko and Vada Pinson to start things. Kasko went out on an attempted double steal but Wally Post singled Pinson home.

The fifth, the Reds got three runs on only one hit. The hit was a single by Kasko leading off. Morehead then walked Pinson again and reliever Don Cradwell walked Frank Robinson and Ed Bailey to force in a run and two others came across when Ed Bouchee fumbled Gus Bell's roller.

Kasko got his homer in the sixth with none on and Bailey's came after Roy McMillan had singled.

LOOKS 'EM OVER

Confederate Park

The weather-delayed dedication of West Monroe's new baseball park is ticketed for a new start Tuesday evening between games of a Rebel Boys League double header.

The City of West Monroe was supposed to have formally turned this baseball field—Confederate Park—over to the youth of the city last Monday, but rain delayed plans.

Now the program calls for Mayor Allan Norris to give his address of welcome at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening. Harold Hill, president of the recreation council, serving as master of ceremonies, will introduce John McCormick, president of the Rebel League. He will be followed by Hollie Pankey, president of Little Boys baseball in West Monroe; Cecil Pirkey, high school football coach who is also recreation director of the city; Dan McClure, coach of the American Legion Junior baseball club due to accept the new park as its home base; the West Monroe Volunteers of the La-Ark League, the six Rebel League clubs, and the 12 Little Boys teams with their managers, and the 125 T-shirted boys of the Little Boys' minor leagues—an amassed total of around 400 uniformed baseball players in the various leagues.

"We checked our schedules of all the leagues and decided to hold the dedication Tuesday since, with the exception of Little Boys, all others are idle then," McCormick said. "Little Boys are adjusting their schedule so they can play at their park and still participate in the dedication of this regulation diamond."

The dedication program will be between games of the Rebel League's regular program that matches Bennett and Piggly Wiggly at 5:30 p.m. and Brown-Rivers-Scogin with McGuire Realty at 8 o'clock.

Confederate Park is a big advancement in West Monroe recreation planning. The park, costing about $17,000 and to seat approximately 2,000 is located at Southside Playground. It's the city's first lighted park for white athletes. A lighted field for Negro teams already is in use off Lazarre Avenue. Another Negro field, unlighted, is maintained on Lee Street.

Some Golf Dope

The Natchitoches Women's Golf Association sponsors its first invitational tournament Thursday at the Natchitoches Country Club, beginning at 8 a.m. The meet is open to women golfers throughout the state. Reservations are being taken through Tuesday. Handicaps may be sent in with reservations. Entry fee is six dollars. Address reservations and handicaps to Mr. R. W. Daray, P. O. box 798, Natchitoches, La. There'll be four awards for each flight. Expect about seven flights.

Morehouse Country Club is preparing to host its 26th annual Kraft Paper Golf Tournament at Bastrop July 2, 3, and 4. For amateurs only, its a match-play event for flights with over $3,000 in prizes to be awarded, plus $400 cash for professionals participating in the pro-am section July 2. E. F. Madison is tournament chairman, and Douglas Eubanks is co-chairman. Club president is Joe Pate. The host pro is Leonard Warren.

Highland Park Country Club hopes to reactivate its Twin City Open Tournament that was allowed to lapse last year. The West Monroe club is seeking assurance of $3,000 in pledges before undertaking definite tournament steps. Highland hopes to date the meet for October.

Election Returns

W. E. "Frenchy" Marioneaux, Winnsboro; L. G. Prewett, Alexandria; and Bryle Ladd, New Orleans, have been elected to the national board of directors of Little Boys Baseball, Inc., joining J. W. McLemore Jr., Winnsboro, as Louisiana's representatives on the national body. McLemore is honored as a "life" member. D. L. "Chubby" Johnson, West Monroe, barely missed election. The four leaders in voting for the Louisiana posts were Prewett, 27 votes; Ladd, 22; Marioneaux, 21; Johnson, 20.

LSU Intramural

Over 1200 male students at Louisiana State University participated in organized intramural sports during the 1959-60 school year, Intramural Director Harry Taylor has announced.

With the program divided into three leagues, Fraternity, ROTC, and Campus, 11 different sports were available for student participation.

Seven-man touch football, offered in September and October, attracted over 800 participants. The three leagues had a combined total of 62 teams participating, encompassing 833 male students.

The largest participation was recorded in basketball where 65 teams in three leagues claimed 885 players. Softball had 62 teams and 826 participants.

Other sports offered included tennis (32 teams, 79 participants); ping pong (20 teams, 29 participants); volley ball (45 teams, 408 participants); track (14 teams, 70 participants); swimming (14 teams 104 participants); handball 25 teams; badminton (26 teams), and the annual charity bowl fraternity tackle football game which had 42 participants on the two teams.

Although the ROTC leagues had the largest number of teams entered, the Fraternity leagues attracted a greater percentage of participation among members.

In the three major sports on the program—football, basketball and softball—teams and numbers participating in the three leagues were: Fraternity, 51 teams, 9199 participants; ROTC, 90 teams., 1,050 participants, and Campus League, 48 teams, 575 participants.

Taylor said that he was pleased with student participation during the past school year and added that facilities and equipment are available to any student who wishes to participate.

Coaching Clinic

Hank Iba of Oklahoma State U., one of the nation's best known basketball coaches, will feature the McNeese State coaching clinic at Lake Charles, beginning at 9:30 o'clock Thursday morning. Basketball lectures will be held through the day.

Football lectures will follow Friday and Saturday with Mike Campbell, University of Texas end coach, and Buck Bradberry, Auburn backfield coach, as the guest professor of note. They'll be supported by Doug Hamley, head coach at LaGrange High of Lake Charles, and Les DeVall, McNeese head coach.

The clinic is free to all coaches.

10 RECORDS FALL

Kansas Keeps NCAA Title As Charley Tidwell Stars

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Paced by double winner Charlie Tidwell, Kansas retained its NCAA track and field title Saturday in a record-shattering meet that produced new standards in 10 of the 17 events.

The Jayhawkers piled up 50 points to 37 for the University of Southern California and 31 for third-place UCLA.

Meet records came in the shot-put, hammer throw, javelin, 1,500-meter run, 400-meter dash, 300-meter run, 3,000-meter steeplechase, high jump, 5,000-meter run and hop-step-and-jump, during the two-day assault in the University of California's Edwards Stadium.

A crowd of 13,750 watched the top collegiate stars vie not only for titles but also for places in the U.S. Olympic trials at Stanford, July 1-2. The top six American finishers in each event qualified.

The record-breakers were:

Dallas Long, USC, shot-put, 61 feet, 9 inches.

Bill Alley, Kansas, javelin throw 283 feet 9 inches.

Dyrol Burleson, Oregon, 1,500-meter run, 3 minutes 41.2 seconds.

Ted Woods, Colorado, 400-meter dash, 45.7 seconds.

Charlie Clark, San Jose State, 3,000-meter steeplechase, 9 minutes 2.1 seconds.

John Thomas, Boston University, high jump, 7 feet.

Al Lawrence, Houston, 5,000-meter run, 14:19.8.

Burleson, the Oregon sophomore and second American to run a mile in less than 4 minutes, beat his own NCAA record of 3:4.2 set in 1956 by Ireland's Ron Delany, a student at Villanova. Delany went on to win the Olympic title that year.

Tidwell equaled the meet record of 10.2 seconds in the 100-meter dash and won the 200 in :20.8. Paul Winder of Morgan State, who equaled the 100 mark of :10.2 in the semifinals, lost to the flying Kansan in the final.

Five athletes won titles for the second straight year, in addition to Tidwell in the 100 they were Alley, Lawlor, Kerr, and Dick Cochran of Missouri with a discuss throw of 183 feet 3½ inches.

Lawlor, a policeman from Dublin, Ireland and Kerr, of Jamaica, will compete for their native lands in the Olympics. Lawrence, the distance star, is an Australian.

Thomas, a Boston University sophomore, cleared 7 feet for the 28th time in his career but missed three attempts for a world record of 7-2. He dethroned defending champion Ernie Williams of San Jose who tied with USC's Charlie Dumas for third place at 6-6. Charlie Lewis of Grambling took second at 6-9.

Other winners were Ralph Boston, of Tennessee A&I, with a 25-10¾ foot broad jump; Jim Johnson, of UCLA and brother of decathlon star Rafer, with :40.0 in the 440-meter high hurdles; Cliff Cushman, Kansas, :50.8 for the 220-meter hurdles; J.D. Martin, of Oklahoma, pole vault, 14 feet 9 inches.

Finishing behind Kansas, USC and UCLA in the run for the team title were Oregon and Oregon State, 22 each; Boston, Houston, San Jose State and Stanford, 20; Illinois 18; Arizona and Grambling 16; Morgan State 15; Missouri and Oklahoma 14; California 13.

Clark's winning steeplechase time clipped 14.4 seconds off the old NCAA mark of 9:16.5 by Michigan State's Henry Kennedy in 1956.

Because this is an Olympic year, the races are over metric distances rather than in yards. So Woods gets a meet record for 400 meters with his :45.7, although in 1958 Glenn Davis of Ohio State posted a :45.7 for 440 yards, a slightly longer distance.

Allen's javelin throw bettered the mark he set Friday with 264-2 in the qualifying. Long's record came in the qualifying.

Lawlor beat his own 1959 record of 207-5. The 7-foot jump by Thomas eclipsed the 6-11¾ meet record set by USC's Ernie Shelton five years ago and Kerr's 1:46.4 in the 800 erased a 1:46.7 by Pittsburgh's Arnie Sowell in 1956.

Ann Johnstone Gains Semifinals

PARIS (AP)—Ann Casey Johnstone of Mason City, Iowa, entered the semifinals of the French International Women's Golf Tournament Saturday with a 5 and 4 victory over Mme. Philippe Eloy of France.

Mrs. Johnstone is the last American and last foreigner in the field.

Through a bye and a default, Mrs. Johnstone reached the quartertinals without playing a round. Before Saturday's match she hadn't played a game in three weeks.

"The layoff didn't help any, but I seem to be doing all right anyway," she said after the victory.

She was shot a steady even par game.

CHICAGO (AP) — Two defensive stalwarts, end Doug Atkins and tackle Earl Leggett, Saturday signed their 1960 contracts with the Chicago Bears of the National Football League.

Orioles Drop Into Second As Tigers Cop 5-3 Verdict

DETROIT (AP)—The Detroit Tigers dropped Baltimore out of the American League lead Saturday as Charlie Maxwell hammered a three-run home run for a 5-3 come-from-behind victory over the Orioles. The New York Yankees took over first place by two percentage points when they downed the Chicago White Sox 12-5.

SH SHR SHRD SHRD MM MM

The Tigers collected only five hits, but three of them were home runs.

Estrada walked the first two batters in the sixth and had a 2-0 count on Maxwell when Hoeft was summoned. Maxwell fouled off two bunt tries and worked the count to 3-2 before socking his 10th home run off the facing of the upper right field deck.

Ray Semproch hurled two-hit relief ball over the last four innings and got his third victory against no defeats.

Pete Burnside started for Detroit. He gave up Ron Hansen's seventh home run in the first inning and was bounced out in the fifth when he gave up two walks and two singles for two more Oriole runs.

Bob Bruck got the Tigers out of that jam but was lifted for a pinch hitter in the bottom half of the inning.

Hoeft, a long-time Tiger pitcher who recently rejoined Baltimore after a brief stint in the minors, was charged with his first loss.

Semproch was threatened in nearly every inning. Bonus baby Dave Nicholson tripled with one out in the sixth and Semproch yielded a pair of two-out walks in the seventh, but pitched his way out of trouble. Marv Breeding led off the ninth with a single, but was wiped out in a double play.

Al Kaline was on the Detroit bench for the second straight day. Now hitting only .228, Kaline has hit safely only once in 25 trips and Manager Jimmie Dykes said the young star would sit out both of Sunday's games.

Love, Burdick Roll Into Finals

BENTON, La. (AP) — Two Louisiana State University students, Sammy Love Jr. of Shreveport and Burt Burdick of Baton Rouge, rolled into the finals of the 41st Louisiana State amateur golf tournament at Palmetto Country Club here Saturday.

The two finalists, who had to win two matches apiece Saturday, will meet for te title over 36 holes Sunday.

Love, playing on his home course where he won the Palmetto invitational a year ago, eliminated Shreveport's John Bird Jr. 3 and 2 in a morning quarterfinal test, and then trimmed another fellow-townsman, Robert Blewett, 4 and 3, in the afternoon semifinals.

Burdick, playing steadily throughout, defeated New Orleans' John O'Connell, 2 up in the morning, and Shreveport's Robert Flagler, 5 and 4 in the afternoon.

Blewett, 19 years old, reached the afternoon semifinal round by bearing Lamar Loe of Tallulah 2 and 1 while Flagler, 17, defeated Baton Rouge's Ronnie Melancon, 3, 3 and 2.

Loe, at 26, was the oldest member of the eight quartertinalists.

The day's best golf, however, was played by Tommy Morrow of Shreveport, a former professional now back in the amateur ranks. Morrow carded a 33-33—66 six under par and just 3 over the course record, to pick up medalist honors for the state tournament.

Morrow, Flagler and Luca Barbato of Lafayette had tied for the medal in Wednesday's qualifying round. Barbato lost his claim in a playoff Thursday before Morrow's 66 beat out Flagler's 79 Saturday.

Summary:

Quarterfinals:

Bart Burdick, Baton Rouge, defeated John O'Connell, New Orleans, 2 up.

Robert Blewett, Shreveport, defeated Lamar Loe, Tallulah, 2 and 1.

Semifinals:

Burdick defeated Flagler, 5 and 4.

Love defeated Blewett, 4 and 3.

Tribe Nips Bosox On One-Hit Job

CLEVELAND (AP)— Pinchhitter Bob Hale broke an eighth inning tie with a bases-loaded sacrifice fly Saturday and the Cleveland Indians defeated the Boston Red Sox 2-1. The Red Sox got only one hit.

For seven innings Cleveland's Dick Stigman and Ike Delock of the Red Sox were in a pitchers duel. Stigman, lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh inning, yielded a second inning single to Ed Sadowski. He walked six and struck out five. Ted Bowsfield pitched the final two innings and picked up the victory against his former teammates.

Delock, replaced by Mike Fornieles in the eighth frame after he gave up a single to John Romano and a walk to Jim Piersall, was tagged with his second loss without a triumph. He surrendered seven hits and one walk, while striking out five.

With two runners on, Vic Power sacrificed the runners along and Fornieles purposely passed Tito Francona to load the bases. Hale batted for Woodie Held and lofted a fly ball to left field, deep enough to score the winning run, carried across by pinch runner Hank Foiles.

The Red Sox scored an unearned run in the opening inning without a hit Willie Tasby walked, Pete Runnels was safe on Harvey Kuenn's bobble and Ray Boone also walked. Then, with one out, Rip Repulski delivered a sacrifice fly to right field.

Cleveland tied the score 1-1 in the fifth on back-to-back doubles by Kuenn and Ken Aspromonte, the 13th straight game in which the latter has connected for a hit.

Bowsfield walked Bobby Thomson to start the Boston ninth, but then retired three straight—including pinch hitter Ted Williams on a third called strike. Williams was rested Saturday after his historic 500th home run won Friday night's game for the Red Sox.

Monroe Juniors Defeat Natchez In Exhibition

Monroe's American Legion nine rallied for three runs in the eighth inning to capture a 5-2 victory and then added another in the eighth inning to capture a 5-2 decision over Natchez, Miss., in an exhibition contest here Saturday night.

Monroe scored twice in the sixth to tie the game at 2-2 when Eddie Kincaid walked, Melvin Jordan was hit by the pitcher and the Natchez first baseman made an error.

Roberts of Natchez was the game's only batter to collect more than one hit, going 2-4.

White Sox Ink Joe Ginsberg

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox Saturday signed catcher Joe Ginsberg as a free agent and put catcher Dick Brown on option.

Ginsberg, 33, recently was released by the Baltimore Orioles. In 14 games with the Orioles this season, he batted 2.67. Ginsberg broke into the majors with the Detroit Tigers in 1948. His most active major league season was 1952 when he appeared in 113 games for Detroit. He had brief stints with Cleveland and Kansas City.

The White Sox optioned Brown to a triple A club to be designated later. Brown came to the Sox in a multiple deal with Cleveland last Dec. 6.

Braves Blank Cards, 5-0, As Burdette Wins

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Veteran Lew Burdette checked St. Louis on seven hits as the Milwaukee Braves blanked the Cardinals 5-0 Saturday to snap Larry Jackson's eight-game winning streak.

Burdette didn't allow a runner past second in posting his first shutout of the season. The fidgety right-hander struck out five and didn't walk a man while recording his seventh victory and fourth in a row.

Jackson, who hadn't been beaten since losing a decision in Milwaukee May 12, surrendered single runs in the second and fifth before leaving for a pinch hitter in the seventh. He was charged with his sixth setback. He has won nine.

LOOKS 'EM OVER

Confederate Park

The weather-delayed dedication of West Monroe's new baseball park is ticketed for a new start Tuesday evening between games of a Rebel Boys League double header.

The City of West Monroe was supposed to have formally turned this baseball field—Confederate Park—over to the youth of the city last Monday, but rain delayed plans.

Now the program calls for Mayor Allan Norris to give his address of welcome at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening. Harold Hill, president of the recreation council, serving as master of ceremonies, will introduce John McCormick, president of the Rebel League. He will be followed by Hollie Pankey, president of Little Boys baseball in West Monroe; Cecil Pirkey, high school football coach who is also recreation director of the city; Dan McClure, coach of the American Legion Junior baseball club due to accept the new park as its home base; the West Monroe Volunteers of the La-Ark League, the six Rebel League clubs, and the 12 Little Boys teams with their managers, and the 125 T-shirted boys of the Little Boys' minor leagues—an amassed total of around 400 uniformed baseball players in the various leagues.

"We checked our schedules of all the leagues and decided to hold the dedication Tuesday since, with the exception of Little Boys, all others are idle then," McCormick said. "Little Boys are adjusting their schedule so they can play at their park and still participate in the dedication of this regulation diamond."

The dedication program will be between games of the Rebel League's regular program that matches Bennett and Piggly Wiggly at 5:30 p.m. and Brown-Rivers-Scogin with McGuire Realty at 8 o'clock.

Confederate Park is a big advancement in West Monroe recreation planning. The park, costing about $17,000 and to seat approximately 2,000, is located at Southside Playground. It's the city's first lighted park for white athletes. A lighted field for Negro teams already is in use off Lazarre Avenue. Another Negro field, unlighted, is maintained on Lee Street.

Some Golf Dope

The Natchitoches Women's Golf Association sponsors its first invitational tournament Thursday at the Natchitoches Country Club, beginning at 8 a.m. The meet is open to women golfers throughout the state. Reservations are being taken through Tuesday. Handicaps may be sent in with reservations. Entry fee is six dollars. Address reservations and handicaps to Mr. R. W. Daray, P. O. box 798, Natchitoches, La. There'll be four awards for each flight. Expect about seven flights.

Morehouse Country Club is preparing to host its 26th annual Kraft Paper Golf Tournament at Bastrop July 2, 3, and 4. For amateurs only, its a match-play event for flights with over $3,000 in prizes to be awarded, plus $400 cash for professionals participating in the pro-am section July 2. E. F. Madison is tournament chairman, and Douglas Eubanks is co-chairman. Club president is Joe Pate. The host pro is Leonard Warren.

Highland Park Country Club hopes to reactivate its Twin City Open Tournament that was allowed to lapse last year. The West Monroe club is seeking assurance of $3,000 in pledges before undertaking definite tournament steps. Highland hopes to date the meet for October.

Election Returns

W. E. "Frenchy" Marioneaux, Winnsboro; L. G. Prewett, Alexandria; and Bryle Ladd, New Orleans, have been elected to the national board of directors of Little Boys Baseball, Inc., joining J. W. McLemore Jr., Winnsboro, as Louisiana's representatives on the national body. McLemore is honored as a "life" member. D. L. "Chubby" Johnson, West Monroe, barely missed election. The four leaders in voting for the Louisiana posts were Prewett, 27 votes; Ladd, 22; Marioneaux, 21; Johnson, 20.

LSU Intramural

Over 1200 male students at Louisiana State University participated in organized intramural sports during 1959-60 school year, Intramural Director Harry Taylor has announced.

With the program divided into three leagues, Fraternity, ROTC, and Campus, 11 different sports were available for student participation.

Seven-man touch football, offered in September and October, attracted over 800 participants. The three leagues had a combined total of 62 teams participating, encompassing 833 male students.

The largest participation was recorded in basketball where 65 teams in three leagues claimed 885 players. Softball had 62 teams and 826 participants.

Other sports offered included tennis (32 teams, 79 participants); ping pong (20 teams, 29 participants); volley ball (45 teams, 408 participants); track (14 teams, 70 participants); swimming (14 teams 104 participants); handball 25 teams; badminton (26 teams), and the annual charity bowl fraternity tackle football game which had 42 participants on the two teams.

Although the ROTC leagues had the largest number of teams entered, the Fraternity leagues attracted a greater percentage of participation among members.

In the three major sports on the program—football, basketball and softball—teams and numbers participating in the three leagues were: Fraternity, 51 teams, 9199 participants; ROTC, 90 teams., 1,050 participants, and Campus League, 48 teams, 575 participants.

Taylor said that he was pleased with student participation during the past school year and added that facilities and equipment are available to any student who wishes to participate.

Coaching Clinic

Hank Iba of Oklahoma State U., one of the nation's best known basketball coaches, will feature the McNeese State coaching clinic at Lake Charles, beginning at 9:30 o'clock Thursday morning. Basketball lectures will be held through the day.

Football lectures will follow Friday and Saturday with Mike Campbell, University of Texas end coach, and Buck Bradberry, Auburn backfield coach, as the guest professor of note. They'll be supported by Doug Hamley, head coach at LaGrange High of Lake Charles, and Les DeVall, McNeese head coach.

The clinic is free to all coaches.

10 RECORDS FALL

Kansas Keeps NCAA Title As Charley Tidwell Stars

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Paced by double winner Charlie Tidwell, Kansas retained its NCAA track and field title Saturday in a record-shattering meet that produced new standards in 10 of the 17 events.

The Jayhawkers piled up 50 points to 37 for the University of Southern California and 31 for third-place UCLA.

Meet records came in the shot-put, hammer throw, javelin, 1,500-meter run, 400-meter dash, 800-meter run, 3,000-meter steeplechase, high jump, 5,000-meter run and hop-step-and-jump, during the two-day assault in the University of California's Edwards Stadium.

A crowd of 13,750 watched the top collegiate stars vie not only for titles but also for places in the U.S. Olympic trials at Stanford, July 1-2. The top six American finishers in each event qualified.

The record-breakers were:

Dallas Long, USC, shotput, 61 feet, 9 inches.

Bill Alley, Kansas, javelin throw 268 feet 9 inches.

Dyrol Burleson, Oregon, 1,500-meter run, 3 minutes 44.2 seconds.

Ted Woods, Colorado, 400-meter dash, 45.7 seconds.

Charlie Clark, San Jose State, 3,000-meter steeplechase, 9 minutes 2.1 seconds.

John Thomas, Boston University, high jump, 7 feet.

Luther Hayes, UCS, hop - step-and-jump, 50 feet 11½ inches.

Al Lawrence, Houston, 5,000-meter run, 14:19.8.

Burleson, the Bregon sophomore and second American to run a mile in less than 4 minutes, beat the metric mile record of 3:44.3 set in 1956 by Ireland's Ron Delany, a student at Villanova. Delany went on to win the Olympic title that year.

Tidwell equaled the meet record of 10.2 seconds in the 100-meter dash and won the 200 in :20.8. Paul Winder of Morgan State, who equaled the 100 mark of :10.2 in the semifinals, lost to the flying Kansan in the final.

Five athletes won titles for the second straight year. In addition to Tidwell in the 100 they were Bill Alley, Lawlor, Kerr, and Dick Cochran of Missouri with a discuss throw of 188 feet 3½ inches.

Lawlor, a policeman from Dublin, Ireland and Kerr, of Jamaica, will compete for their native lands in the Olympics. Lawrence, the distance star, is an Australian.

Thomas, a Boston University sophomore, cleared 7 feet for the 28th time in his career but missed three attempts for a world record of 7-2. He dethroned defending champion Errol Williams of San Jose who tied with USC's Charlie Dumas for third place at 6-8. Charlie Lewis of Grambling took second at 6-9.

Other winners were Ralph Boston, of Tennessee A&I, with a 25-foot 5¾ inch broad jump; Jim Johnson, of UCLA and brother of decathlon star Rafer, with :40.0 in the 110-meter high hurdles; Cliff Cushman, Kansas, :50.8 for the 400-meter hurdles; J.D. Martin, of Oklahoma, pole vault, 14 feet 9 inches.

Finishing behind Kansas, USC and UCLA in the run for the team title were Oregon and Oregon State, 22 each; Boston, Houston, San Jose State and Stanford, 20; Illinois 18; Arizona and Grambling 16; Morgan State 15; Missouri and Oklahoma 14; California 13.

Clark's winning steeplechase time clipped 14.4 seconds off the old NCAA mark of 9:16.5 by Michigan State's Henry Kennedy in 1956.

Because this is an Olympic year, the races are over metric distances rather than in yards. So Woods gets a meet record for 400 meters with his :45.7, although in 1958 Glenn Davis of Ohio State posted a :45.7 for 440 yards, a slightly longer distance.

Allen's javelin throw bettered the mark he set Friday with 264-2 in the qualifying. Long's record came in the qualifying.

Lawlor beat his own 1959 record of 207-5. The 7-foot jump by Thomas eclipsed the 6-11¼ meet record set by USC's Ernie Shelton five years ago and Kerr's 1:46.4 in the 800 erased a 1:46.7 by Pittsburgh's Arnie Sowell in 1956.

Ann Johnstone Gains Semifinals

PARIS (AP)—Ann Casey Johnstone of Mason City, Iowa, entered the semifinals of the French International Women's Golf Tournament Saturday with a 5 and 4 victory over Mme. Philippe Eloy of France.

Mrs. Johnstone is the last American and last foreigner in the field.

Through a bye and a default, Mrs. Johnstone reached the quarterfinals without playing a round. Before Saturday's match she hadn't played a game in three weeks.

"The layoff didn't help any, but I seem to be doing all right anyway," she said after the victory.

She was shot a steady even par game.

Orioles Drop Into Second As Tigers Cop 5-3 Verdict

DETROIT (AP)—The Detroit Tigers dropped Baltimore out of the American League lead Saturday as Charlie Maxwell hammered a three-run home run for a 5-3 come-from-behind victory over the Orioles. The New York Yankees took over first place by two percentage points when they downed the Chicago White Sox 12-5.

SH SHR SHRD SHRD MM MM

The Tigers collected only five hits, but three of them were home runs.

Estrada walked the first two batters in the sixth and had a 2-0 count on Maxwell when Hoeft was summoned. Maxwell fouled off two bunt tries and worked the count to 3-2 before socking his 10th home run off the facing of the upper right field deck.

Ray Semproch hurled two-hit relief ball over the last four innings and got his third victory against no defeats.

Pete Burnside started for Detroit. He gave up Ron Hansen's seventh home run in the first inning and was bounced out in the fifth when he gave up two walks and two singles for two more Oriole runs.

Bob Bruck got the Tigers out of that jam but was lifted for a pinch hitter in the bottom half of the inning.

Hoeft, a long-time Tiger pitcher who recently rejoined Baltimore after a brief stint in the minors, was charged with his first loss.

Semproch was threatened in nearly every inning. Bonus baby Dave Nicholson tripled with one out in the sixth and Semproch yielded a pair of two-out walks in the seventh, but pitched his way out of trouble. Marv Breeding led off the ninth with a single, but was wiped out in a double play.

Al Kaline was on the Detroit bench for the second straight day. Now hitting only .228, Kaline has hit safely only once in 25 trips and Manager Jimmie Dykes said the young star would sit out both of Sunday's games.

Love, Burdick Roll Into Finals

BENTON, La. (AP) — Two Louisiana State University students, Sammy Love Jr. of Shreveport and Burt Burdick of Baton Rouge, rolled into the finals of the 41st Louisiana State amateur golf tournament at Palmetto Country Club here Saturday.

The two finalists, who had to win two matches apiece Saturday, will meet for te title over 36 holes Sunday.

Love, playing on his home course where he won the Palmetto invitational a year ago, eliminated Shreveport's John Bird Jr. 3 and 2 in a morning quarterfinal test, and then trimmed another fellow-townsman, Robert Blewett, 4 and 3, in the afternoon semifinals.

Burdick, playing steadily throughout, defeated New Orleans' John O'Connell, 2 up in the morning, and Shreveport's Robert Flagler, 5 and 4 in the afternoon.

Blewett, 19 years old, reached the afternoon semifinal round by beating Lamar Loe of Tallulah 2 and 1 while Flagler, 17, defeated Baton Rouge's Ronnie Melancon, 15, 3 and 2.

Loe, at 28, was the oldest member of the eight quarterfinalists.

The day's best golf, however, was played by Tommy Morrow of Shreveport, a former professional now back in the amateur ranks. Morrow carded a 33-33—66 six under par and just 3 over the course record, to pick up medalist honors for the state tournament.

Morrow, Flagler and Luca Barbato of Lafayette had tied for the medal in Wednesday's qualifying round. Barbato lost his claim in a playoff Thursday before Morrow's 66 beat out Flagler's 79 Saturday.

Summary:

Quarterfinals:

Burt Burdick, Baton Rouge, defeated John O'Connell, New Orleans, 2 up.

Robert Blewett, Shreveport, defeated Lamar Loe, Tallulah, 2 and 1.

Semifinals:

Burdick defeated Flagler, 5 and 4.

Love defeated Blewett, 4 and 3.

Morrow beat Monroe's Clayton Cole, 4 and 3, with his 66 in the championship consolation bracket.

Tribe Nips Bosox On One-Hit Job

CLEVELAND (AP)— Pinchhitter Bob Hale broke an eighth inning tie with a bases-loaded sacrifice fly Saturday and the Cleveland Indians defeated the Boston Red Sox 2-1. The Red Sox got only one hit.

For seven innings Cleveland's Dick Stigman and Ike Delock of the Red Sox were in a pitchers duel. Stigman, lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh inning, yielded a second inning single to Ed Sadowski. He walked six and struck out five. Ted Bowsfield pitched the final two innings and picked up the victory against his former teammates.

Delock, replaced by Mike Fornieles in the eighth frame after he gave up a single to John Romano and a walk to Jim Piersall, was tagged with his second loss without a triumph. He surrendered seven hits and one walk, while striking out five.

With two runners on, Vic Power sacrificed the runners along and Fornieles purposely passed Tito Francona to load the bases. Hale batted for Woodie Held and lofted a fly ball to left field, deep enough to score the winning run, carried across by pinch runner Hank Foiles.

The Red Sox scored an unearned run in the opening inning without a hit Willie Tasby walked. Pete Runnels was safe on Harvey Kuenn's bobble and Ray Boone also walked. Then, with one out, Rip Repulski delivered a sacrifice fly to right field.

Cleveland tied the score 1-1 in the fifth on back-to-back doubles by Kuenn and Ken Aspromonte, the 13th straight game in which the latter has connected for a hit.

Bowsfield walked Bobby Thomson to start the Boston ninth, but then retired three straight—including pinch hitter Ted Williams on a third called strike. Williams was rested Saturday after his historic 500th home run won Friday night's game for the Red Sox.

Monroe scored twice in the sixth to tie the game at 2-2 when Eddie Kincaid walked, Melvin Jordan was hit by the pitcher and the Natchez first baseman made an error.

Roberts of Natchez was the game's only batter to collect more than one hit, going 2-4.

White Sox Ink Joe Ginsberg

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox Saturday signed catcher Joe Ginsberg as a free agent and put catcher Dick Brown on option.

Ginsberg, 33, recently was released by the Baltimore Orioles. In 14 games with the Orioles this season, he batted 2.67. Ginsberg broke into the majors with the Detroit Tigers in 1948. His most active major league season was 1952 when he appeared in 113 games for Detroit. He had brief stints with Cleveland and Kansas City.

The White Sox optioned Brown to a triple A club to be designated later. Brown came to the Sox in a multiple deal with Cleveland last Dec. 6.

Braves Blank Cards, 5-0, As Burdette Wins

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Veteran Lew Burdette checked St. Louis on seven hits as the Milwaukee Braves blanked the Cardinals 5-0 Saturday to snap Larry Jackson's eight-game winning streak.

Burdette didn't allow a runner past second in posting his first shutout of the season. The fidgety right-hander struck out five and didn't walk a man while recording his seventh victory and fourth in a row.

Jackson, who hadn't been beaten since losing a decision in Milwaukee May 12, surrendered single runs in the second and fifth before leaving for a pinch hitter in the seventh. He was charged with his sixth setback. He has won nine.

26th Kraft Meet To Begin July 2

BASTROP, La. (Special) — The 26th Annual Kraft Golf Tournament will be held here starting Saturday, July 2nd and continuing through Monday July 4th, tournament Chairman E. F. Madison announced yesterday.

Outlining the tournament schedule, Madison said a big pro-amateur event, annually a part of the Kraft Tournament, will be held starting at 1 p.m. Saturday with two full days of tournament action slated Sunday and Monday.

Long considered one of the better amateur tourneys in the state, the Kraft Tournament counts Tommy Bolt, one-time U. S. Open champion, Freddie Haas, for years a top pro on the touring circuit, Bert Weaver, one of the "comers" on the pro circuit today and Butch Baird, another up-and-coming touring professional among its former winners.

Johnny Pott of Shreveport, currently performing well on the pro tour and Davis Love, another simonpure turned pro were participants in the Kraft Tourney before they cast their lot with the professionals.

Bill Jones and Pickie Touchstone of Monroe are two former winners. And Clyde and Roy Nash and Jackie Rivers are among several other Monroe amateurs who have played in the tourney in the past and performed well. Roy Nash ex-Louisiana amateur kingpin, was runner-up in the Kraft Tournament three years ago. A big group of Monroe golfers are expected to participate in the 26th renewal of the tournament.

Madison, reviewing some tournament activities, said over $5,000 in prizes for amateurs and $500 in cash for professionals has been lined up for the tournament this year.

"Play in the championship flight this year will be over 54 holes with golfers qualifying for the championship flight playing Saturday and adding two 18-hole rounds Sunday and Monday for a total of 54 holes over the medal-play distance," Chairman Madison said.

Madison said that flights other than the championship flight will be played match play over nine holes with the exception of the first flight where the matches will be over the 18-hole distance.

The Morehouse Country Club links, where the tourney is played, has recently planted a special type grass on the greens and host pro Leonard Warren said the course will be in excellent shape for the affair this year.

"We are just completing a remodeling in our club house, adding a complete air conditioning and remodeling the ballroom and other recreational facilities," Warren said today.

As part of tournament activities a large chicken barbecue will be held Sunday, July 3rd, with a dance and cocktail hour on the initial day of the tourney. Complete swimming facilities are available for tourney entries and their guests.

With over 200 invitations already out, over 300 entries are expected to be in Bastrop for tourney.

'TO INSPIRE TEAM'

Rigney Gets Ax; Sheehan Named Interim Manager

By ALAN CLINE
Associated Press Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The second-place Giants abruptly fired Manager Bill Rigney Saturday and turned over the job to baseball-wise Tom Sheehan, with a mandate to get the San Francisco club back into National League contention.

If the 66-year-old head of the Giant scouting system succeeds, club owner Horace Stoneham says as much as told him the job was his even into next season.

Rigney's sudden discharge came after the Giants, while only one game out of first, were trounced three times by the National League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

Earlier, Stoneham indicated the Sheehan appointment was an interim choice until a permanent manager could be found. Later Stoneham said,

"He'll go for four weeks, to the end of the season or maybe even next year—if he wants to and if the club responds to him."

Stoneham then qualified this by adding he and other Giant officials would do some talking about possible successors to Sheehan.

Sheehan, a jolly, 235-pound Irishman, told sports writers:

"I don't know if I can get the Giants moving, but I'll certainly try. I'm happy, naturally, to get the job, but I'm unhappy for Rigney. He is a good manager and my friend."

Sheehan's announced he was retaining Rigney's coaching staff of Salty Parker, Billy Posedel and Wes Westrum.

"It wasn't necessarily that Rigney wasn't managing well, but something had to be done," Stoneham told sports writers at a hurriedly-called news conference after a flurry of rumors of impending change.

The Giants returned from their last road trip in hot contention with the Pirates and were only one game behind Pittsburgh as the series opened.

Spotty pitching and failure to hit in the clutches contributed to the downfall.

The 41-year-old Rigney was given only a one-year contract for this season and was told to produce a winner, or else. The Giants had finished third the past two seasons in San Francisco after their transfer from New York's Polo Grounds.

Rigney took his dismissal with a shrug of the shoulders and almost a sign of relief. However, he said it came as a surprise.

Rigney said his team "played bad for several days and then worse for several more."

Speculation has been rife for several days over a possible manager change. Stoneham, in Phoenix, Friday, as much as said Rigney's firing was in the works. Rigney was in his fifth season as Giant manager.

The name of Philadelphia third baseman Al Dark, former Giant field captain, was mentioned prominently in speculation over who would permanently succeed Rigney.

Also under consideration, according to reports, were Eddie Stanky, former Giant second baseman and now a scout for St. Louis, and Bob Scheffing, Yankee coach who managed the Chicago Cubs last year.

Orlando Cepeda, 1958 Rookie of the Year who was moved from first base to his original station in Perfect Night's winning game against Philadelphia. Sheehan said he would be keep Cepeda, last year's batting star of the Giants, has been playing in Tacoma to make room for the sensational 1959 rookie, Willie McCovey.

Unfortunately, McCovey can't play only at first base and the infantry shift of Cepeda seemed the only answer. However, after rookie of the year honors with his heavy hitting, McCovey faded off with his bat this year and recently has been used mostly as a pinch hitter.

Sheehan, now 66, managed Minneapolis in the American Association from 1939 through 1947 but has never piloted a major league club. He took over the Giant management at Saturday's Giant game against the Phillies, but had to wear his street clothes for lack of a uniform.

Stoneham said Leo Durocher, onetime Giant manager; Frank (Lefty) O'Doul, former Giant batting star, and Hank Sauer, veteran Giant outfielder now working as a scout, were definitely not under consideration to replace Rigney.

The club owner added that he might reach out and select a man not now under contract.

Stoneham said the move was made "to get a spirit of inspiration."

He said he was concerned because the players were not hustling.

The Giant president said Bill had every capability as a big league manager and didn't know whether Rigney would want to stay in the organization.

Vice President Chub Feeney went down to the dressing room to tell Rigney he had had it. Asked if the club "got away from Rigney," Stoneham said, "That's a possibility."

Sheehan didn't know until this morning that he was taking over.

Stoneham said he would have liked to have taken more time but "we got pushed into this this morning by long distance phone calls." He did not elaborate.

"Things happened so fast," Rigney said, that he isn't sure what he will do now besides "get reacquainted with the family." He has three children.

Rigney, who was getting an estimated $40,000 a year as manager said he definitely has no desire to go into scouting or coaching.

Willie Mays, $85,000 center fielder, said he thought it would take him some time to get used to a new manager. He recalled it took a while for him to get used to Rigney when he replaced Leo Durocher in 1956.

"We make the mistakes and he gets blamed for them," said Mike McCormick, Giant ace 21-year-old left-hander. "I think it was a bum deal."

Shortstop Eddie Bressoud said he thought the change was unnecessary.

AVERAGE FAN NOW

Jerry Coleman Drafted Twice

By JIM KENSIL

NEW YORK (AP)—"Name four major league ballplayers called into the Marine Air Crops in 1952?" asked the ex-infielder.

"Well, let's see," replied the sports writer, "there was Ted Williams, and, eh, and Jerry Coleman, and..."

"You might as well give up," interrupted Jerry Coleman. "That's as far as you're going to get. You remember Ted Williams because he's Ted Williams. You remember me because I was a second baseman for the New York Yankees. The other guys were Bob Kennedy, the Cleveland outfielder, and Cincinnati outfielder Lloyd Merriman. They were good players, but there weren't on the Yankees. Merriman even went on to get four citations for his jet flying in Korea.

"I'd prefer that people remember I was hitting .405 after 11 games in that '52 season before I went into the Marines. But, no, I'm just the player that was drafted twice," Jerry added with a grin.

Now 33, Jerry was a Marine pilot in World War II, made the Yankees in 1949 and stayed with them, except for his Korean service, for nine years. He retired after the 1957 season. During his major league career the Yanks won eight pennants and six World Series.

Jerry is now a baseball broadcaster for the Columbia Broadcasting System on weekends and has a full-time job as a representative of a national shirt manufacturer.

"When I travel and meet people," Jerry says, "they remember those Yankee teams, then they remember I was the guy who played second base. And, really, that's the way I like it. I'm a fan now. I don't want to be an ex-ball player all my life, and I have no sympathy for those who do.

"Fellows like Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams and Stan Musial, those who were really great have a right to be ex-ballplayers, but the rest of us have to realize there is a lot more to life than baseball.

"Now, for the first time in 20 years, I know what it's like to be a fan. I see two games a week after I do the pre-game interview show for CBS each Saturday and Sunday, but what I really look forward to at the end of a week is a relaxing Friday night game on TV. I finally have that workingman's viewpoint on baseball."

Jerry vividly admits he'd love another big broadcasting job and has his position in promoting Sportswear as a hobby. Even at the age of 33 he'd have a shot at second baseman, especially for the Yankees.

"There's no question about it, baseball has done a lot for me. But I like to feel I didn't leave it all up to the game. I helped myself some, too, and I think all young ballplayers should realize this."

Does Jerry think a boy who wants to be a major leaguer can learn how from watching baseball on TV?

"He can learn a lot about the curve, the fast ball and the double-play, but he can't learn the intangibles. And, really, they count as much when you get to the majors. TV won't teach a kid how to hustle, it won't give him the desire to win or imbue him with team spirit.

"But a boy can learn a lot from watching good players. I learned how to make the most of the doubleplay by watching George Stirnweiss. On the other hand though, a kid has to be careful. Probably thousands of potentially good hurlers were ruined because they tried to copy DiMaggio's peculiar batting stance. Joe was a great hurler, but pity anybody that tries to be like him."

Rivera, Chico Venegas Meet In Main Event

Ruben Rivera, who slammed Chico Venegas over the head with a chair last week, is scheduled to use the same tactic Monday night when he meets the Mexican in S&B Arena's main event.

Rivera and Rod, despite the chair, battled to a draw last week in a rough bout. Venegas took the first fall and Rivera, with the help of the chair, captured the second.

Monday's match will have no time limit and the winner takes all. The boys battle two out of three falls.

A fast bout provides the semi-final entertainment. Bob Morrow and Ken Cooper, the good guys, square off against bad brothers Tony and Jessi Jiminez. This bout is scheduled for two out of three falls with an hour limit.

Most of Cooper's action here lately has come as a referee and Kenneth wants to get back to the safer side of the sport.

A 15 - minute prelim will open the three - bout card with Tony Jiminez and Cooper tangling. Tony and Ken had quite a few run-ins during Cooper's officiating stint.

MENTAL PATIENT

No Memories Of Career For Fox

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fox stopped Jake LaMotta in the fourth round of their bout at Madison Square Garden in 1947, and LaMotta fought before a Select committee that he had taken a dive on the promise of a shot for the championship.

What caused the mental collapse of the Philadelphia fighter was a problem for psychiatrists. Before going to the ring he told a friend the LaMotta fight was the cause of all his troubles.

Until then, he had believed himself to be a wicked puncher with an impressive string of knockouts. The rumors about the fight to the effect LaMotta had taken a dive brought confusion to his mind that he might not be as good as he had been led to believe.

He had been mentally sick very curiously in the early days of his career by his manager, Frank Blinkie Palermo. He had scored 42 consecutive knockouts under the Palermo banner, but when he met light heavyweight champion Gus Lesnevich Feb. 28, 1947, he was knocked out in the 9th round.

He came back and scored six more knockouts, but the next time he met Lesnevich, March 5, 1948, he was knocked out in the first round.

Why that might have been the beginning of the end of Fox's career was questioned by Dr. Edmund Bergler, psychiatrist, who said in February, 1946, Fox's manager then, Nate Bolkin, was permanently suspended in Pennsylvania and his purse held up after he had fallen down for the fifth count in the third round without suffering a solid punch. Fox was exonerated for any blame in the case.

The National Boxing Assn. took note of Fox's "kayo record in spite of him as an outstanding title contender, but Ed Pollock of the Philadelphia Bulletin, voiced the opinion of many fans when he wrote:

"Philadelphia fight fans are not misled by his Fox's brilliant record and the glowing NBA ratings and continue to look at Fox through a haze of skepticism.

"They are not sure he's the fighter the book makes him appear to be. There is good reason for such skepticism. Before fans generally knew what was going on Fox had compiled about a score of knockouts against as many unknowns there and elsewhere, but never at home."

The Lesnevich fights pricked the bubble, and the questionable LaMotta fight further added to Fox's uncertainty as to his own prowess.

Fox had earned over $100,000 when Palermo sold him to the late Hymie Caplan and Irving Greenberg for $5,000.

"I got him as far as I could," Palermo remarked. "I got him two shots at Lesnevich and he was knocked out twice. Nobody else could have done that. Besides, I hear Fox isn't satisfied with me as his manager."

Fox went a total of only 32 rounds in scoring his first 35 knockouts. The LaMotta fight was his 50th "knockout." That fight was sandwiched in between his two defeats by Lesnevich.

The deflated light heavyweight's fortunes went sharply downhill after the second Lesnevich fight. In his next fight he lost a surprise 10-round decision to Red Applegate. He then won a few fights against comparatively minor opponents, but in September 1948 he was kayoed by Agostinho Guedes of Allentown, Pa., in the sixth round at Allentown.

He then fought a draw with Red Lowry of New Bedford, Mass., and lost a split decision to the same man. Fox was hospitalized for a day after that fight, but released when it was determined he had not suffered a concussion.

Dick Wagner stopped Billy in February 1949 and repeated the performance the following month.

The fading Philadelphian then lost a decision to Vernon Williams, and after being stopped by Joe Blackwood in the fourth round of their bout in Akron in January 1950, he dropped from sight.

His whereabouts were unknown until the LaMotta admission at the Senate hearing this week brought him to the public mind.

It then was discovered he had been a ward of the Bowery, seeking food and shelter whereever he could. At various times he worked as a pinsetter and shoeshine boy at bowling alleys.

About a month ago he was admitted to the mental institution, with a doctor commenting: "He's a very sick boy. His memory is bad. He knows he has been here about a month, and that's all. LaMotta? I'm afraid he wouldn't know who that is."

He won 57 of 64 fights during his eight-year career, and earned more than a quarter of a million dollars. The money, his family, his home, his health—everything is gone now, even his memories.

Amber Morn Wins Bowling Green Event

NEW YORK (AP)—The Ken-Lore Farm's Amber Morn outlasted pace-setting Tudor Admiral at the head of the stretch on the Widener grass course Saturday at Belmont Park and won the $75,400 Bowling Green Handicap.

With Pete Anderson up, Amber Morn hit the finish a neck ahead of the fast-closing Dance from the Claiborne Farm. It was another neck back to John S. Knowle's North Pole II, winner of the Edgemere Handicap on the same turf course on opening day, June 4.

Thirteen grass specialists started in the third running of the Bowling Green. Amber Morn was clocked in 2:29 1-5 for the mile and one half. The time is recognized as a course record, this being the first time a race of that distance had been run over the new infield strip.

Tudor Admiral faded from second in the early stretch, and dropped back to wind up eighth. Mrs. J. R. Clark II's King O'Turi, the favorite, never got going and finished 11th.

Amber Morn carried 113 pounds and paid $34.20, $16.50 and $10.40 to his backers in the crowd of 34,137. Dance, carrying top weight of 123 pounds with Larry Adams in the saddle, returned $10.60 and $7.40. North Pole II, with 117 pounds and Henry Moreno up, was $9.20 to show.

No Mistakes This Time Says Floyd

NEWTOWN, Conn. (AP) — Heavyweight challenger Floyd Patterson closed his training camp Saturday and issued a confident statement before preparing to leave for New York, where he will fight champion Ingemar Johansson for the world title Monday.

The ring, where Patterson has fought 19 bouts and ultimately for the crown lost, was dismantled Saturday. Patterson will remain here until Sunday morning and then travel by car to New York.

In a statement issued through the camp's publicity man, Patterson predicted he will become the first man ever to regain the heavyweight title after losing it.

"It will be a good fight," he said. "This is the one I've got to win and I am satisfied with my condition. Matters have worked out in my schedule. Even my weight is OK.

"All I can say is there will be no mistakes this time. There is no need to rehash last year's fight. It's this one that counts. You can say for me that I feel positive that when it is over I will have become the first man ever to regain the heavyweight crown.

"Also I may add that I am ready for any situation that may arise since the bell sounds for the opening round."

Fox stopped Jake LaMotta in the fourth round of their bout at Madison Square Garden in 1947, and LaMotta testified before a Senate committee that he had taken a dive on the promise of a fight for the championship.

What caused the mental deterioration of the Philadelphia fighter is problematical. Before going into a fog, he told a friend the LaMotta fight was the cause of all his troubles.

Until then, he had believed himself to be a wicked puncher with an impressive string of knockouts. The rumors after the fight to the effect LaMotta had taken a dive brought suspicion to his mind that he might not be as great as he had been led to believe.

He had been brought along very cautiously in the early days of his career by his manager, Frank (Blinkie) Palermo. He had scored 43 consecutive knockouts under the Palermo banner, but when he met light heavyweight champion Gus Lesnevich Feb. 23, 1947, he was knocked out in the 10th round.

He came back and scored six more knockouts, but the next time he met Lesnevich, March 5, 1948, he was kayoed in the first round.

Although there might have been suspicion of the legitimacy of some of his knockouts the only time one was officially questioned was in February 1946. Fox's opponent then, Nate Bolden, was permanently suspended in Pennsylvania and his purse held up after he had fallen down for the full count in the third round without suffering a solid punch. Fox was exonerated for any blame in the fiasco.

The National Boxing Assn. took note of Fox's kayo record in recognizing him as an outstanding title contender, but Ed Pollock of the Philadelphia Bulletin, voiced the opinion of many fans when he wrote:

"Philadelphia fight fans are not blinded by his (Fox's) brilliant record and the glowing NBA tribute and continue to look at Fox through a haze of skepticism.

"They are not sure he's the fighter the book makes him appear to be. There is good reason for such skepticism. Before fans generally knew what was going on Fox had compiled about a score of knockouts against as many unknowns there and elsewhere, but never at home."

The Lesnevich fights pricked the bubble, and the questionable LaMotta fight further added to Fox's uncertainty as to his own prowess.

Fox had earned over $100,000 when Palermo sold him to the late Hymie Caplan and Irving Greenberg for $5,000.

"I got him as far as I could," Palermo remarked. "I got him two shots at Lesnevich and he was knocked out twice. Nobody else could have done that. Besides, I hear Fox isn't satisfied with me as his manager."

Fox went a total of only 83 rounds in scoring his first 35 knockouts. The LaMotta fight was his 50th "knockout." That fight was sandwiched in between his two defeats by Lesnevich.

The deflated light heavyweight's fortunes went sharply downhill after the second Losnevich fight. In his next fight he lost a surprise 10-round deicision to Red Applegate. He then won a few fights against comparatively minor opponents, but in September 1948 he was kayoed by Agostinho Guedes of Allentown, Pa., in the sixth round at Allentown.

He then fought a draw with Red Lowry of New Bedford, Mass., and lost a split decision to the same man. Fox was hospitalized for a day after that fight, but released when it was determined he had not suffered a concussion.

Dick Wagner stopped Billy in February 1949 and repeated the performance the following month.

The fading Philadelphian then lost a decision to Vernon Williams, and after being stopped by Joe Blackwood in the fourth round of their bout in Akron in January 1950, he dropped from sight.

His whereabouts were unknown until the LaMotta admission at the Senate hearing this week brought him to the public mind.

It then was discovered he had been a ward of the Bowery, seeking food and shelter whereever he could. At various times he worked as a pinsetter and shoeshine boy at bowling alleys.

About a month ago he was admitted to the mental institution, with a doctor commenting: "He's a very sick boy. His memory is bad. He knows he has been here about a month, and that's all. LaMotta? I'm afraid he wouldn't know who that is."

He won 57 of 64 fights during his eight-year career, and earned more than a quarter of a million dollars. The money, his family, his home, his health—everything is gone now, even his memories.

Amber Morn Wins Bowling Green Event

NEW YORK (AP)—The Ken-Love Farm's Amber Morn caught pacesetting Tudor Admiral at the head of the stretch on the Widener grass course Saturday at Belmont Park and won the $59,400 Bowling Green Handicap.

With Pete Anderson up, Amber Morn hit the finish a neck ahead of the fast-closing Dunce from the Claiborne Farm. It was another neck back to John S. Kroese's North Pole II, winner of the Edgemere Handicap on the same turf course on opening day, June 1.

Thirteen grass specialists started in the third running of the Bowling Green. Amber Morn was clocked in 2:29 1-5 for the mile and one half. The time is recognized as a course record, this being the first time a race of that distance had been run over the new infield strip.

Tudor Admiral faded from second in the early stretch, and dropped back to wind up eighth. Mrs. J. R. Clark II's King O'Turf, the favorite, never got going and finished 11th.

Amber Morn carried 113 pounds and paid $34.30, $16.50 and $10.40 to his backers in the crowd of 34,137. Dunce, carrying top weight of 123 pounds with Larry Adams in the saddle, returned $10.60 and $7.40. North Pole II, with 117 pounds and Henry Moreno up, was $9.30 to show.

No Mistakes This Time Says Floyd

NEWTOWN, Conn. (AP) — Heavyweight challenger Floyd Patterson closed his training camp Saturday and issued a confident statement before preparing to leave for New York, where he will fight champion Ingemar Johansson for the world title Monday.

The ring, where Patterson has trained long and diligently for the return bout, was dismantled Saturday. Patterson will remain here until Sunday morning and then travel by car to New York.

In a statement issued through the camp publicity man, Patterson predicted he will become the first man ever to regain the heavyweight title after losing it.

"It will be a good fight," he said. "This is the one I've got to win and I am satisfied with my condition. Matters have worked out as per schedule. Even my weight is OK.

"All I can say is there will be no mistakes this time. There is no need to rehash last year's fight. It's this one that counts. You can say for me that I feel positive that when it is over I will have become the first man ever to regain the heavyweight crown.

"Also I may add that I am ready for any situation that may arise once the gong sounds for the opening round."

KOUFAX FANS 'EM

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the last four years the National League strikeout record has been tied or broken six times and each time Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers has been one of the pitchers involved. In 1959, Koufax had games in which he fanned 18, 16 and 13. The one-game record of 25 was set last Aug. 31 when Koufax fanned 18 and Giant pitcher struck out sev-

TO INSPIRE TEAM'

Rigney Gets Ax; Sheehan Named Interim Manager

By ALAN CLINE
Associated Press Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The second-place Giants abruptly fired Manager Bill Rigney Saturday and turned over the job to baseball-wise Tom Sheehan, with a mandate to get the San Francisco club back into National League contention.

If the 66-year-old head of the Giant scouting system succeeds, club owner Horace Stoneham as much as told him the job was his even into next season.

Rigney's sudden discharge came after the Giants, while only one game out of first, were trounced three times by the National League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

Earlier, Stoneham indicated the Sheehan appointment was an interim choice until a permanent manager could be found. Later Stoneham said:

"He'll go for four weeks, to the end of the season or maybe even next year—if he wants to and if the club responds to him."

Stoneham then qualified this by adding he and other Giant officials would do some talking about possible successors to Sheehan.

Sheehan, a jolly, 235-pound Irishman, told sports writers:

"I don't know if I can get the Giants moving, but I'll certainly try. I'm happy, naturally, to get the job, but I'm unhappy for Rigney. He is a good manager and my friend."

Sheehan's announced he was retainirg Rigney's coaching staff of Sally Parker, Billy Posedel and Wes Westrum.

"It wasn't necessarily that Rigney wasn't managing well, but something had to be done," Stoneham told sports writers at a hurriedly-called news conference after a flurry of rumors of impending change.

The Giants returned from their last road trip in hot contention with the Pirates and were only one game behind Pittsburgh as the series opened.

Spotty pitching and failure to hit in the clutches contributed to the downfall.

The 41-year-old Rigney was given only a one-year contract for this season and was told to produce a winner, or else. The Giants had finished third the past two seasons in San Francisco after their transfer from New York's Polo Grounds.

Rigney took his dismissal with a shrug of the shoulders and almost a sign of relief. However, he said it came as a surprise.

Rigney said his team "played bad for several days and then worse for several more."

Speculation has been rife for several days over a possible manager change. Stoneham, in Phoenix Friday, as much as said Rigney's firing was in the 'vorks. Rigney was in his fifth season as Giant manager.

The name of Philadelphia third baseman Al Dark, former Giant field captain, was mentioned prominently in speculation over who would permanently succeed Rigney.

Also under consideration, according to reports, were Eddie Stanky, former Giant second baseman and now a scout for St. Louis, and Bob Scheffing, Milwaukee Coach who managed the Chicago Cubs last year.

Orlando Cepeda, 1958 Rookie of the Year as Giant first baseman, was shifted back to his original station in Friday night's winning game against Philadelphia. Sheehan said he would be kept there. Cepeda, long ball hitting star of the Giants, has been playing in left field to make room for the sensational 1959 rookie, Willie McCovey.

Unfortunately, McCovey could play only at first base and the unhandy shift of Cepeda seemed the only answer. However, after rookie of the year honors with his heavy hitting, McCovey tailed off with his bat this year and recently has been used mostly as a pinch hitter.

Sheehan, now 66, managed Minneapolis in the American Assn. from 1939 through 1947 but has never piloted a major league club. He took over the Giant management at Saturday's Giant game against the Phillies, but had to wear his street clothes for lack of a uniform.

Stoneham said Leo Durocher, onetime Giant manager; Frank (Lefty) O'Doul, former Giant batting star, and Hank Sauer, veteran Giant outfielder now working as a scout, were definitely not under consideration to replace Rigney.

The club owner added that he might reach out and select a man not now under contract.

Stoneham said the move was made "to sort of inspire the team."

He said he was concerned because the players were out-hustled.

The Giant president said Bill had every capability to a big league manager and didn't know whether Rigney would want to stay in the organization.

Vice President Chub Feeney went down to the dressing room to tell Rigney he had had it. Asked if the club "got away from Rigney," Stoneham said, "That's a possibility."

Sheeham didn't know until this morning that he was taking over.

Stoneham said he would have liked to have taken more time but "we got pushed into this this morning by long distance phone calls." He did not elaborate.

"Things happened so fast," Rigney said, that he isn't sure what he will do now besides "get reacquainted with the family." He has three children.

Rigney, who was getting an estimated $40,000 a year as manager said he definitely has no desire to go into scouting or coaching.

Willie Mays, $85,000 center fielder, said he thought it would take him some time to get used to a new manager. He recalled it took a while for him to get used to Rigney when he replaced Leo Durocher in 1956.

"We make the mistakes and he gets blamed for them," said Mike McCormick, Giant ace 21-year-old left-hander. "I think it was a bum deal."

Shortstop Eddie Bressoud said he thought the change was unnecessary.

Jerry Coleman Drafted Twice

By JIM KENSIL

NEW YORK (AP)—"Name four major league ballplayers called into the Marine Air Crops in 1952?" asked the ex-infielder.

"Well, let's see," replied the sports writer, "there was Ted Williams, and, eh, and Jerry Coleman, and..."

"You might as well give up," interrupted Jerry Coleman. "That's as far as you're going to get. You remember Ted Williams because he's Ted Williams. You remembered me because I was a second baseman for the New York Yankees. The other guys were Bob Kennedy, the Cleveland outfielder, and Cincinnati outfielder Lloyd Merriman. They were good players, but there weren't on the Yankees. Merriman even went on to get four citations for his jet flying in Korea.

"I'd prefer that people remember I was hitting .405 after 11 games in that '52 season before I went into the Marines. But, no, I'm just the player that was drafted twice," Jerry added with a grin.

Now 35, Jerry was a Marine pilot in World War II, made the Yankees in 1949 and stayed with them, except for his Korean service, for nine years. He retired after the 1957 season. During his major league career the Yanks won eight pennants and six World Series.

Jerry is now a baseball broadcaster for the Columbia Broadcasting System on weekends and has a fulltime job as a representative of a national shirt manufacturer.

"When I travel and meet people," Jerry says, "they remember those Yankee teams, then they remember I was the guy who played second base. And, really, that's the way I like it. I'm a fan now. I don't want to be an ex-ballplayer all my life, and I have no sympathy for those who do.

"Fellows like Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams and Stan Musial, those who were really great have a right to be ex-ballplayers, but the rest of us have to realize there is a lot more to life than baseball.

"Now, for the first time in 20 years, I know what it's like to be a fan. I see two games a week after I do the pre-game interview show for CBS each Saturday and Sunday, but what I really look forward to at the end of a week is a relaxing Friday night game on TV. I finally have that working man's viewpoint on baseball."

Jerry freely admits he'd have neither his broadcasting job nor his position in promoting men's sportswear if it hadn't been for the fact he had been a major league second baseman, especally for the Yankees.

"There's no question about it, baseball has done a lot for me. But I like to feel I didn't leave it all up to the game. I helped myself some, too, and I think young ballplayers should realize this."

Does Jerry think a boy who wants to be a major leaguer can learn how from watching baseball on TV?

"He can learn a lot about the game, the hows and the dos and the don'ts, but he can't learn the intangibles. And, really, they count as much when you get to the majors. TV won't teach a kid how to hustle, it won't give him the desire to win or infuse him with team spirit.

"But a boy can learn a lot from watching good players. I learned how to make the pivot on the doubleplay by watching George Stirnweiss. On the other hand though, a kid has to be careful. Probably thousands of potentially good hitters were ruined because they tried to copy DiMaggio's peculiar batting stance. Joe was a great hitter, but pity anybody that tries to hit like him."

The official record shows Green has 13 hits in 25 trips to the plate at the end of the first half of the season, his average being a lusty .520. A teammate, Chris Rhodes is in second place with an even 500 average. He obtained 12 hits in 24 trips up to bat.

James Walker of the Braves has collected 10 hits in 21 tires, for an average of .476, not bad in any league, for third place honors.

PHILLIE B. B. SMITH didn't make it. The Philadelphia outfielder has just been tagged out at home plate by San Francisco catcher Bob Schmidt after trying to score from second on a single by teammate Jim Coker in the fifth inning at San Francisco yesterday. Smith was nailed on a perfect throw from center field by Willie Mays. The plate umpire is Frank Dascoli. The Giants won, 7-1. (AP Wirephoto)

35,000 PREDICTED

Heavy Champ Favored To Repeat Win Monday Night

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ingemar Johansson, winner of the world heavyweight boxing title in a shocking upset last June, is favored to repeat his triumph Monday night against Floyd Patterson, the man he floored seven times a year ago.

Despite the quick and decisive ending of the first fight and the swirl of investigations surrounding its promotion, the rematch has stirred worldwide interest. Hubert (Jack) Fugazy, managing director of the new promotion group, Feature Sports, Inc., predicts a crowd of 35,000 will pay $809,000 to see the scrap at the Polo Grounds. Only 18,125 paid $370,712 to see the first at Yankee Stadium after one rainout.

Patterson, only 25, is the youngest in the long line of former heavyweight kings who have tried to win back the title. None has succeeded. The first to try was Jim Corbett and the last to fail was Ezzard Charles. However, Patterson has youth on his side.

Johanson, a handsome Swede, has been taking full advantage of his new status by appearing in a movie and making television appearances. A charmer with a pleasing personality, the unbeaten 27-year-old champ (14 knockouts in 22 winning fights; is confident that he can do it all over again. He is an 8 to 5 favorite.

Scorned by the boxing experts as an unworthy challenger and ridiculed because he was disqualified in the 1952 Olympic finals for refusing to fight, Johansson made believers of most when he finally uncovered his right hand punch last June.

Seven times Johansson sent Patterson crashing to the floor in an exciting third round before Referee Ruby Goldstein stopped the slaughter. The first right sneaked between Patterson's hands held high in his peek-a-boo style and Floyd never knew what hit him. He admitted months later that, when he walked with hands down to a neutral corner, he thought he must have floored Johansson. Instead, he was walking crazily into complete disaster with no defense.

In contrast with last year's training, Johansson has used his right in the sessions at Grossinger, N. Y. He also has showed an improved left jab over the annoying paws that set up Patterson in the first fight.

Although the champ's training was interrupted for several days when he suffered a recurrence of a back injury that bothered him a year ago, he was reported fit when examined by New York State Athletic Commission doctors Wednesday.

The champion weighed 196 when he won the title. He expects to scale about the same at the 10 a.m., EST, weigh-in Monday at the Commodore Hotel.

Patterson, 182, a year ago, expects to weigh about 188 for the rematch. He was up to 192 for a recent medical exam at the commission offices. In his training sessions in an abandoned night club at Newtown, Conn., he has looked the part of a very fit young man, finely trained who has been building up to this fight for many months. The mental factor and Patterson's reactions in his first fight since taking a bad beating could be decisive. Patterson has won 35 of 37 pro fights.

There will be no home television on the regular networks. The fight will be beamed by closed circuit television (TelePrompTer) to 230 locations in 160 cities. Most of these locations will be theaters or drive-ins but some will be baseball parks and arenas. The 230 locations also include 51 private showings for a large corporation, six military installations and a few small cities served by a community antenna. There will be no theater TV within 75 miles of New York.

Ring time for the main event is 9:30 p.m., EST, a half hour later than the usual starting time to let the theaters get set up for business.

The split of the gate is the most involved mathematical formula since Einstein. Of the Polo Grounds' gate each fighter gets 25 per cent. Of the money paid into the theater TV box offices, half goes to the theaters and half to the promotion. Of the promotion's half, there is a deduction of 20 per cent for TelePrompTer. Of the sum remaining, 50 per cent goes to Patterson, 35 per cent to Johansson and 15 per cent to Feature Sports. They divide radio and movie revenue the same way. Johansson owns 100 per cent of the radio and TV rights in Scandinavia. These so-called supplementary rights will be more important than the actual fight gate.

Both fighters will be working without any manager. Johansson has an "adviser" in promoter Edwin Ahlquist of Sweden. Patterson's manager, Cus DaAmato, is on the outs with the New York commission. Patterson signed for the fight himself.

The promoters are the new group, organized by Roy Cohn, former counsel for the Senate investigating subcommittee headed by the late Senator McCarthy. His associates are wealthy New York businessmen who promise a "clean promotion." The top ticket price is $100.

Under the New York rules, the fight will be scored by rounds with two judges and a referee to be named at ring time. They use a supplementary point system in case the rounds are even.

JONES WINS 9TH

Giants Rip Phils For 7-4 Victory

By ALAN CLINE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Giants welcomed new Manager Tom Sheehan Saturday with a 7-4 victory over last-place Philadelphia.

Right-hander Sam Jones had a shutout going for eight innings but the Phillies got to him for five hits in the ninth inning and Johnny Antonelli had to bail him out.

The Giants, in second place now 3½ games back of Pittsburgh, extended their perfect season record against the Phils to eight games.

Sheehan, 66-year-old chief scout for the Giants before his promotion to manager, was appointed 90 minutes before game time after club President Horace Stoneham fired Bill Rigney.

Coach Salty Parker went out and got Jones after three runs had scored in the ninth and two Phils were on base. Bud Byerly gave up a run-scoring single to Jim Coker, then Salty called in Antonelli. He struck out Ted Lepcio and got pinch hitter Del Greco to pop out, ending the game.

The Phils outhit the Giants 10-9, but the winners were helped by four Philadelphia errors.

The Giants got to Philly right-hander Dallas Green, pitching his first major league game, for two runs in the first inning on one hit, three walks and a sacrifice fly.

In the third, Willie Mays doubled, went to third on an outfield fly and scored on Willie Kirkland's sacrifice fly.

The Giants picked up two more in the fourth on two hits and two errors. Philly first baseman Pancho Herrera made a wild throw to second and third baseman Al Dark a bad throw to third. Both miscues led to Giant runs.

Two more Giant runs came in the sixth on a walk, three hits and an error by center fielder Tony Gonzalez.

SAYS OPEN CHAMP

'Desire To Win Never Left Me'

By FRANK PITMAN

DENVER (AP)—Even though he was in 15th place, eight strokes back of the leaders starting the day, "my desire to win never left me," Arnold Palmer said Saturday night after his blazing comeback had won him the National Open Golf Championship.

"I knew my winning was only a question of playing without bogies," Palmer said. He fired 15 birdies in the first three rounds, yet he was seven strokes behind at 215.

"I probably didn't stay awake enough," Palmer said. "The Cherry Hills course is a real good golf course and maybe some of us thought it was too easy." the 7,004-yard course plays 35-36—71 par. He finished 9-under at 280.

"There should have been better scores, but you can see there weren't," he added.

Palmer said, "I felt all along that I had a chance and that pretty soon I would start getting some breaks. Let's not fool ourselves, it takes the breaks to win. I hadn't got them in the earlier rounds but things started breaking my way this afternoon."

"After I got my fourth birdie on the final round, I knew I had a good chance," he said. That birdie came on the 20-foot putt on the 35th hole.

Palmer said he got a tremendous boost when he holed a 25-foot pitch on the 60th hole for a birdie 2.

Although he drove the green on the 346-yard No. 1 hole on the final round and two-putted for a birdie 3, Palmer said that hole and the 430-yard ninth hole "were the toughest for me here. I was 4-over-par at that ninth for all my rounds and even with the birdie I was one over at No. 1."

The new champion wound up the play-by-play report of his game here by admitting, "I guess I better read my own book and brush up on my game—I'm shooting too many bogies."

Now winner of over $62,000 this year, Palmer takes off with Sam Snead from New York Sunday night to fly to Dublin, Ireland, for the Canada Cup matches next weekend.

Heavy Champ Favored To Repeat Win Monday Night

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ingemar Johansson, winner of the world heavyweight boxing title in a shocking upset last June, is favored to repeat his triumph Monday night against Floyd Patterson, the man he floored seven times a year ago.

Despite the quick and decisive ending of the first fight and the swirl of investigations surrounding its promotion, the rematch has stirred worldwide interest. Hubert (Jack) Fugazy, managing director of the new promotion group, Feature Sports, Inc., predicts a crowd of 35,000 will pay $809,000 to see the scrap at the Polo Grounds. Only 18,125 paid $370,712 to see the first at Yankee Stadium after one rainout.

Patterson, only 25, is the youngest in the long line of former heavyweight kings who have tried to win back the title. None has succeeded. The first to try was Jim Corbett and the last to fail was Ezzard Charles. However, Patterson has youth on his side.

Johanson, a handsome Swede has been taking full advantage of his new status by appearing in a movie and making television appearances. A charmer with a pleasing personality, the unbeaten 27-year-old champ (14 knockouts in 22 winning fights; is confident that he can do it all over again. He is an 8 to 5 favorite.

Scorned by the boxing experts as an unworthy challenger and ridiculed because he was disqualified in the 1952 Olympic finals for refusing to fight, Johansson made believers of most when he finally uncovered his right hand punch last June.

Seven times Johansson sent Patterson crashing to the floor in an exciting third round before Referee Ruby Goldstein stopped the slaughter. The first right sneaked between Patterson's hands held high in his peek-a-boo style and Floyd never knew what hit him. He admitted months later that, when he walked with hands down to a neutral corner, he thought he must have floored Johansson. Instead, he was walking crazily into complete disaster with no defense.

In contrast with last year's training, Johansson has used his right in the sessions at Grossinger, N. Y. He also has showed an improved left jab over the annoying paws that set up Patterson in the first fight.

Although the champ's training was interrupted for several days when he suffered a recurrence of a back injury that bothered him a year ago, he was reported fit when examined by New York State Athletic Commission doctors Wednesday.

The champion weighed 196 when he won the title. He expects to scale about the same at the 10 a.m., EST, weigh-in Monday at the Commodore Hotel.

Patterson, 182, a year ago, expects to weigh about 188 for the rematch. He was up to 192 for a recent medical exam at the commission offices. In his training sessions in an abandoned night club at Newtown, Conn., he has looked the part of a very fit young man, finely trained who has been building up to this fight for many months. The mental factor and Patterson's reactions in his first fight since taking a bad beating could be decisive. Patterson has won 35 of 37 pro fights.

There will be no home television on the regular networks. The fight will be beamed by closed circuit television (TelePrompTer) to 230 locations in 160 cities. Most of these locations will be theaters or drive-ins but some will be baseball parks and arenas. The 230 locations also include 51 private showings for a large corporation, six military installations and a few small cities served by a community antenna. There will be no theater TV within 75 miles of New York.

Ring time for the main event is 9:30 p.m., EST, a half hour later than the usual starting time to let the theaters get set up for business.

The split of the gate is the most involved mathematical formula since Einstein. Of the Polo Grounds' gate each fighter gets 25 per cent. Of the money paid into the theater TV box offices, half goes to the theaters and half to the promotion. Of the promotion's half, there is a deduction of 20 per cent for TelePrompTer. Of the sum remaining, 50 per cent goes to Patterson, 35 per cent to Johansson and 15 per cent to Feature Sports. They divide radio and movie revenue the same way. Johansson owns 100 per cent of the radio and TV rights in Scandinavia. These so-called supplementary rights will be more important than the actual fight gate.

Both fighters will be working without any manager. Johansson has an "adviser" in promoter Edwin Ahlquist of Sweden. Patterson's manager, Cus DaAmato, is on the outs with the New York commission. Patterson signed for the fight himself.

The promoters are the new group, organized by Roy Cohn, former counsel for the Senate investigating subcommittee headed by the late Senator McCarthy. His associates are wealthy New York businessmen who promise a "clean promotion." The top ticket price is $100.

Under the New York rules, the fight will be scored by rounds with two judges and a referee to be named at ring time. They use a supplementary point system in case the rounds are even.

JONES WINS 9TH

Giants Rip Phils For 7-4 Victory

By ALAN CLINE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Giants welcomed new Manager Tom Sheehan Saturday with a 7-4 victory over last-place Philadelphia.

Right-hander Sam Jones had a shutout going for eight innings but the Phillies got to him for five hits in the ninth inning and Johnny Antonelli had to bail him out.

Jones, winning his ninth game, had a four-hitter until he weakened.

The Giants, in second place now 3½ games back of Pittsburgh, extended their perfect season record against the Phils to eight games.

Sheehan, 66-year-old chief scout for the Giants before his promotion to manager, was appointed 90 minutes before game time after club President Horace Stoneham fired Bill Rigney.

Coach Salty Parker went out and got Jones after three runs had scored in the ninth and two Phils were on base. Bud Byerly gave up a run-scoring single to Jim Coker, then Salty called in Antonelli. He struck out Ted Lepcio and got pinch hitter Del Greco to pop out, ending the game.

The Phils outhit the Giants 10-8, but the winners were helped by four Philadelphia errors.

The Giants got to Philly right-hander Dallas Green, pitching his first major league game, for two runs in the first inning on one hit, three walks and a sacrifice fly.

In the third, Willie Mays doubled, went to third on an outfield fly and scored on Willie Kirkland's sacrifice fly.

The Giants picked up two more in the fourth on two hits and two errors. Philly first baseman Pancho Herrera made a wild throw to second and third baseman Al Dark a bad throw to third. Both miscues led to Giant runs.

Two more Giant runs came in the sixth on a walk, three hits and an error by center fielder Tony Gonzalez.

Victoria Park Wins Leonard Richards Race

STANTON, Del. (AP)—Victoria Park, Canada's top 3-year-old easily won the $45,950 Leonard Richards Stakes at Delaware Park in track record time Saturday.

With Bill Hartack aboard, Victoria Park, owned by Toronto's Edward P. Taylow, finished five lengths ahead of C. V. Whitney's Tompion. The winning time for time mile and an eighth was 1:47 2-5, three-fifths of a second faster than the record set by Stop and Look seven years ago.

C. P. Mahlon Kline's Conestoga was third, another six lengths bach in the field of eight. Divine Comedy was fourth.

Carrying 122 pounds to top-weight Tompion's 126, Victoria Park was installed a slight favorite by a crowd of 23,116. The Canadian - bred colt paid $4.80, $2.60 and $2.20. Tompion returned $3 and $2.40, and Conestoga $3.20 for show.

Victoria Park netted $33,350 for his greatest triumph in this country, increasing his all-time earnings to $250,682.

The Boston Red Sox this season have Billy Herman coaching at third base and Rudy York at first.

SAYS OPEN CHAMP

'Desire To Win Never Left Me'

By FRANK PITMAN

DENVER (AP)—Even though he was in 15th place, eight strokes back of the leaders starting the day, "my desire to win never left me," Arnold Palmer said Saturday night after his blazing comeback had won him the National Open Golf Championship.

"I knew my winning was only a question of playing without bogies," Plamer said. He fired 13 birdies in the first three rounds, yet he was seven strokes behind at 215.

"I probably didn't stay awake enough," Palmer said. "The Cherry Hills course is a real good golf course and maybe some of us thought it was too easy," the 7,004-yard course plays 35-36—71 par. He finished 3-under at 280.

"There should have been better scores, but you can see there weren't," he added.

Palmer said "I felt all along that I had a chance and that pretty soon I would start getting some breaks. Let's not fool ourselves, it takes the breaks to win. I hadn't got them in the earlier rounds but things started breaking my way this afternoon."

"After I got my fourth birdie on the final round, I knew I had a good chance," he said. That birdie came on the 20-foot putt on the 58th hole.

Palmer said he got a tremendous boost when he holed a 25-foot pitch on the 60th hole for a birdie 2.

Although he drove the green on the 346-yard No. 1 hole on the final round and two-putted for a birdie 3, Palmer said that hole and the 430-yard ninth hole "were the toughest for me here. I was 4-over-par at that ninth for all my rounds and even with the birdie I was one over at No. 1."

The new champion wound up the play-by-play report of his game here by admitting, "I guess I better read my own book and brush up on my game—I'm shooting too many bogies."

Now winner of over $62,000 this year, Palmer takes off with Sam Snead from New York Sunday night to fly to Dublin, Ireland, for the Canada Cup matches next weekend.

U.S. Welcomes Ratification

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States welcomed with obvious relief Saturday Japan's ratification of the new Tokyo-Washington security pact, despite riotous opposition. But anxiety about the future of U.S. military bases on Japanese territory persists.

Officials predicted the United United now would act with all possible speed to complete its role in the ratification and try to bring the pact into force in a matter of days.

Officials privately expressed admiration for the determined stand made by Premier Nobusuke Kishi in defiance of Communist, Socialist and left-wing demonstrators generally, who by violence and threats tried to force his resignation.

Publicly the State Department issued a statement on the ratification which said: "We naturally are gratified. We share Mr. Kishi's gratification, and we view this as another demonstration of U.S.-Japanese friendship."

The statement also said the United States is sure that the new pact will be "mutually beneficial to both countries." It extends a U.S. pledge to defend Japan against attack, and it provides for continuing for another decade U.S. air and naval bases in Japan, about 10 major installations plus various supporting operations.

Kishi's victory to some degree upsets the defeat suffered by the United States Thursday when anti-treaty rioting, exploited and reportedly financed by Communist agents, compelled him to cancel his invitation for President Eisenhower to visit Japan.

The Red victory dealt a severe blow to U.S. prestige and put in serious jeopardy the future of Japan's position as a northern anchor of the Allied defense line against Soviet-Communist power in the Far Pacific. Nevertheless, the ratification did not settle any issue with finality.

Even the process of ratification can be completed only with an exchange of documents between the U.S. and Japanese governments formally subscribing to the pact. Since that will take at least several days after U.S. Senate action here, American officials hope that Kishi will be able to hang onto power a while longer so that the exchange bringing the pact into force will not be delayed.

Beyond this problem is the much deeper issue of acceptance of the pact generally by the Japanese people and their political leaders.

The greatest long-range damage which the Reds could have accomplished by their exploitation of Japanese opposition to alliances and even defensive military preparations would have been the undermining of the pact on a broad scale. It is a military axiom that bases cannot be effectively and peacefully maintained in the midst of a hostile population.

U.S. Ambassador Douglas MacArthur II, the diplomat on the spot who handled arrangements with Kishi's government for Eisenhower's planned visit, probably will be called back to Washington when the situation quiets down for an assessment of future prospects.

Parish Officials May Receive A Booster In Pay

BATON ROUGE (Special) — Pay increases totaling $800,000 a year would be provided for parish officials in legislation now pending in the current session, according to the Public Affairs Research Council (PAR).

The non-partisan research agency said in its weekly Legislative Bulletin that these would be in addition to salary increases proposed for state officials.

Increases for elected state officials are proposed from $1,500 a year to $5,000.

The $5,000 increase would raise the commissioner of insurance from $12,000 to $17,000. In addition, he would continue to receive $4,000 a year as chairman of the insurance rating commission, for a total of $21,000 — the highest of any elected state official.

Pay raises are also being proposed for judges, district attorneys, legislators, police jurors, school board members, registrars and others.

In connection with raises for sheriffs, PAR noted that in 11 parishes it is being proposed that the sheriffs retain a higher percentage of property tax collections for expenses of their offices. Ten of these parishes had surpluses in their salary funds at the end of last fiscal year.

More than 50 bills have been introduced in the legislature to provide salary increases, PAR noted.

MR. AND MRS. LARRY MICHAEL TILLEY

Marriage Vows Exchanged Before Arch Of Greenery

In a candlelit setting before an arch of greenery flanked by palms and baskets of white gladioli and majestic daisies, Miss Shirley Ann Anderson and Larry Michael Tilley exchanged marriage vows on Sunday, June 5, in the Temple Baptist Church in Winnsboro. The Rev. Joe Mongle, pastor, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Anderson of this city, and Mr. Tilley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Tilley of Monroe.

A prelude of organ music was played by Mrs. B. O. Robertson who also accompanied the vocal soloist, Michael DeShong of Baskin.

Guests were shown to their places by the ushers, Herman G. Anderson, brother of the bride, Donald Chapman of Mangham and James E. Shipman of Baskin.

Just before the entrance of the bridal party, the mother of the bridegroom and the mother of the bride were seated. Mrs. Tilley was wearing brown linen dress featuring lace insertions, beige organza hat and bone accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations. Mrs. Anderson was becoming'y attired in a pink linen sheath, pink flower hat, and bone accessories. She wore a corsage of green tinted carnations.

At the first strains of the wedding processional, the candlelighters, Miss Sylvia Odom of Baskin and Clifford Worley of Monroe approached the altar and lighted the candles on either side of the wedding arch.

They were followed by the groomsmen and the bride's attendants. Miss Shirley Wigginton of Baskin, Miss Betty Jenkins of Shreveport and Miss Shirley Crowe of Monroe, cousin of the bridegroom.

The honor attendant was Mrs. Donald Chapman, the bride's sister, and best man was Ray Goleman of Mansfield.

Serving as flower girl was the bride's niece, Miss Beverly Sue Anderson, who wore white silk organza over tulle and taffeta, fashioned with a fitted bodice, full skirt and puffed sleeves. She carried a basket of pink rose petals. Ringbearer was Master Larry Tims of Wisner, cousin of the bride.

The bridesmaids were street-length dresses of peacock blue peau-de-soie with full skirts. Marking the waistlines were cummerbunds of powder blue, each centered with a rosette of the same fabric. The fitted bodices were styled with square necklines and short sleeves. Their headpieces were bands of powder blue, the blue scalloped veils held in place by pink rosebuds. Bouquets were of pink majestic daisies tied with pink satin ribbon.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her full length gown of Alencon lace over taffeta, the moulded bodice fashioned with a high neckline and small round collar of lace. The lace sleeves extended to points over her hands. Her bouffant skirt of nylon tulle over white taffeta featured a flounce of Alencon lace ending in scallops. Her fingertip veil of illusion cascaded from a tiara of pearls and iridescent sequins, and she carried a bouquet of tube roses centered with a purple-throated white orchid placed upon a white Bible.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, guests re-assembled in the church parlor for a reception. Bouquets of white gladioli and pink roses were placed at vantage points throughout the room.

The bride's table was laid with a white cutwork cloth over pink. The central appointment of white gladioli in a crystal container was flanked on either side with crystal candleholders holding white tapers. At one end was the three-tiered wedding cake topped with pink wedding bells tied with pink satin ribbon, and at the other end was a crystal punch bowl.

Mrs. I. T. Tims of Wisner and Mrs. Charles Miller of West Monroe, cousins of the bride, served refreshments.

Later, when the bride and bridegroom departed on a wedding trip to New Orleans and the Gulf coast, the bride was wearing a pink tunic dress. A pink hat, and white lustrous shoes and purse completed her ensemble and the orchid from her bridal bouquet formed her corsage.

Upon their return, the couple will live at 1161½ Masonic drive in Monroe, where the groom is a student at Northeast State college. The bride attended Baskin High school and was graduated from Winnsboro High school. She attended Northeast State college. The groom is a graduate of Neville High school.

Out - of - town guests included: Mr. and Mrs. John A. Garner of Shreveport; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lovoi of New Orleans; Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Worley, Veronica and Clifford, Mr. and Mrs. Truman Potts, Miss Wando Bullock, Mrs. Howard J. Smith and Howard Jr., Miss Bonita Davis, Miss Peggy Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Penton, Miss Jewel Tilley, Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Tilley, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. MR. AND MRS. LARRY MICHAEL TILLEY

Marriage Vows Exchanged Before Arch Of Greenery

In a candlelit setting before an arch of greenery flanked by palms and baskets of white gladioli and majestic daisies, Miss Shirley Ann Anderson and Larry Michael Tilley exchanged marriage vows on Sunday, June 5, in the Temple Baptist Church in Winnsboro. The Rev. Joe Mongle, pastor, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Anderson of this city, and Mr. Tilley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Tilley of Monroe.

A prelude of organ music was played by Mrs. B. O. Robertson who also accompanied the vocal soloist, Michael DeShong of Baskin.

Guests were shown to their places by the ushers, Herman G. Anderson, brother of the bride, Donald Chapman of Mangham and James E. Shipman of Baskin.

Just before the entrance of the bridal party, the mother of the bridegroom and the mother of the bride were seated. Mrs. Tilley was wearing brown linen dress featuring lace insertions, beige organza hat and bone accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations. Mrs. Anderson was becomingly attired in a pink linen sheath, pink flower hat, and bone accessories. She wore a corsage of green tinted carnations.

At the first strains of the wedding processional, the candlelighters, Miss Sylvia Odom of Baskin and Clifford Worley of Monroe approached the altar and lighted the candles on either side of the wedding arch.

They were followed by the groomsmen and the bride's attendants, Miss Shirley Wigginton of Baskin, Miss Betty Jenkins of Shreveport and Miss Shirley Crowe of Monroe, cousin of the bridegroom.

The honor attendant was Mrs. Donald Chapman, the bride's sister, and best man was Ray Golemon of Mansfield.

Serving as flower girl was the bride's niece, Miss Beverly Sue Anderson, who wore white silk organza over tulle and taffeta, fashioned with a fitted bodice, full skirt and puffed sleeves. She carried a basket of pink rose petals. Ringbearer was Master Larry Tims of Wisner, cousin of the bride.

The bridesmaids wore street-length dresses of peacock blue peau-de-soie with full skirts. Marking the waistlines were cumberbunds of powder blue, each centered with a rosette of the same fabric. The fitted bodices were styled with square necklines and short sleeves. Their headpieces were bands of powder blue, the blue scalloped veils held in place by pink rosebuds. Bouquets were of pink majestic daisies tied with pink satin ribbon.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her full length gown of Alencon lace over taffeta, the moulded bodice fashioned with a high neckline and small round collar of lace. The lace sleeves extended to points over her hands. Her bouffant skirt of nylon tulle over white taffeta featured a flounce of Alencon lace ending in scallops. Her fingertip veil of illusion cascaded from a tiara of pearls and iridescent sequins, and she carried a bouquet of tube roses centered with a purple-throated white orchid placed upon a white Bible.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, guests re-assembled in the church parlor for a reception. Bouquets of white gladioli and pink roses were placed at vantage points throughout the room.

The bride's table was laid with a white cutwork cloth over pink. The central appointment of white gladioli in a crystal container was flanked on either side with crystal candleholders holding white tapers. At one end was the three-tiered wedding cake topped with pink wedding bells tied with pink satin ribbon, and at the other end was a crystal punch bowl.

Mrs. I. T. Tims of Wisner and Mrs. Charles Miller of West Monroe, cousins of the bride, served refreshments.

Later, when the bride and bridegroom departed on a wedding trip to New Orleans and the Gulf coast, the bride was wearing a pink tunic dress. A pink hat, and white lustrous shoes and purse completed her ensemble and the orchid from her bridal bouquet formed her corsage.

Upon their return, the couple will live at 116½ Masonic drive in Monroe, where the groom is a student at Northeast State college. The bride attended Baskin High school and was graduated from Winnsboro High school. She attended Northeast State college. The groom is a graduate of Neville High school.

MRS. HUGH ARCHIE BRITT, JR.

St. Matthews Scene Of Britt-Sheppard Vows

St. Matthew's Catholic church was decorated with white asters and white stock for the June 4 wedding of Miss Sharon Drew Sheppard and Hugh Archie Britt, Jr. The Rev. Father Dave Dabria heard the vows.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon A. Sheppard and the groom the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Britt, all of Monroe.

As the guests were being seated by the ushers, Joel Kirby and Robert E. Britt, Jr., cousin of the groom, a pre - nuptial concert was given by Mrs. Sam Lasuzzo at the organ. She accompanied Ray Barr, who sang Gounod's "Ava Maria," and Daniel Lord's "Mother Beloved."

Miss Patricia Sheppard was her sister's maid of honor. She wore a dress of champagne silk organza over buttercup yellow taffeta, styled with a fitted bodice and full skirt with deep hem. The portrait collar was accented with a hand rolled rose at the neckline. Her headdress was of champagne veiling held by a bow of organza and taffeta. She carried a crescent bouquet of champagne carnations.

Bridesmaids, whose attire was identical to that of the maid of honor, were Miss Norma Jean Magee and Miss Joan Bodenheimer. Little Miss Cynthia Brownlee, wearing blue polished cotton with an overdress of white organdy, was flower girl. She wore a headdress of white carnations and carried a white satin basket filled with rose petals.

The bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. Her wedding gown of white silk organza and lace featured a high mandarin collar and long pointed sleeves. The lace bodice ended in a full skirt with lace appliques, which swirled into a chapel train. Her four - tiered veil of illusion was held by a pearl and sequin tiara, and she carried a crescent of white orchids.

Charles Hall attended his brother - in - law as best man. Ring bearer was Russell Ray, Jr., cousin of the bride.

RECEPTION

Her hat was of blue velvet ribbon and veiling, and other accessories of white. Her corsage was a white orchid.

Mrs. Britt, mother of the groom, chose a blue lace sheath with bateau neckline, with which she wore white accessories and a white orchid corsage.

The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with the tiered wedding cake iced with pale yellow roses. The bride and groom cut the first slice with an heirloom cake - breaker which has been used by the bride's family for many years. Each date of use for weddings, golden anniversaries, and birthdays has been recorded through the years. The cake was then served by Mrs. Charles Hall, sister of the groom.

Long slow days of summer, with no schedules to keep, and no clubs to meet. What better time for going calling, for catching up with visits to friends we've missed seeing; to those with new homes or new babies; or just to those we'd like to know better?

This week your reporter visited the lovely new home of the S. J. MONROES on Plantation drive. This house of shrimp brick is surrounded with a fence of redwood panels and marine plywood squares.

Birch paneling and terrazzo flooring are used in the entrance hall. Focal point here is the Spanish commode with its slate top and reversible red and walnut front panels.

Directly to the right of the entry is the living room. Draperies in this room, the dining room, and the entrance are of the same shade of almost-white martini green. The ceiling vaults fifteen feet to the open rafters, and windows are fixed panes of glass in the top of the cave. The floor is carpeted in gray. The end wall features a white brick fireplace and mantel, with a credenza fitting between the hearth and the wall. Facing the fireplace is a long curving sofa, covered in egg-shell upholstery.

Folding doors lead into the dining room, where the gray carpeting is continued. Martini green upholstery is used on the cane - back walnut chairs. A built-in buffet covers one entire wall. Cabinet doors are made of wire mesh, and a marble counter extends the length of the unit.

Fruitwood finish cabinets are used in the terrazzo - floored kitchen. Bamboo blinds banded in blue and green are used in this room, and in the breakfast room. Glass and wrought iron furniture is placed before a blue and green panel wallpaper scene. Behind the breakfast room is a passage way opening into the garage on the right, the patio on the left, and the utility room straight ahead. Draperies in the laundry are a clever print of outline maps of France and Italy marked with wines and spices from various areas printed in full color.

The family room, which is directly behind the entrance, is also panelled in birch and floored with terrazzo. The upper level of the room opens into the kitchen at one side, the master bedroom at the other, and features a storage wall with built-in stereo equipment.

Three steps down is the "living area" with a rug of brown, beige and orange shades echoing the colors of the built-to-order sofa, easy chairs, and the orange leather oxbow chair . . . The end wall, of glass from floor to vaulted ceiling, is covered with draperies of linen casement cloth. Outside is the patio, with its cast iron furniture. The bedroom patio is three steps up to the left, the kitchen entrance three steps up to the right.

A white and gold theme is carried out in the guest bedroom, with its white and gold French provincial furniture, white draperies with gold scrolls, and gold bedspreads and chair . . . The bedroom planned for the Monroe's daughter, MARY ANN MONCRIEF, on her "visits home" is done in Classic style, in white and gold. Conversation piece is Dinkelspiel candelabra of wrought iron and crystal prisms . . . The Monroe's grandsons have the next bedroom, with its bunk beds, early American prints, and brown and orange draperies and spreads.

Clever invitations were in the mail last week for one of the most original parties given hereabouts this season. They read as follows:

It is so much fun when friends get together
So Gertie has decided, regardless of weather
To have a party for those past sixty five
A "have-fun" party, but not in today's style.
You must don a costume of an earlier day
Any style you wish, just have your own way.
If you choose to look like "The belle of the ball."
Just do it. Or perhaps a tacky costume would amuse all.
Or an old trunk may reveal a wedding gown
Or a "gay nineties" model, then the talk of the town.
Whatever you choose, try to recapture once more
The thrill of your youth, blessed days of yore.

Guests gathered at the home of MRS. SHELBY WHITE in Mer Rouge about the middle of the morning. Costumes noted included the little school girl with curls, and a McGuffey's Reader under her arm; an eight year old with doll; an ankle length, many gored stiffly starched white skirt with elaborate blouse; a sack dress of the early Twenties, worn with sach below the hip, and a big picture hat; a Roman striped black taffeta floor length dress with an intricately embroidered velvet bolero.

Following a program given by MRS. WILLIAM SHAW of Oak Ridge, and MRS. D. R. YANCEY of Bastrop, costumes were judged, with the prizes going to MISS LUCILLE HUFFMAN of Oak Ridge, and MRS. A. B. ANDREWS of Bastrop.

A covered dish dinner was served at noon, and following the meal, the guests gathered around the piano for an old-fashioned song fest. Monroyans who drove up for the party included MRS. P. M. McKOIN, MRS. C. P. GRAY, MRS. F. J. WILLEY, MRS. DAN M'DUFF, SHELBY DEAN and DOUGLAS M'DUFF.

Three members of the local Quoto club are in Toronto, Canada, this week for the club's international convention. They are LETHA JOHNSON, president of the local group; BETTY ENGSTRON, convention delegate; and HELEN AGNEW, nominee for international First Vice-President. The meeting will be held today through Wednesday at the Royal York hotel. Events on the calendar include a reception at Parliament House, to be given by the Lieutenant Governor, a concert by the Leslie Bell Singers, and a tour of the city, with a visit to Casa Lomo.

* * *

Tuesday will be the first day of summer, and the longest day of the year. Here are Ogden Nash's thoughts for the day, entitled "Midsummer's Daymare:"

Mumbo, jumbo, what have we here?
Why, we have the longest day day in the year.
This is the rarest day of June,
And it's weeks and weeks from dawn to noon.
This is the calendar's blazing highlight.
It's months and months from noon to twilight.
Lucky are they who retain their friends
Through the day that seldom if ever ends.
Take a modest date, like December twenty,
And still the telephone jangles plenty.
Still you encounter bores enough,
Visitors to avoid enough
Like something out of Freud enough,
Creditors, editors, tears and combats,
Newsreel beauties embracing wombats.
Feeble coffee and vanishing waiters,
Newsreel girls riding alligators,
Oh, man has need of all his strength
To survive a day of medium length;
What wonder, then, that man grows bitter
On a day that sits like a flagpole-sitter?
On farm and field, in office and park,
This is the day that won't get dark.
Dusk is an exile, night has fled,
Never again shall we get to bed.
The sun has swallowed the moon and stars,
Midnight lies with the buried Czars.
This is the guerdon of prayer and fasting;
Glorious day, day everlasting!

Use the refrigerator, if space permits, to keep flowers fresh for special occasions. Remember, too that the vegetable storage makes the perfect storage place for orchid corsages.

Long slow days of summer, with no schedules to keep, and no clubs to meet. What better time for going calling, for catching up with visits to friends we've missed seeing; to those with new homes or new babies; or just to those we'd like to know better?

This week your reporter visited the lovely new home of the S. J. MONROES on Plantation drive. This house of shrimp brick is surrounded with a fence of redwood panels and marine plywood squares.

Birch paneling and trrazzo flooring are used in the entrance hall. Focal point here is the Spanish commode with its slate top and reversible red and walnut front panels.

Directly to the right of the entry is the living room. Draperies in this room, the dining room, and the entrance are of the same shade of almost-white martini green. The ceiling vaults fifteen feet to the open rafters, and windows are fixed panes of glass in the top of the eave. The floor is carpeted in gray. The end wall features a white brick fireplace and mantel, with a credenza fitting between the hearth and the wall. Facing the fireplace is a long curving sofa, covered in eggshell upholstery.

Folding doors lead into the dining room, where the gray carpeting is continued. Martini green upholstery is used on the cane - back walnut chairs. A built-in buffet covers one entire wall. Cabinet doors are made of wire mesh, and a marble counter extends the length of the unit.

Fruitwood finish cabinets are used in the terrazzo - floored kitchen. Bamboo blinds banded in blue and green are used in this room, and in the breakfast room. Glass and wrought iron furniture is placed before a blue and green panel wallpaper scene ... Behind the breakfast room is a passage way opening into the garage on the right, the patio on the left, and the utility room straight ahead. Draperies in the laundry are a clever print of outline maps of France and Italy marked with wines and spices from various areas printed in full color.

The family room, which is directly behind the entrance, is also panelled in birch and floored with terrazzo. The upper level of the room opens into the kitchen at one side, the master bedroom at the other, and features a storage wall with built-in stereo equipment.

Three steps down is the "living area" with a rug of brown, beige and orange shades echoing the colors of the built-to-order sofa, easy chairs, and the orange leather oxbow chair ... The end wall, of glass from floor to vaulted ceiling, is covered with draperies of linen casement cloth. Outside is the patio, with its cast iron furniture. The bedroom patio is three steps up to the left, the kitchen entrance three steps up to the right.

A white and gold theme is carried out in the guest bedroom, with its white and gold French provincial furniture, white draperies with gold scrolls, and gold bedspreads and chair ... The bedroom planned for the Monroe's daughter, MARY ANN MONCRIEF, on her "visits home" is done in Classic style, in white and gold. Conversation piece is Dinkelspiel candelabra of wrought iron and crystal prisms ... The Monroe's grandsons have the next bedroom, with its bunk beds, early American prints, and brown and orange draperies and spreads.

Clever invitations were in the mail last week for one of the most original parties given hereabouts this season. They read as follows:

It is so much fun when friends get together
So Gertie has decided, regardless of weather
To have a party for those past sixty five
A "have-fun" party, but not in today's style.
You must don a costume of an earlier day
Any style you wish, just have your own way.
If you choose to look like "The belle of the ball,"
Just do it. Or perhaps a tacky costume would amuse all.
Or an old trunk may reveal a wedding gown
Or a "gay nineties" model, then the talk of the town.
Whatever you choose, try to recapture once more
The thrill of your youth, blessed days of yore.

Guests gathered at the home of MRS. SHELBY WHITE in Mer Rouge about the middle of the morning. Costumes noted included the little school girl with curls, and a McGuffey's Reader under her arm; an eight year old with doll; an ankle length, many gored stiffly starched white skirt with elaborate blouse; a sack dress of the early Twenties, worn with sach below the hip, and a big picture hat; a Roman striped black taffeta floor length dress with an intricately embroidered velvet bolero.

Following a program given by MRS. WILLIAM SHAW of Oak Ridge, and MRS. D. R. YANCEY of Bastrop, costumes were judged, with the prizes going to MISS LUCILLE HUFFMAN of Oak Ridge, and MRS. A. B. ANDREWS of Bastrop.

A covered dish dinner was served at noon, and following the meal, the guests gathered around the piano for an old-fashioned song fest. Monroyans who drove up for the party included MRS. F. M. McKOIN, MRS. C. P. GRAY, MRS. F. J. WILLEY, MRS. DAN M'DUFF, SHELBY DEAN and DOUGLAS M'DUFF.

Three members of the local Quoto club are in Toronto, Canada, this week for the club's international convention. They are LETHA JOHNSON, president of the local group; BETTY ENGSTRON, convention delegate; and HELEN AGNEW, nominee for international First Vice-President. The meeting will be held today through Wednesday at the Royal York hotel. Events on the calendar include a reception at Parliament House, to be given by the Lieutenant Governor, a concert by the Leslie Bell Singers, and a tour of the city, with a visit to Casa Lomo.

Tuesday will be the first day of summer, and the longest day of the year. Here are Ogden Nash's thoughts for the day, entitled "Midsummer's Daymare:"

Mumbo, jumbo, what have we here?
Why, we have the longest day day in the year.
This is the rarest day of June.
And it's weeks and weeks from dawn to noon.
This is the calendar's blazing highlight.
It's months and months from noon to twilight.
Lucky are they who retain their friends
Through the day that seldom if ever ends.
Take a modest date, like December twenty,
And still the telephone jangles plenty.
Still you encounter bores enough,
Visitors to avoid enough
Like something out of Freud enough,
Creditors, editors, tears and combats,
Newsreel beauties embracing wombats,
Feeble coffee and vanishing waiters,
Newsreel girls riding alligators,
Oh, man has need of all his strength
To survive a day of medium length;
What wonder, then, that man grows bitter
On a day that sits like a flagpole-sitter?
On farm and field, in office and park,
This is the day that won't get dark.
Dusk is an exile, night has fled,
Never again shall we get to bed,
The sun has swallowed the moon and stars,
Midnight lies with the buried Czars.
This is the guerdon of prayer and fasting:
Glorious day, day everlasting!

Use the refrigerator, if space permits, to keep flowers fresh for special occasions. Remember, too that the vegetable storage makes the perfect storage place for orchid corsages.

MISS LESLI MICHELLE DRANE

Miss Drane, Dr. Matthews Plan August Wedding

Miss Lesli Michelle Drane of Baton Rouge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Earl Drane of Forest, will become the bride of Dr. Revill Johnston Matthews on August 6. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Revill Matthews of Baton Rouge are parents of the prospective groom.

The bride - elect is a graduate of Forest High school, and will be graduated in January from the Northwestern State college school of nursing. She is a member of Phi Kappa Phi honorary scholastic fraternity.

Dr. Matthews is a graduate of Catholic High School of Baton Rouge, of Louisiana State university, and of the Loyola University Dental school. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon social fraternity and of Delta Sigma Delta dental fraternity.

The wedding is planned for ten in the morning, August 6, in the Church of St. Francis of Assisi in New Orleans.

Preparing tossed salad for a crowd? What better container to use than the porcelain vegetable storage drawer from your refrigerator. You can even prepare all the vegetables except tomatoes the day before and they will be crackling crisp ready to toss with a favorite salad dressing, garnish and serve.

Strawberry preserves or guava jelly are perfect to serve for dessert with cream cheese and crisp crackers.

H. L. Mencken noted that "When women kiss (one another) it always reminds one of prize-fighters shaking hands."

Tallulah Wedding Unites Miss Crosby, Mr. Calhoun

The First Baptist Church in Tallulah was the setting for the marriage of Miss Delores Crosby, daughter of Mrs. James W. Crosby and the late James W. Crosby, and Donald Calhoun of Tallulah, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles CCalhoun of Charleston, Missouri. The Rev. A. B. Pierce performed the double ring ceremony at four in the afternoon, June 11.

White gladioli, stock, pompons and fern in tall floor baskets, potted palms and branched candelabra holding cathedral candles decorated the church.

The nuptial music was played by Miss Ernestine Stewart who accompanied the soloist, Joe Owens singing "Through the Years" and "The Lord's Prayer." For the processional and recessional the traditional wedding marches were used.

Miss Wennonah Watts of Vicksburg, cousin of the bride, was her only attendant. She wore a dress of pink silk organza fashioned with scooped neckline, short cap sleeves, fitted bodice with crushed cummerbund and full skirt. She carried a bouquet of miniature variegated pink carnations.

The bride, escorted by her brother, Bob Crosby, who gave her in marriage, was radiantly lovely in her gown of imported silk organza and Alencon lace over bridal satin. The sculptured bodice was overlaid with corded lace which formed short cap sleeves and sabrina neckline adorned with sequins and tiny pearls. The regal skirt, appliqued with panels of lace swept into a graceful chapel train. Her veil of illusion fell softly from a queen's crown of sequins and pearls and her bouquet was French carnations centered with a white orchid and attached to a Bible.

Jimmy R. Childress served the groom as best man and the ushers were M. C. Stone, Bill King, Billy Joe Laird and James Knox.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs Crosby chose a blue lace sheath with matching accessories. The bridegroom's sister, Mrs. E. C. Drake, was dressed in a yellow polished cotton. They both had orchid corsages.

RECEPTION

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlor. The bride's table, covered with a cutwork linen cloth was centered with an arrangement of pink carnations and stock.

Presiding at the punch service were Mrs Frank Swoope of Greenville, Miss., and Miss Marjorie Smith. The tiered wedding cake was served by Miss Mary Meriwether and Miss Emily Ruth Stocker. Miss Patricia Ayers of Monroe and Miss Dixie Drake of Colorado Springs had charge of registration in the bride's book.

For traveling the bride wore a bone colored sheath with matching jacket and accessories and an orchid from her wedding bouquet. After a trip to New Orleans Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun will reside at 507 South Elm Street in Tallulah.

The bride is a graduate of Tallulah High school and attended Mississippi College and Northeast Louisiana College. The bridegroom graduated at the Charles, Mo., high school and Northeast Louisiana College.

Out of town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Drake, Misses Sheila and Dixie Drake of Colorado Springs, Colo. and Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Ayers and Miss Pat Ayers of Monroe.

To whet the lagging summer appetites for fresh vegetables, try serving them marinated in garlic French dressing. Cook fresh whole green beans until tender. Drain and cool. Add dressing and chill several hours in refrigerator. Broccoli, asparagus, wax beans would also be good served this way. For a gourmet touch, wrap several stalks or whole beans in thinly sliced cold cuts or baked ham for serving. Add sliced green onions to the vegetables.

Miss DeWanna Nell Holloway, daughter of Mrs. Irene S. Holloway and the late William Hermon Holloway, became the bride of Stanley J. Hodge, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Hodge, all of Crowville, on Saturday, June 4, at five-thirty in the afternoon. The double ring ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. E. L. Hodges of Start.

The front lawn of the bride's home was the setting for the occasion. The altor was made of an arch covered with magnolia blossoms and foliage, and flanked by tall vases of gladioli with palmetto leaves. This was set amidst the drooping limbs of a huge sycamore tree.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Thomas S. Stroud. Her gown was fashioned of chantilly lace and chiffon over bridal satin. The short veil was held in place by a beaded headpiece. She carried a delicate pink Bible topped with the same shade of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Beverly Ann Payne was the only attendant. She wore a street length model of lime green chiffon, with white accessories. She carried a bouquet of white daisies tied with satin streamers to match her dress.

E. F. Hodge, father of the groom, served as best man. Rayford Stroud and Luther Lanier were ushers.

Mrs. Holloway chose a light blue lace dress with navy accessories. She wore a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Hodge wore a gold fitted model with brown accessories and a corsage of wite carnations.

The reception was held in the home. The table was covered with a white lace cloth over aqua. The wedding cake, topped with bride and groom, was at one end of the table and an orange colored punch bowl was served from the other. White lilies graced the buffet and were used throughout the home.

The couple left immediately for Galveston, Texas and points of interest along the way. The bride changed to a fitted model of blue lace. She wore the orchids from her bouquet.

They will reside in Monroe. The bride graduated from Crowville High school and will enter Northeast State college in the fall where she will study Elementary Education. The groom, a graduate of Crowville High school, is a junior in the School of Music at Northeast.

Out of town guests included: Mrs. U. R. Aldredge and Gwen of Nederland, Texas; Miss Lena Stroud, Natchez, Miss.; Lois Foster, Meadiville, Miss.; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Womack, Athens; Mrs. Ted Apps and Alice, Texarkana, Texas; Mrs. Fred Byrnes, Baskin; Mr. and Mrs. Troy Myers, Meadiville, Miss.; Caliope Poulus, Winnsboro; Herman Netherland, Winnsboro; Jeanette Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Smith and Ronnie, and Mrs. Floyd Bradley, Delhi; Mrs. Sherman Biggs, Barbara, Mrs. Holmes Parker, Donna and Jane, Mrs. V. A. Hubba, Suson, Pete Petty, Phores and Phil Corder, Hillman Levi, Sandra Simpson and Alice Morgan, all of Monroe; L. E. Traxler, Jr., E. L. Hays, Jr., Start; and Mr. and Mrs. Billy Bradley, St. Joseph.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made today by Mrs. Mabel Ferrington of the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Joy Elaine to Phillip R. Barton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Barton of Baton Rouge. The wedding will take place next Sunday, June 26, immediately following morning services at the First Baptist church in Wisner.

MRS. FLOYD JOSEPH DOUCET

Miss Arledge, Mr. Doucet Wed In Baton Rouge

Miss Doris Ann Arledge and Floyd Joseph Doucet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonce Doucet of Port Allen, were married Saturday, May 11, in Our Lady of Mercy Catholic Church in Baton Rouge. Monsignor Louis E. Marionneaux officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. H. Lee Arledge of Baton Rouge. Her maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. W. Q. Cantwell of Lake Providence, and her paternal grandparents, H. I. Arledge and the late Mrs. Arledge, also of Lake Providence.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a patio length dress of white chantilly lace over taffeta. The bouffant skirt was accentuated with a bow of white satin. The bodice of her gown was fashioned with a scooped neckline and three quarter length sleeves. At her throat she wore a single strand of pearls, a gift of the groom. Her headpiece was a tiara of seed pearls holding an elbow length veil of French illusion. She carried a cascade of sweetheart roses centered with a single white orchid.

MissJerry Arledge served as her sister's maid of honor and Miss Sondra Hutchins as her bridesmaid. They were attired in identical gowns of ice blue chiffon over taffeta, with scoop necklines and bustle bows of taffeta. They wore matching shoes and wide-brimmed hats of tulle and daisies. They carried white baskets filled with Burband daisies.

As she stood in the receiving line the mother of the bride was attired in a pink chantilly lace sheath dress with matching hat. The mother of the groom wore a dress of champagne beige lace with sages were white split carnations.

Punch and cake were served from a table overlaid in Italian cutwork cloth. The brides' table featured an unusual arrangement of pale pink gladioli in a white milk glass bowl with three small cornucopias extending across the table.

Mrs. Pete Prince, aunt of the bride, assisted in serving the cake while Miss Esther Falcon and Miss Joette Scivicque served as tea girls. Mrs. Nolan Smith, bride's aunt, registered the guests.

For their wedding trip to Florida, the bride wore a summer suit of bone colored pure silk. Her corsage was the orchid from her bridal bouquet. Upon their return the bride and groom will make their home at 215 Commerce St., Port Allen.

Out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Pete Prince, St. Joseph; Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hendricks, Shreveport; Mr. and Mrs. Nolan Smith, Tallulah; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Doucet, Shreveport; Mr. and Mrs. Nolton Opry, Lake Charles; and Mrs. Denneth Opry of Church Point.

MISS MONTEZ HEAD, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy C. Head of Pioneer, will become the bride of Richardson Stuart Trimble, son of Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Stuart Trimble, Jr., of Monroe. The wedding is planned for six in the evening of July 1, in the home of the Rev. I. A. Patton, who will officiate at the ceremony.

THE HOME SHIFT

Water Vital For Flowers

By MILDRED SWIFT

Back from vacation to find we need rain, badly. The little that fell at the beginning of the week wasn't enought to wet the top soil. Of course, this was written several days ago, and we may have had floods by now, but it is so very important for azaleas and camellias to have the moisture they need at this time. They're setting buds. A thorough soaking is what you need. If we've had ample rains this last week, don't water. Watch these two plants during the hot weather. Be sure their roots never dry out. About once a week late in the afternoon, sprinkle the foliage of azaleas and camellias.

JUNE GARDEN JOBS

While hydrangeas are blooming, that's the time to do your pruning. Cut off blossoms with long stems. Keep all blooms cut. If you want to use the blooms for arrangements, take a bucket of hot water to the garden with you. As you cut each stem, plunge it in the water. Leave them there until the water cools. Then you're ready to use the blooms in your arrangements.

Now is the time to replant amaryllis bulbs. If you plan to separate these. I, the old bulbs have split, they can be divided. If you can remember the colors, plant a number of the same color in each spot. You get much better effect.

If you still have Easter lilies in bloom, you're likely sorry as you see when you put a few extra cents into your Easter lilies. They grow better now, and will bloom next year. Keep dressing of bulb will help next year's blooms. Existing and some large ones the tops have died.

Hurry with your planting of chrysanthemums. This is as late as they should be planted.

Watch for bugs on gladiolus. They are small black insects that hide in the leaves. A dusting of DDT will control them.

TIME

This is a good time to transplant Louisiana Iris. They like cool soil and a sunny place to grow. Keep the tops of the plant will fall over in the beds.

Transplant your sudan grass now if they need thinning. You can also divide perennials, such as bachelor buttons if they have formed large clumps and need thinning. Now that the foliage is nearly dead, you can still locate the plants.

Note the colors of your daylilies. You can even make a marker and write the colors. When they quit blooming, you can divide them if they need it. Of course daylilies can be left any length of time but you may want to divide those getting thick. While roses are in bloom is an excellent time to select the varieties you'd like.

Now that the grass is growing, you'll need to water in dry spells such as we have had. Fertilizing often makes a beautiful lawn and makes the grass tender and easy to mow. At this time of year, a feeding of a nitrate would give you a lush shade of green. The amount you'd need would depend on the type you buy. Inquire from the dealer. They can tell you the proper amounts for your size lawn. Always soak down well, any feeding.

If you mow weekly you can leave the clippings on the lawn. These will decay and add organic matter to the soil.

MORE

The spring crop of rose blooms has gone. All the seed pods should be removed, but in cutting them off, remove only a very short stem, so you'll not remove many leaves. Food for the plant is manufactured in the leaves.

Plant hot weather annuals now. Some of these are balsam, portulaca, zinnia, marigold, castor bean vinca, tithonia, cosmos and many others. Ask at your seed store. It's best to plant these in the bed where they are to bloom.

Prune oleanders while they're blooming or immediately after. If they need it. The new growth must have time to harden before the winter cold. New growth will put out after pruning.

Keep water off the foliage of roses and zinnias to control the black spot and mildew. That is when you're doing the hosing. We cannot control the rains.

If you grow wire paper plants [illegible] have more plants than you can use this year. Pass these around to your friends. They grow beautiful, large bold foliage and bloom in late summer. The flowers dry well. This plant dies back in the winter.

The pink rain lilies have been gorgeous. They only bloom after a rain or after you've watered well. You could work a little bone meal in the soil around these bulbs.

As the daisies and other perennials close blooming, cut them back and you'll be rewarded with more blooms.

I know you're enjoying your gladiolus blooms. Since glads open in succession from the bottom upward, the best time to cut these is when the two bottom florets are open. When you gather the blossoms, use a short knife rather than shears. Leave four or five leaves to feed the plant and corms for next year. Cut the blooms by running the blade of the knife down between the leaves and stalk. Cut upward with a slanting motion.

If you are yearning for hibiscus blooms and regret not buying plants earlier, it is not too late if you buy the bucket plants. Have the nurseryman cut the bucket and then you can slide the plant down into a well prepared hole. Fill in with good soil and water well. Trim off the tips of hibiscus branches promptly after flowering to promote the growth of new wood and more flower buds.

FATHER'S DAY

Dad may be the vacation man of a weekend, or an unnoticed necessity when the stork arrives, but one day of the year he gets the limelight. It's right that on at least one occasion he can be the center of attention. This is the day for pleasing Dad and letting him know you think he's a wonderful fellow. Feed him sirloin steak or turkey on his day.

HERE AND THERE

Newest to hit the ready - to - wear market is size 4 for grown-up girls. This new size is for girls or women under 5 feet 2 inch high, 32 to 33 waist 20 to 21; hips 32 to 33 and one half. This petite section of the population has had great difficulty up to now, finding clothes to fit without expensive and expensive alterations. The new size range will solve these problems. A few years ago the smallest size dress was 7. Then came 5 and now size 3.

Always remove grease spots from garments before laundering. Washing may make the spot permanent. To remove them use a grease solvent or work soap or detergent into the soiled area.

Whether you're working in the kitchen preparing the family dinner, entertaining friends at a barbecue or going to a "dress up" party, you'll find cotton a good choice. Light weight, cool and comfortable cotton clothing will go a long way toward helping you bear the heat.

Honeylocust Endangered By Webworm

Once confined to the South, a devastating leaf - eating pest, the Mimosa webworm, is breaking out of its geographical limitations and is rapidly heading north and west, a leading entomologist warns.

Dr. Carl Hansen, pathologist of the Davey Tree Expert Co., says the insect, known to scientists by the formidable name of Homadaula albizzias, has developed a taste for all varieties of locust, particularly the popular honeylocust, as well as the mimosa, Southern shade tree. As a result, it is now munching on honeylocusts from New Jersey down through North Carolina and Georgia. It is also becoming a serious problem in Ohio, Pennsylvania and scattered areas nearby.

The growing legions of honeylocust fanciers can stop the Mimosa webworm in its tracks, beginning now, in mid - June. A series of three sprayings with a good stomach poison — DDT or lead arsenate — will control the hungry pest. Second and third applications should be at four to five weeks intervals.

The continuing chemical warfare is required because the webworm has two generations and a partial third in one year. Webworm larvae feed first in a web spun over leaves, then singly on tender terminal leaves and on green pods of the host tree. Skeletonized leaves turn brown as if fire scorched on the honeylocust. In mid - Summer, the larvae descend to the ground on silken threads and spin their cocoons in cracks in the bark or in the ground cover. The webbing is most conspicuous in August from the second brood.

Tanning Agent May Up Use Of Leather Goods

A new tanning agent, glutaraldehyde, which produces a soft, washable, dry - cleanable leather may make leather garments more popular.

Glutaraldehyde has been known for more than 50 years, but only recently became commercially available. Leather tanned with it does not shrink, stiffen, lose color or become stained by washing or perspiration.

Its development grew out of an Agricultural Research Service study of new and better uses for surplus hides. It is already in limited commercial use in combination with other tanning agents to produce fine garment leather from sheepskin. It can also be used on calfskin, cowhide, and horsehide.

Stamp Issue Due Honoring Special Event

As host to the Fifth World Forestry Congress at Seattle, Wash., on Aug. 29, the United States will issue a 4-cent commemorative stamp honoring the event.

Last week this column reported the United Nations plans to issue a stamp for the same occasion on the same day.

The U. S. commemorative will feature the Forestry Congress Seal displaying a globe in the upper portion, over which is imposed a stylized tree, flanked by symbols representing the multi-

Collectors desiring first day cancellations may send their addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Seattle 1, Wash., prior to Aug. 29. The envelope should be addressed low and as far to the left side as possible since the stamp is of vertical design. The outside envelope to the Postmaster should be marked "First Day Covers 4-cent World Forestry Congress Stamp."

Switzerland has issued its 1960 Pro Patria series consisting of five stamps and a miniature sheet, reports the Swiss Philatelic Agency in America. These multi-colored stamps feature minerals, rocks and fossils.

The 5 centimes plus 5 shows Smoky Quartz. The 10c plus 10 depicts the Orthoclase crystal. The 20 c plus 20 pictures the Gryphaea, called the "hawk's-claw." The 50 c plus 50 illustrates Azurite which is found in copper ore deposits and used to produce blue crystal. The 80 c plus 80 has an entirely different motif from the others in this series. Features an owl, a T. sulcata and a sledge hammer, this stamp honors "Fifty Years of the National Boy Collection — 1910 to 1960."

A U. S. stamp sold for over 250 times its catalogue price at a recent auction.

The stamp was a used copy of the Jackson 2-cent black of 1851-1866, cataloging 50. It was sold by H. R. Harmer, Inc. for a world record price of $700.

The stamp, described in the auction catalogue as "the famous cork cut with wide margins and perfect centering . . . possibly the finest used Black Jack existing" opened at $400.

The occasion was the sale of the collection of United States Classics formed by Mr. Robert F. Anderson of Orlando, Fla.

The government of Singapore has announced a special issue of two values to commemorate Singapore National Day. The designs feature the state flag of Singapore in red and white with background colors different on each value. The 4-cents will be blue and the 10-cents grey.

Here's some interesting news for coin collectors. The Royal Maundy silver pennies, one of the rarest regularly minted coins in the world, were displayed at the British Exhibition in New York's Coliseum.

The Royal Maundy coins had their inception in the 12th Cen-

This year only 1,000 pieces of the four coins were made for distribution by Queen Elizabeth on April 14. A set of four minted in the last five years usually brings about $12 from coin collectors.

Few Houseflies Multiply Fast

The ability of a few over-wintering houseflies to produce tremendous numbers of descendants by late August and September is amazing. A single female may lay as many as 2,600 eggs in 30 days.

These are deposited in manure or decaying organic matter and hatch within a few hours. Within two weeks these young flies have developed into adults, ready to lay more eggs. Sanitation is the most important part of an effective fly control program. It will help greatly to clean up all accumulation of manure and rotting straw twice a week.

This Picture Fan Drawn By Architectural Forms

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Phyllis Curtin is not the ususal camera fan. She has a passion for photographing architectural forms, preferably ancient castles, cathedrals and churches. She does it the hard way, too, by hiking, climbing, exploring — literally covering a lot of ground — to find the right angle for the complete picture or a small architectural detail. It takes stamina as well as historical knowledge.

It also takes a remarkable memory, as I discovered while looking through her photo albums of Europe and South America. Miss Curtin recalled the places, the time and the architectural background of each site without written reminders.

ASSET

But memory is a professional asset, for Miss Phyllis Curtin is one of America's youngest and prettiest opera and concert stars.

Her informal camera technique, however, is quite different from the rigid disciplines imposed on her as an opera and concert singer. Professionally, she had to be a perfectionist in fundamentals, training and practice. Photographically, she is impatient with rules and discipline and anything more than a filter is too burdensome to bother with.

"No light meter, no flash and no tripod for me," she says. "With the camera around my neck and extra film in my hand bag, I'm fully equipped for a day's exploration."

The camera, which she has had for the past 10 years, is a compact, 2¼x2¼, folding reflex with coupled rangefinder and f-2.8 lens (Zeiss-Ikon Super Ikonta B).

How did she gauge the exposures of certain "mood" shots in the album?

WEIRD

"It may sound weird," she says, "but I urge the camera to do the things I want. Perhaps a couple of years of trial and error gave me a basic feeling of exposure. Beyond that, I'm an optimist because I know and love my camera.

"There was the time in Scotland when we were approaching Edinburgh at dusk. It looked like a dream city in the failing light. I'm sure a light meter would have told me there wasn't enough light for a picture. There was no time to calculate proper exposure even if I had a meter so I opened the lens to its widest aperture and set the speed at 1-25th, the slowest speed one should shoot with a hand camera.

"The result was just right in mood and artistic feeling. I prefer it to one that might show sharp outlines and clear details.

IMPULSE

I think camera fans ought to shoot more pictures on impulse instead of waiting till they have figured out all the exposure factors. If it doesn't work out, all they've lost is one negative. If it does work out, they've gained artistic satisfaction as well as the picture."

Miss Curtin's husband, Eugene Cook, former Life staffer and now a professional free lance photographer, came in at this point. He put down his bulging camera bag and made sure we wouldn't trip over his tripod. He put away his light meter, and I noticed his bag contained a Hasselblad outfit and a Rolleiflex with electronic flash attachment.

"Phyllis' architectural touch baffles me," Cook says, "but I'm delighted with the results. Other guys would use a view camera with tilts and swings but she just shoots away."

Though Miss Curtin's impulses are all architecturally inclined, once in a while something else impels her to trip the shutter. The one that caught my eye was of a burro suspended in a sling harness being ferried by cable wire across an impassable Peruvian mountain stream. She remarked that she followed by the same harness and route a little later.

"How come there's no picture of you in this rig?" I asked.

"It went so fast," she replied, "that by the time the burro took a meter reading, it was too late for the picture."

Debbie Hamilton, Judy Heckathorn, Lael Kilpatrick, Sally Kilpatrick, Salley Matthews, Marion Meriwether, Pat Milligan, Penny Nichols, Nancy K. Nolan, Valeria Roark, Sharron Stewart, Peggy Stone, Elizabeth Waters, Clare Wells, Kova Willis, and Paula Zagone. Many of the girls are now enrolled in swimming classes and are looking forward to fun at day camp in July.

The pottery instruction that was carried on at the office proved worthwhile for the 21 girls who participated. Each no only has a pinch pot, a tile, a figure, and a coil-method bowl to her credit, but she has earned the Pottery badge, as well. We'd like our readers to know that all Girl Scout work is original, no copying, no molds, no tracing. Wish you could see the pieces the girls made! They are justly proud. Mrs. Walter Bell, Jr., assisted with the courses. The following participated: Jane Allen, Martha Allen, Jane Brant, Janet Brueck, Omega Christian, Susan DeMasterson, Mary Einhorn, Brenda Hensley, Patricia Johnson, Jateen Kelley, Kathleen McCoy, Kay Otnott, Barbara Parrino, Carol Patterson, Delores Smale, Laurie Spatafora, Susan Stone, Betsy Taylor, Dottie Wood, Sherry Wood, and Carolyn Randall. It's just another opportunity that Scouting gives, furnishing an opportunity to explore new fields.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Dubach Club Holds Exhibit

By MARY JARDINE

By GLADYS M. KULCKE
Guest Writer

The flower arrangement last week in the Garden Center were furnished by the Dubach Garden Club.

Mrs. Herschel Colvin chose an antique glass bottle painted brown, placed on a brown base for her Hogarth line design. New growth of pine was used to make the Hogarth curve, with a cluster of artificial grapes extending down adding to the feeling of depth and completing the main body of the Hogarth curve. Ivy leaves served as transitional material and gave a background for the large orange dahlia placed at the mouth of the container. A lovely composition for a small table.

BROWN CONTAINER

For Mrs. Colvin's second arrangement she used a brown wooden oblong container. A cup needlepoint holder was used to supply the water for her plant material. Yucca formed the vertical line of the triangle design. Curled loquat leaves added depth and distinction to the arrangement. Yellow dahlias were artistically placed low in the design.

Mrs. C. S. Fuller made an all foliage arrangement in a tan rectangle pottery container. The angular design was made of aspidistria and canna leaves, with reddish-green castor-bean leaves clustered at base of the design.

Mrs. Burl Davis chose a free-form tan and green pottery bowl for her triangle design. Aspidistria leaves formed the outline of the design. Begonia leaves were used for transition. The focal area was filled in with geranium blossoms. Very pleasing in combination of color and material, and a long lasting arrangement.

In horticulture, Mrs. Henry displayed an interesting collection of roses and dahlias.

Flower show presented by the College Heights Garden Club of Monroe. Theme — Florae et Poetria. Time June 23rd, from 3:00 to 9:30 p.m. Place Memorial Methodist Church.

TREES

Ornamental trees are leafy shade trees, street trees, patio trees, that give a garden its charm, a community its character. Shade trees make ideal air conditioners for the house area. They give shade during the summer when it is needed and drop their leaves in the fall to let ample light into the house during the short days of winter.

It is important to be sure of the exact location of future trees before planting them. During the summer stakes can be driven where trees are needed for shade from the hot afternoon sun. Fruit trees work in with the planting on a small or large lot. The owner will have to spray the fruit trees to have an abundant crop of fine fruit.

Pick the best planting season to move a tree. Deciduous trees are best moved in late fall or early winter, after the leaves have dropped or early spring before the leaves "push". Evergreen trees may be planted at the same time.

Acidic trees, with their love for sprinkling needles are in accord with the ranch type home. The smaller, denser varieties of crab apple trees is also a good tree to plant in the yard of a low ranch type house.

A tree's most active roots are out at the branch tips. Here is where the tree should be fed. Make an ideal circle around the tree, so that the water and fertilizer will be held around the roots of the tree. Flood this basin every two weeks for about two years after transplanting.

Girl Scout News

High school girls who plan to serve as program aides at day camp will meet at the Girl Scout office, 313 Breard, at 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning. Program aides are invaluable assistants at camp, sharing their skills with younger girls. Adults on staff say they couldn't do half as good a job without the help of the girls. Registration for the first session of camp, July 4-15 is now closed. Training for staff and program aides is scheduled for the week of June 27.

Troop 23's fly-up ceremony was held in the Fellowship Hall of Highland Presbyterian church, with the families of the girls sharing the important occasion. After opening the program with an impressive flag ceremony, the girls explained the meaning of the Girl Scout Promise and Laws, using a trefoil made for them by Mr. Johnny Roan. Girls were invested and given their Girl Scout pins by their leaders, Mrs. Lamar Hayden and Mrs. B. B. McWhorter. The following were invested, receiving Brownie wings, as well as Girl Scout pins: Marilyn Bedgood, Bonnie Butler, Diane Barton, Debbie Baccus, Linda Gatlin, Kathy Grant, Sally Holstead, Paula Hayden, Susan McWhorter, Betty Plair, Kathleen Newcomer, Beverly Rogers, Gail Robertson, Ann Wiggins. The Reverend Earl Wiggins, pastor of the church, expressed his interest in the troop and in Scouting and pronounced a benediction.

Just starting on what we hope will prove to be an adventure for many years yet to come are the girls of Troop 13, which were organized just in time to meet membership requirements before school was out. Mrs. C. H. Wells and Mrs. William Bartlett are leaders of the troop, which meets in the parish house of Grace Episcopal Church. Mrs. T. W. Meriwether, Mrs. Floyd Stone, Jr., Mrs. Doyle Hamilton, Mrs. J. P. MMcCarthy, Mrs. J. C. Stewart and Mrs. E. F. Nolan serve on the troop committee. Invested as Brownies in the familiar "Twist me and turn me and show me the elf" ceremony were: Mary Clay Albright, Betty Jo Bartlett, Pamela Sue Butler, Patricia Conrad, Debbie Daniel,

Time Is Here For Chinchbugs In Lawn Grass

Chinch bugs in St. Augustine grass lawns are difficult to control. The materials are expensive and must be applied properly if maximum results are to be expected.

Before you treat your lawn for chinch bugs, be sure they are causing the trouble. There is a disease that attacks St. Augustine grass which produces similar symptoms to chinch bug injury. A bucket or can with both ends removed may be used to check for the bugs.

Force the can into the ground in those areas of grass that are just beginning to turn brown, then fill the can with water. If chinch bugs are present they will float to the surface. You can recognize the adult bug by his black color and transparent wings which lie flat against his back.

Young bugs vary from reddish to black depending on their age. Your county or dome demonstration agent will give you information about the materials necessary to control these pests.

FATHER'S DAY

Today is Father's Day. Another day equal in importance to Mother's Day. In my reading, I found this poem by Andrew Gillies which shows great faith and admiration of son for father which has made great leaders of our country. I dedicate this lovely poem to all fathers who read my column:

CONFESSION

Last night my little boy confessed to me:
Some childish wrong:
And kneeling at my knee
He prayed with tears —
"Dear God, make me a man
Like Daddy — wise and strong.
I know you can."
Then while he slept
I knelt beside his bed.
Confessed my sins.
And prayed with low-bowed head,
"Oh God, make me a child
Like my child here—
Pure, guileless,
Trusting Thee with faith sincere."

JUNE DAIRY MONTH

While our attention is being focused on Dairy Foods this month, let's compare milk with a few of our other important foods as to nutritional value, for instance, calcium: It takes 27 pounds of Irish potatoes to give the same amount of calcium as 1 quart of milk; 28 oranges and 39 eggs. It's so easy to drink a glass of milk at each meal which would equal a quart. But how long would it take you to eat 27 pounds of Irish potatoes or 39 eggs or 23 oranges to get that much needed calcium. Let's look at another food nutrition — protein. You must eat five eggs to get the same amount of protein as in one quart of milk: 16 slices of bread, five ounces of dried beans, 5½ ounces of liver or 5¾ ounces of beef. To be on the safe side remember to see that your children get that quart of milk each day: to provide the nutrients necessary for growth and good health.

HOT WATER SUPPLY

We rarely give it a thought, but it requires a lot of hot water to operate a modern home. In fact, a family of four will use an average of 130 gallons of hot water a day. Showers and baths require the most hot water — about 15 gallons for each shower and bath. The men in the family use about 3 gallons each time they shave, and every member of the family uses about 2 gallons in addition to bathing. Each time a meal is prepared, three gallons of hot water are needed. In figuring the size of water heater needed for your home the following is a pretty good guide: Allow about 20 gallons for each person, and figure each bathroom, clothes washer and dishwasher as a person.

SHOPPING SECRETS

A label or tag can tell you something or practically nothing. No longer can we tell garments fabric quality just by looking or feeling of the material. The experts can't either. An informative label or tag is your best buying guide. Some labels tell a "sweet story," but give little useful information. We can encourage good labeling by asking for informative tags and labels which indicate fabric performance — following informative directions faithfully — reading fact over carefully and filing for future use.

A THOUGHT

What most of us need is not a new position but a new disposition.

SOUTHERN GARDNER

Color Plans Help Gardens

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The most beautiful gardens are not the ones in which a hodge - podge of different colors run riot, but the gardens in which some color scheme has been worked out. Every 10 days to two weeks the scheme may change with the passing different kinds of flowers, but there is always a dominating set of colors.

It is really not as difficult as you might think to work out some color schemes with the common flowers most of us have in our gardens. One of the first rules of the game is to use enough of one color to dominate the scene. Little dabs of many kinds of plants will never produce a strong effect. Since nearly every flower has some favorite flower or color for each two weeks in the season, it is easiest to begin with these favorites.

EASIEST

Summer annuals and fall blooming bulbs that can soon be planted offer us the easiest chance to begin a color scheme. We cannot dig up the whole garden and rearrange it now, but we can begin to plan our colors while the garden is in summer bloom. Hall's amaryllis (Lycoris squamigera) and the many kinds of colchicums run to lavenders and pinkish lavenders and all in with the numerous purples and mauves of late summer and early fall. From time to time, we have mentioned in the column that the combination of Sedum spectabile roseum and the colchicum called The Giant Blooms together every year in late August or early September.

In spite of its long name, this sedum is just an improved form of the old "house leek" that grows in most everybody's yard in the South. Plant the colchicum crowns 12 to 18 inches from the sedums to escape their hungry roots, and, if you like bright butter yellow for a contrast to "rosy lavender, plant some sternbergias among the colchicums. The sternbergia foliage is evergreen like that of red spider - lilies and will provide a touch of green through the winter.

STRONG COLORS

When September comes around, we in the South can have all the strong colors of spring bulbs again by planting the fire red spider-lilies, the sternbergias and the violet colchicums. Our Northern friends cannot grow the spider-lilies and cannot grow sternbergias with the complete abandon with which Southerners do. In these two groups of bulbs, Southern gardeners have something unique. New kinds of spider-lilies and sternbergias are being created and introduced all the time, now, and will soon be on the market for all to buy.

When you begin to study color schemes, you will soon see that the grey foliage plants are a wonderful adjunct to your pictures. Grey foliage is a most pleasing softener for the hot summer sun. It seems to belong to almost any combination. Since white is not a color, but a combination of all colors, it "pulls all colors together." White and blue cool off our hot summer gardens, too, and elegant effects can be achieved with white alone.

Actress Discusses Husbands

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Diana Lynn says Hollywood actresses have a choice of two types of husbands, one a little more durable than the other.

"If you're an actress, you've got to decide what to do," she advised. "Are you going to act all your life or be a girl who gets married?"

"Well, if you're the latter, you then have two choices for a husband. First, there's the guy who buys the airplane tickets and carries luggage for the actress once the wedding is over."

Miss Lynn said the second model is the fellow with a business capable of supporting his own household. Miss Lynn's husband, Los Angeles radio station executive Mortimer Hall, is in that category.

"I just can't go running off to Europe for a picture or New York to do a play," she said. "He naturally wants me home with him and the two children. And, he certainly couldn't go travelling around with me like the first type I spoke about. He's got a business to care for."

Miss Lynn, appearing on NBC-TV's "My-tery Show" Sunday night, says the type of husband who can pick up whenever his actress wife decides to travel is almost a pathetic fellow.

"You've seen them around town," she said, slouching down in a restaurant booth. "He's the kind of a man who rubs his wife's back and is sort of a personal maid.

"I've even seen it happen where the personal maid type of husband, in order to prove himself a man, drinks, tells dirty stories and pinches girls at parties.

"No real man likes to spend his life hanging around stage doors," she continued. "The second type of husband we're discussing would never tolerate that."

Thinking over the subject between bites of cold roast beef, Diana half way decided that actresses might not be good matrimonial bets themselves.

"Actresses are ruthless ladies," she said, almost as a warning to gentlemen hoping to grab off a sultry movie star for a bride.

THE HOME SHIFT

Water Vital For Flowers

By MILDRED SWIFT

Back from vacation to find we need rain, badly. The little that fell at the beginning of the week wasn't enought to wet the top soil. Of course, this was written several days ago, and we may have had floods by now, but it is so very important for azaleas and camellias to have the moisture they need at this time. They're setting buds. A thorough soaking is what you need. If we've had ample rains this last week, don't water. Watch those two plants during the hot weather. Be sure their roots never dry out. About once a week late in the afternoon, sprinkle the foliage of azaleas and camellias.

JUNE GARDEN JOBS

While hydrangeas are blooming, that's the time to do your pruning. Cut all blossoms with long stems. Keep all blooms cut. If you want to use the blooms for arrangements, take a bucket of hot water to the garden with you. As you cut each stem, plunge it in the water. Leave them there until the water cools. Then you're ready to use the blooms in your arrangements.

Now is the time to replant amaryllis bulbs, if you plan to separate these. If the old bulbs have split, they can be divided. If you can remember the colors, plant a number of the same color in each group. You get much better effect.

If you still have Easter lilies in bloom, leave as much stem as possible when you cut the blossoms. This gives you better results with your bulbs next year. A top dressing of 8-8-8 will help next year's plants. Dividing will come later after the tops have died.

Hurry with you planting of chrysanthemums. This is as late as they should be planted.

Check for thrips on gladiolus. They are small black insects that hide in the leaves. A dusting of DDT will control them.

TIME

This is a good time to transplant Louisiana Iris. They like acid soil and a moist place if you have it. Cut tops or the plant will fall over in the beds.

Transplant your spider lilies now, if they need dividing. You can also divide hyacinths, narcissus, daffodils if they have formed large clumps and need thinning. Now that the foliage is nearly dead, you can still locate the bulbs.

Note the colors of your daylilies. You can even make a marker and write the colors. When they quit blooming you can divide these, if they need it. Of course daylilies can be divided any time, but you just don't want to disturb those gorgeous blooms now. While these lilies are in bloom is an excellent time to select the varieties you'd like.

Now that the grass is growing, you'll need to water in dry spells such as we have just had. Fertilizing often makes a beautiful sod and makes the grass tender and easy to mow. At this time of year, a feeding of a nitrate would give you a lush shade of green. The amount you'd need would depend on the type you buy. Inquire from the dealer. They can tell you the proper amounts for your size lawn. Always soak down well, any feeding.

If you mow weekly you can leave the clippings on the lawn. These will decay and add organic matter to the soil.

MORE

The spring crop of rose blooms has gone. All the seed pods should be removed, but in cutting them off, remove only a very short stem, so you'll not remove many leaves. Food for the plant is manufactured in the leaves.

Plant hot weather annuals now. Some of these are balsam, portulaca, zinnia, marigold, castor bean, vinca, tithona, cosmos and many others. Ask at your seed store. It's best to plant these in the bed where they are to bloom.

Prune oleanders while they're blooming or immediately after. (If they need it.). The new growth must have time to harden before the winter cold. New growth will put out after pruning.

Keep water off the foliage of roses and zinnias to control the blask spot and mildew. That is when you're doing the hosing. We cannot control the rains.

If you grew rice paper plants last year, you'll have more plants than you can use this year. Pass these around to your friends. They grow beautiful, large bold foliage and bloom in late summer. The blooms dry well. This plant dies back in the winter.

The pink rain lilies have been gorgeous. They only bloom after a rain or after you've watered well. You could work a little bone meal in the soil around these bulbs.

As the daisies and other perennials close blooming, cut them back and you'll be rewarded with more blooms.

I know you're enjoying your gladiolus blooms. Since glads open in succession from the bottom upward, the best time to cut these is when the two bottom florets are open. When you gather the blossoms, use a short knife rather than shears. Leave four or five leaves to feed the plant and corms for next year. Cut the blooms by running the blade of the knife down between the leaves and stalk. Cut upward with a slanting motion.

If you are yearning for hibiscus blooms and regret not buying plants earlier, it is not too late if you buy the bucket plants. Have the nurseryman cut the bucket and then you can slide the plant down into a well prepared hole. Fill in with good soil and water well. Trim off the tips of hibiscus branches promptly after blooming to promote the growth of new wood and more flower buds.

FATHER'S DAY

Dad may be the forgotten man at a wedding, or an unnoticed accessory when the stork arrives, but one day of the year he gets the limelight. It's right that on at least one occasion he can be the center of attention. This is the day for pleasing Dad and letting him know you think he's a wonderful fellow. Feed him sirloin steak or turkey on his day.

HERE AND THERE

Newest to hit the ready - to - wear market is size 3 for grown-up girls. This new size is for girls or women under 5 feet 2, with bust 32 to 33; waist 20 to 21; hips 32 to 33 and one half. This petit section of the population has had great difficulty up to now, finding clothes to fit without extensive and expensive alterations. The new size range will solve their problems. A few years ago the smallest size dress was 7. Then came 5 and now size 3.

Always remove grease spots from garments before laundering. Washing may make the spot permanent. To remove them use a grease solvent or work soap or detergent into the soiled area.

Whether you're working in the kitchen preparing the family dinner, entertaining friends at a barbecue or going to a "dress up" party, you'll find cotton a wise choice. Light weight, cool and comfortable cotton clothing will go a long way toward helping you beat the heat.

A series of three sprayings with a good stomach poison — DDT or lead arsenate — will control the hungry pest. Second and third applications should be at four to five weeks intervals.

The continuing chemical warfare is required because the webworm has two generations and a partial third in one year. Webworm larvae feed first in a web spun over leaves, then singly on tender terminal leaves and on green pods of the host tree. Skeletonized leaves turn brown as if fire scorched on the honeylocust. In mid - Summer, the larvae descend to the ground on silken threads and spin their cocoons in cracks in the bark or in the ground cover. The webbing is most conspicuous in August from the second brood.

Tanning Agent May Up Use Of Leather Goods

A new tanning agent, glutaraldehyde, which produces a soft, washable, dry - cleanable leather may make leather garments more popular.

Glutaraldehyde has been known for more than 50 years, but only recently became commercially available. Leather tanned with it does not shrink, stiffen, lose color become stained by washing or perspiration.

Its development grew out of an Agricultural Research Service study of new and better uses for surplus hides. It is already in limited commercial use in combination with other tanning agents to produce fine garment leather from sheepskin. It can also be used on calfskin, cowhide, and horsehide.

Stamp Issue Due Honoring Special Event

As host to the Fifth World Forestry Congress at Seattle, Wash., on Aug. 29, the United States will issue a 4-cent commemorative stamp honoring the event.

Last week this column reported the United Nations plans to issue a stamp for the same occasion on the same day.

The U. S. commemorative will feature the Forestry Congress Seal displaying a globe in the upper portion, over which is imposed a stylized tree, flanked by symbols representing the multi-

Collectors desiring first day cancellations may send their addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Seattle 1, Wash., prior to Aug. 29. The envelope should be addressed low and as far to the left side as possible since the stamp is of vertical design. The outside envelope to the Postmaster should be marked "First Day Covers 4-Cent World Forestry Congress Stamp."

Switzerland has issued its 1960 Pro Patria series consisting of five stamps and a miniature sheet, reports the Swiss Philatelic Agency in America. These multicolored stamps feature minerals, rocks and fossils.

The 5 centimes plus 5 shows Smoky Quartz. The 10c plus 10 depicts the Orthoclase crystal. The 20 c plus 20 pictures the Gryphaea, called the "hawkshell." The 30 c plus 30 illustrates Azurite which is found in copper ore deposits and used to produce blue vitriol. The 50 c plus 10 has an entirely different motif from the others in this series. Featuring an owl, a T square and a sledge hammer, this stamp honors "Fifty Years of the National Day Collection — 1910 to 1960."

The stamp was a used copy of the Jackson 2-cent black of 1861-1866, catalouging for $3. It was sold by H. R. Harmer, Inc. for a world record price of $700.

The stamp, described in the auction catalogue as "the fantastic copy with wide margins and perfect centering . . . possibly the finest used Black Jack existing" opened at $460.

The occasion was the sale of the collection of United States Classics formed by Mr. Robert T. Anderson of Orlando, Fla.

The government of Singapore has announced a special issue of two values to commemorate Singapore National Day. The designs feature the state flag of Singapore in red and white with background colors different on each value. The 4-cents will be blue and the 10-cents grey.

Here's some interesting news for coin collectors. The Royal Maundy silver pennies, one of the rarest regularly minted coins in the world, were displayed at the British Exhibition in New York's Coliseum.

The Royal Maundy coins had their inception in the 12th Cen-

This year only 1,000 pieces of the four coins were made for distribution by Queen Elizabeth on April 14. A set of four minted in the last five years usually brings about $12 from coin collectors.

Few Houseflies Multiply Fast

The ability of a few over-wintering houseflies to produce tremendous numbers of descendants by late August and September is amazing. A single female may lay as many as 2,600 eggs in 30 days.

These are deposited in manure or decaying organic matter and hatch within a few hours. Within two weeks these young flies have developed into adults, ready to lay more eggs. Sanitation is the most important part of an effective fly control program. It will help greatly to clean up all accumulation of manure and rotting straw twice a week.

This Picture Fan Drawn By Architectural Forms

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Phyllis Curtin is not the ususal camera fan. She has a passion for photographing architectural forms, preferably ancient castles, cathedrals and churches. She does it the hard way, too, by hiking, climbing, exploring — literally covering a lot of ground — to find the right angle for the complete picture or a small architectural detail. It takes stamina as well as historical knowledge.

It also takes a remarkable memory, as I discovered while looking through her photo albums of Europe and South America. Miss Curtin recalled the places, the time and the architectural background of each site without written reminders.

ASSET

But memory is a professional asset, for Miss Phyllis Curtin is one of America's youngest and prettiest opera and concert stars.

Her informal camera technique, however, is quite different from the rigid disciplines imposed on her as an opera and concert singer. Professionally, she had to be a perfectionist in fundamentals, training and practice. Photographically, she is impatient with rules and discipline and anything more than a filter is too burdensome to bother with.

"No light meter, no flash and no tripod for me," she says. "With the camera around my neck and extra film in my hand bag, I'm fully equipped for a day's exploration."

The camera, which she has had for the past 10 years, is a compact, 2¼x2¼, folding reflex with coupled rangefinder and f-2.8 lens (Zeiss-Ikon Super Ikonta B).

How did she gauge the exposures of certain "mood" shots in the album?

WEIRD

"It may sound weird," she says, "but I urge the camera to do the things I want. Perhaps a couple of years of trial and error gave me a basic feeling of exposure. Beyond that, I'm an optimist because I know and love my camera.

"There was the time in Scotland when we were approaching Edinburgh at dusk. It looked like a dream city in the failing light. I'm sure a light meter would have told me there wasn't enough light for a picture. There was no time to calculate proper exposure even if I had a meter so I opened the lens to its widest aperture and set the speed at 1-25th, the slowest speed one should shoot with a hand camera.

"The result was just right in mood and artistic feeling. I prefer it to one that might show sharp outlines and clear details.

IMPULSE

"I think camera fans ought to shoot more pictures on impulse instead of waiting till they have figured out all the exposure factors. If it doesn't work out, all they've lost is one negative. If it does work out, they've gained artistic satisfaction as well as the picture."

Miss Curtin's husband, Eugene Cook, former Life staffer and now a professional free lance photographer, came in at this point. He put down his bulging camera bag and made sure we wouldn't trip over his tripod. He put away his light meter, and I noticed his bag contained a Hasselbald outfit and a Rolleiflex with electronic flash attachment.

"Phyllis' architectural touch baffles me," Cook says, "but I'm delighted with the results. Other guys would use a view camera with tilts and swings but she just shoots away."

Though Miss Curtin's impulses are all architecturally inclined, once in a while something else impels her to trip the shutter. The one that caught my eye was of a burro suspended in a sling harness being ferried by cable wire across an impassable Peruvian mountain stream. She remarked that she followed by the same harness and route a little later.

"How come there's no picture of you in this rig?" I asked.

"It went so fast," she replied, "that by the time the burro took a meter reading, it was too late for the picture."

Debbie Hamilton, Judy Heckathorn, Lael Kilpatrick, Sally Kilpatrick, Salley Matthews, Marion Meriwether, Pat Milligan, Penny Nichols, Nancy K. Nolan, Valeria Roark, Sharron Stewart, Peggy Stone, Elizabeth Waters, Clare Wells, Kova Willis, and Paula Zagone. Many of the girls are now enrolled in swimming classes and are looking forward to fun at day camp in July.

The pottery instruction that was carried on at the office proved worthwhile for the 21 girls who participated. Each not only has a pinch pot, a tile, a figure, and a coil-method bowl to her credit, but she has earned the Pottery badge, as well. We'd like our readers to know that all Girl Scout work is original, no copying, no molds, no tracing. Wish you could see the pieces the girls made! They are justly proud. Mrs. Walter Bell, Jr., assisted with the courses. The following participated: Jane Allen, Martha Allen, Jane Brant, Janet Brueck, Omega Christian, Susan DeMasterson, Mary Einhorn, Brenda Hensley, Patricia Johnson, Jateen Kelley, Kathleen McCoy, Kay Otnott, Barbara Parrino, Carol Patterson, Delores Smale, Laurie Spatafora, Susan Stone, Betsy Taylor, Dottie Wood, Sherry Wood, and Carolyn Randall. It's just another opportunity that Scouting gives, furnishing an opportunity to explore new fields.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Dubach Club Holds Exhibit

By MARY JARDINE

By GLADYS M. KULCKE
Guest Writer

The flower arrangement last week in the Garden Center were furnished by the Dubach Garden Club.

Mrs. Herschel Colvin chose an antique glass bottle painted brown, placed on a brown base for her Hogarth line design. New growth of pine was used to make the Hogarth curve, with a cluster of artificial grapes extending down adding to the feeling of depth and completing the main body of the Hogarth curve. Ivy leaves served as transitional material and gave a background for the large orange dahlia placed at the mouth of the container. A lovely composition for a small table.

BROWN CONTAINER

For Mrs. Colvins second arrangement she used a brown wooden oblong container. A cup needlepoint holder was used to supply the water for her plant material. Yucca formed the vertical line of the triangle design. Curled loquat leaves added depth and distinction to the arrangement. Yellow dahlias were artistically placed low in the design.

Mrs. C. S. Fuller made an all foliage arrangement in a tan rectangle pottery container. The angular design was made of aspidistria and canna leaves, with reddish-green castor-bean leaves clustered at base of the design.

Mrs. Burl Davis chose a free-form tan and green pottery bowl for her triangle design. Aspidistria leaves formed the outline of the design. Begonia leaves were used for transition. The focal area was filled in with ligustrum blossoms. Very pleasing in combination of color and material, and a long lasting arrangement.

Flower show presented by the College Heights Garden Club of Monroe, Theme — Florae et Poetria, Time June 23rd, from 3:00 to 9:30 p.m. Place Memorial Methodist Church.

TREES

Ornamental trees are leafy shade trees, street trees, patio trees, that give a garden its charm, a community its character. Shade trees make ideal air conditioners for the house area. They give shade during the summer when it is needed and drop their leaves in the fall to let ample light into the house during the short days of winter.

It is important to be sure of the exact location of future trees before planting them. During the summer stakes can be driven where trees are needed for shade from the hot afternoon sun. Fruit trees work in with the planting on a small or large lot. The owner will have to spray the fruit trees to have an abundant crop of fine fruit.

Pick the best planting season to move a tree. Deciduous trees are best moved in late fall or early winter, after the leaves have dropped or early spring before the leaves unfurl. Evergreen trees may be planted at the same time.

Apple trees, with their low spreading branches are in character with the ranch type house. The smaller, denser varieties of crab apple trees is also a good tree to plant in the yard of a low ranch type house.

A tree's most active roots are out at the branch tips. Here is where the tree should be fed. Make an identical circle around the tree, so that the water and fertilizer will be held around the roots of the tree. Flood this basin every two weeks for about two years after transplanting.

Girl Scout News

High school girls who plan to serve as program aides at day camp will meet at the Girl Scout office, 513 Breard, at 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning. Program aides are invaluable assistants at camp, sharing their skills with younger girls. Adults on staff say they couldn't do half as good a job without the help of the girls. Registration for the first session of camp, July 4-15 is now closed. Training for staff and program aides is scheduled for the week of June 27.

Troop 23's fly-up ceremony was held in the Fellowship Hall of Highland Presbyterian church, with the families of the girls sharing the important occasion. After opening the program with an impressive flag ceremony, the girls explained the meaning of the Girl Scout Promise and Laws, using a trefoil made for them by Mr. Johnny Roan. Girls were invested and given their Girl Scout pins by their leaders, Mrs. Lamar Hayden and Mrs. B. B. McWhorter. The following were invested, receiving Brownie wings, as well as Girl Scout pins: Marilyn Bedgood, Bonnie Butler, Diane Barton, Debbie Baccus, Linda Gatlin, Kathy Grant, Sally Holstead, Paula Hayden, Susan McWhorter, Betty Plair, Kathleen Newcomer, Beverly Rogers, Gail Robertson, Ann Wiggins. The Reverend Earl Wiggins, pastor of the church, expressed his interest in the troop and in Scouting and pronounced a benediction.

Just starting on what we hope will prove to be an adventure for many years yet to come are the girls of Troop 13, which were organized just in time to meet membership requirements before school was out. Mrs. C. H. Wells and Mrs. William Bartlett are leaders of the troop, which meets in the parish house of Grace Episcopal Church. Mrs. T. W. Meriwether, Mrs. Floyd Stone, Jr., Mrs. Doyle Hamilton, Mrs. J. P. MMcCarthy, Mrs. J. C. Stewart and Mrs. E. F. Nolan serve on the troop committee. Invested as Brownies in the familiar "Twist me and turn me and show me the elf" ceremony were: Mary Clay Albright, Betty Jo Bartlett, Pamela Sue Butler, Patricia Conrad, Debbie Daniel,

Chinch bugs in St. Augustine grass lawns are difficult to control. The materials are expensive and must be applied properly if maximum results are to be expected.

Before you treat your lawn for chinch bugs, be sure they are causing the trouble. There is a disease that attacks St. Augustine grass which produces similar symptoms to chinch bug injury. A bucket or can with both ends removed may be used to check for the bugs.

Force the can into the ground in those areas of grass that are just beginning to turn brown, then fill the can with water. If chinch bugs are present they will float to the surface. You can recognize the adult bug by his black color and transparent wings which lie flat against his back.

Young bugs vary from reddish to black depending on their age. Your county or dome demonstration agent will give you information about the materials necessary to control these pests.

FATHER'S DAY

Today is Father's Day. Another day equal in importance to Mother's Day. In my reading, I found this poem by Andrew Gillies which shows great faith and admiration of son for father which has made great leaders of our country. I dedicate this lovely poem to all fathers who read my column:

CONFESSION

Last night my little boy confessed to me:
Some childish wrong:
And kneeling at my knee
He prayed with tears —
"Dear God, make me a man
Like Daddy — wise and strong.
I know you can."
Then while he slept
I knelt beside his bed,
Confessed my sins,
And prayed with low-bowed head.
"Oh God, make me a child
Like my child here—
Pure, guileless,

JUNE DAIRY MONTH

While our attention is being focused on Dairy Foods this month, let's compare milk with a few of our other important foods as to nutritional value, for instance, calcium: It takes 27 pounds of Irish potatoes to give the same amount of calcium as 1 quart of milk; 28 oranges and 39 eggs. It's so easy to drink a glass of milk at each meal which would equal a quart. But how long would it take you to eat 27 pounds of Irish potatoes or 39 eggs or 28 oranges to get that much needed calcium. Let's look at another food nutrition — protein. You must eat five eggs to get the same amount of protein as in one quart of milk; 16 slices of bread, five ounces of dried beans, 5½ ounces of liver or 5¾ ounces of beef. To be on the safe side remember to see that your children get that quart of milk each day; to provide the nutrients necessary for growth and good health.

HOT WATER SUPPLY

We rarely give it a thought, but it requires a lot of hot water to operate a modern home. In fact, a family of four will use an average of 130 gallons of hot water a day. Showers and baths require the most hot water — about 15 gallons for each shower and bath. The men in the family use about 3 gallons each time they shave, and every member of the family uses about 2 gallons in addition to bathing. Each time a meal is prepared, three gallons of hot water are needed. In figuring the size of water heater needed for your home the following is a pretty good guide: Allow about 20 gallons for each person, and figure each bathroom, clothes washer and dishwasher as a person.

SHOPPING SECRETS

A label or tag can tell you something or practically nothing. No longer can we tell garments fabric quality just by looking or feeling of the material. The experts can't either. An informative label or tag is your best buying guide. Some labels tell a "sweet story," but give little useful information. We can encourage good labeling by asking for informative tags and labels which indicate fabric performance — following informative directions faithfully — reading tags over carefully, and filing for future use.

A THOUGHT

What most of us need is not a new position but a new disposition.

SOUTHERN GARDNER

Color Plans Help Gardens

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The most beautiful gardens are not the ones in which a hodge - podge of different colors run riot, but the gardens in which some color scheme has been worked out. Every 10 days to two weeks the scheme may change with the passing different kinds of flowers, but there is always a dominating set of colors.

It is really not as difficult as you might think to work out some color schemes with the common flowers most of us have in our gardens. One of the first rules of the game is to use enough of one color to dominate the scene. Little dabs of many kinds of plants will never produce a strong effect. Since nearly every one has some favorite flower or color for each two weeks in the season, it is easiest to begin with these favorites.

EASIEST

Summer annuals and fall blooming bulbs that can soon be planted offer us the easiest chance to begin a color scheme. We cannot dig up the whole garden and rearrange it now, but we can begin to plan our colors while the garden is in summer bloom. Hall's amaryllis (Lycoris squamigera) and the many kinds of colchicums run to lavenders and pinkish lavenders and fit in with the numerous purples and mauves of late summer and early fall. From time to time, we have mentioned in the column that the combination of Sedum spectabile roseum and the colchicum called The Giant blooms together every year in late August or early September.

In spite of its long name, this sedum is just an improved form of the old "house leak" that grows in most everybody's yard in the South. Plant the colchicum croms 12 to 18 inches from the sedums to escape their hungry roots, and, if you like bright butter yellow for a contrast to "rosy lavender, plant some sternbergias among the colchicums. The sterinbergia foliage is evergreen like that of red spider - lilies and will provide a touch of green through the winter.

STRONG COLORS

When September comes around, we in the South can have all the strong colors of spring bulbs again by planting the fire red spider-lilies, the sternbergias and the violet colchicums. Our Northern friends cannot grow the spider-lilies and cannot grow sternbergias with the complete abandon with which Southerners do. In these two groups of bulbs, Southern gardeners have something unique. New kinds of spider-lilies and sternbergias are being created and introduced all the time, now, and will soon be on the market for all to buy.

When you begin to study color schemes, you will soon see that the grey foliage plants are a wonderful adjunct to your pictures. Grey foliage is a most pleasing softener for the hot summer sun. It seems to belong to almost any combination. Since white is not a color, but a combination of all colors, it "pulls all colors together." White and blue cool off our hot summer gardens, too, and elegant effects can be achieved with white alone.

Actress Discusses Husbands

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Diana Lynn says Hollywood actresses have a choice of two types of husbands, one a little more durable than the other.

"If you're an actress, you've got to decide what to do," she advised. "Are you going to act all your life or be a girl who gets married?

"Well, if you're the latter, you then have two choices for a husband. First, there's the guy who buys the airplane tickets and carries luggage for the actress once the wedding is over."

Miss Lynn said the second model is the fellow with a business capable of supporting his own household. Miss Lynn's husband, Los Angeles radio station executive Mortimer Hall, is in that category.

"I just can't go running off to Europe for a picture or New York to do a play," she said. "He naturally wants me home with him and the two children. And, he certainly couldn't go travelling around with me like the first type I spoke about. He's got a business to care for."

Miss Lynn, appearing on NBC-TV's "Mystery Show" Sunday night, says the type of husband who can pick up whenever his actress wife decides to travel is almost a pathetic fellow.

"You've seen them around town," she said, slouching down in a restaurant booth. "He's the kind of a man who rubs his wife's back and is sort of a personal maid.

"I've even seen it happen where the personal maid type of husband, in order to prove himself a man, drinks, tells dirty stories and pinches girls at parties.

"No real man likes to spend his life hanging around stage doors," she continued. "The second type of husband we're discussing would never tolerate that."

Thinking over the subject between bites of cold roast beef, Diana half way decided that actresses might not be good matrimonial bets themselves.

"Actresses are ruthless ladies," she said, almost as a warning to gentlemen hoping to grab off a sultry movie star for a bride.

Reliable Records Aid Taxpayers In Filing Returns

Chester A. Usry, district director of the Internal Revenue Service, has reminded taxpayers that keeping reliable books and records during 1960 will make filing a Federal Income Tax Return an easier task next April.

He stated that keeping books and records are required by law in order to help you file an accurate return and to permit IRS to determine whether your tax has been correctly figured.

"It isn't necessary to keep an elaborate set of books just as long as your records systematically and accurately show your income, deductions, credits, and other items required to be shown on your return," he said.

Usry also said it would be helpful in preparing future returns by keeping copies of all tax returns you file.

Russian Plans Aggravating Oil Surplus

HOUSTON (AP)—Russia's ambitious oil expansion program is aggravating the current world surplus of oil.

There is suspicion the desired immediate objective of the Russians is a needling effect on the oil economy of the free world.

A series of new trade agreements post threats in some areas to existing markets for free world oil.

The barter agreement proposals have popped up rather frequently the past year. Countries involved include Cuba, Canada, Ethiopia, Brazil, and Sweden.

Whatever the desired effect, the situation can be expected to draw increased emphasis in Moscow in the future.

The Russians hope to boost current crude production of about 3,-175,000 barrels a day to 4,500,000 by 1965. They are shooting for 7,-000,000 barrels a day or more by 1972.

GOALS

Coupled with the long-range production goals have been persistent reports of Russian plans for a 160,000 - mile pipe line system. Among other things, the system would place the Soviets in a much stronger position to grab a larger share of the Baltic area market.

Recent Russian maneuvers designed to boost exports may have been bolstered by the reported major oil discoveries in Siberia and the Colga-Ural region. One objective apparently is to boost Russian reserves as rapidly as possible.

An article written by Russian scientists and published last month by the Independent Petroleum Assn. of America said Soviet explorations in new areas last year exceeded development drilling for the first time.

The most recent maneuvers involve Cuba and Canada and, if carried out, would affect oil now coming from Saudia Arabia and Venezuela.

REFINERS

Three refiners—Texaco, Royal Dutch Shell, and Esso—have rejected a suggestion by the Cuban government that their Cuban refineries process Russian oil. The suggestion involved over one-third of the combined capacity of about 300,000 for the three refineries.

The new trade agreement with Cuba involves about 72 million barrels of Russian gasoline. The proposal has prompted protests from oilmen in Alberta. Government officials indicate no Canadian trade would be replaced but acknowledged the iron curtain gasoline would force some Middle East and Venezuelan oil to search for markets elsewhere.

The negotiations in Brazil have hit a snag. Brazil said the Soviet oil is too salty. About 3,500 barrels a day are involved.

Louisiana Oil Activities Are Higher In May

BATON ROUGE (UPI) — Louisiana Petroleum activities last May ran substantially higher than in May 1959, the state conservation department reported today.

The department said the increase in May reversed a downward trend seen in April.

Well completions in May reached 370, compared with 341 a year ago, and included 201 new oil wells and 66 new gas wells. The new wells had initial daily production of 16,272 barrels of crude oil and 6,293 barrels of condensate.

Drilling permits last month reached a 1960 high of 436, compared with 410 in May, 1959, and included 59 for exploratory wells and 75 in areas offshore.

At the end of the month, the department reported, there were 394 active drilling rigs, including 52 on wildcat locations.

Last month also saw the apparent discovery of four new fields: Point Chicot in Lafourche parish, Deep Bayou in Cameron parish, Righthand Creek in Beauregard parish and West Rosedale in Iberville parish.

There are also proved extensions of two known fields, Bell Isle in St. Mary parish and Opelousas field in St. Landry parish.

Cotton Features Somewhat Mixed

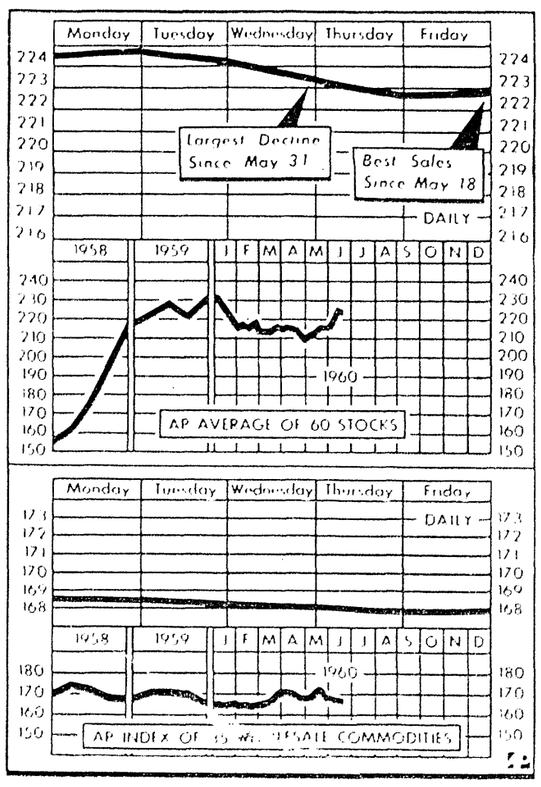
NEW YORK (AP) — The cotton futures market seesawed in a lazy fashion last week. Contracts closed 30 cents a bale lower to 50 cents a bale higher.

Sustaining factors were confined to a small amount of trade and mill price fixing, some short covering, and scattered demand from commission uses.

Meanwhile, offerings were furnished through scattered liquidation and most hedge selling. Bearish sentiment was influenced by generally favorable reports about the progress of the new crop.

Domestic mill consumption last month was in line with trade expectations. The Census Bureau reported that 7,100 bales were used against 7,000 a month earlier and 703,000 a year earlier.

FINANCIAL $ OIL-GAS NEWS



THE ASSOCIATED PRESS average of 60 stocks declined for the first time in three weeks when it closed at 222.9 from 224.5 a week earlier. $122 MILLION HIGHER

Balance Of Trade Shows Large Gains

NEW YORK (UPI) — America's balance of trade in the first four months of 1960 ran 122 million dollars higher than the balance for all of 1959.

And if the rate of trade gains continue, the year will see a big reduction, in our balance of payments deficit which last year set a record high at $3,700,000,000.

This deficit which has been growing steadily for years has been a thorn in the side of the economy. It represents the difference in what we buy abroad, foreign aid, military costs abroad, services, and spending of American tourists, and the amount we take in in the way of exports, foreign visitors here, and services for foreigners.

Experts, examining the prospects for reducing the deficit, have concluded that the best way to bring it down is through increased foreign trade. Hence a drive on the part of the government and industry to promote our exports.

RISE

At the same time we are benefitting through a smaller rise in imports. These were swollen last year by steel imports during the strike. This year also the shipments of foreign automobiles have been at a reduced rate of increase because of the competition with our own compact cars.

Our exports for the first four months of the year amounted to $6,307,000,000, up 22 per cent from 1959. At the same time our imports increased only 6 per cent to $5,058,000,000. This left a favorable trade balance of $1,249,000,000, against a balance of 399 million dollars in the corresponding period last year, and one of $1,427,-000,000 for all of 1959.

EXPORTS

A large amount of the increased exports in the first four months was made up of cotton and commercial airplanes. But there were gains also as a result of a drive spearheaded by government and industry to speed our sale of goods to foreign nations.

The success of our drive so far has disproved the statement that we have priced ourselves out of the foreign market. Industry has shaved costs of production wherever possible to keep prices down. And sales have been helped by the prosperity in Europe, which is seeking American goods in greater quantity.

TRADE

Some trade barriers against us have been removed or eased in foreign nations. More aid from this source is looked for and the United States anticipates there will be tariff adjustments in the not distant future which should help boost our sale of goods abroad.

Another point that pleases the experts on our showing in the first four months of this year is that it was made without our placing any impediments in the way of free trade. It is pointed out that we easily could impose restrictions that would quickly wipe out our foreign payments deficit but these, it is held, would bring on new and perhaps more serious complications.

Business Boosted During Past Week

By JACK LEFLER
Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — More jobs, more personal income and more industrial production heartened business the past week.

Even so, some economists felt that things ought to be better.

Employment rose by one million to 67,206,000, a record for May. Unemployment, in a normal decline for the month, went down by 200,000 to a total of 3,459,000.

Another record was set when personal income climbed to an annual rate of $399,400,000,000, a gain of $1,600,000,000 over the April rate. This occurred despite continued decline in steel production, which caused widespread layoffs.

For the first time since January, industrial output increased in May. The Federal Reserve Board reported that production of factories, mines, and utilities advanced to 110 per cent of the 1957 average. This was one per cent above April.

Dr. Evan Clague, commissioner of the Labor Department's Bureau of Statistics, discussing the economic situation, said: "Employment has not advanced in proportion to production, production is not rising as rapidly as we would like it to, and unemployment has remained at higher levels than we have usually experienced in a prosperity year."

The stock market found nothing to inspire it to maintain the romp of the previous week but slowly slid downhill.

Congress was busy on legislation which it was hoped would stir up the economic stream. The Senate added more than a billion dollars to the defense budget. A House committee approved a $1.-365,000,000 housing bill which would eliminate down payments on FHA homes costing up to $13.-500 and reduce them on more expensive homes.

Steel production inched up to an estimated 62.3 per cent of capacity the past week, but most industry authorities expected it to drop close to the 50 per cent level in July. Because of declining demand, Pittsburgh Steamship Co., a subsidiary of U.S. Steel Corp., laid up 13 of its Great Lakes ore carriers.

New car sales chalked up another increase in the first 10 days of June, when about 184,500 were delivered. This was 1.3 above the comparable 1959 period.

Production dipped to an estimated total of 137,000 cars from the previous week's 139,557, partly because of a wildcat strike at Ford Motor Co.'s Falcon - Comet assembly plant at Lorain, Ohio.

In the aircraft industry about 70,000 workers were striking, threatening to strike, or going back to their jobs after walkouts. Settlements included a strike at Convair which crippled or halted construction of facilities to launch the Atlas missile.

Long Island Railroad trainmen agreed to resume negotiations after setting a strike for this weekend. There were signs of a crack in the strike of Eastern Air Lines jet pilots.

Northern Pacific and the Great Northern were reported close to an agreement which would create the country's largest rail system.

The Chesapeake & Ohio asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to acquire control of the Baltimore & Ohio. The New York Central moved to get into this combination after urging the ICC to reject new applications for Eastern mergers until a thorough study of consolidations is made and new rules set up.

Improved weather helped retail trade to gains of up to four per cent over a year ago.

Wildcat Wells Being Tested In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) (AP) — Two wildcat wells now undergoing production tests brought prospects this week of new oil fields in Franklin and Amite counties.

In Franklin County near Bude, Larco Drilling Co. was testing the USA No. F-1, sec. 36-5n-3e, from perforations at 10,940-52 feet.

The well, reported to be swabbing an unestimated amount of oil, was drilling to 11,158 feet, with oil sand logged at 10,940-47 feet.

Justiss-Mears and D. C. Latimer started tests at the Campbell No. sec. 27-3n-3e, Amite County, after logging oil sand at 11,214-19 feet. It is located nine miles northeast of Liberty.

Also in Amite County, C. F. and H. Oil Co. continued tests on a wildcat, the Crosby No. 1, sec. 29-5n-5e, with no gauge available. Tests were from a perforated interval at 11,284-95 feet.

Justiss-Mears and Latimer were below 12,000 feet in another Amite wildcat, the Furlow No. 1, sec. 9-1n-5e, with 500 feet to contract depth.

Sun Oil Co. continued testing a Pike County wildcat, the Fernwood No. 1, sec. 36-3n-7e. Operators perforated casing at 10,925-30 feet and swabbed oil and salt water. The zone was cemeted to shut off the salt water and was being reperforated.

In Marion County, Texaco-Seaboard completed a wildcat, the board of supervisors No. 1, sec. 16-2n-12e, as a dual gas producer.

Texaco-Seaboard was also drilling below 13,260 in he Padge No. 1, sec. 14-2n-12e, Marion County. No information was released.

Barnwell Drilling Co. was below 9,300 fee in a Pike County wildcat, the Illinois Central No. 1, sec. 12-3n-7e, located in the city limits of McComb.

Also in Pike County, Offshore Drilling Co. and Jett Drilling Co. were below 9,100 feet in a wildcat, the Federal Land Bank No. 1, sec. 27-2n-9e.

In Amite County, Drilling and Exploration Co. set surface casing in the Lemon No. 1, sec. 32-4n-6e, and Larco Drilling Co. was below 10,980 feet in the USA No. 1 1-15, sec. 15-4n-3e.

Field drilling the past week brought three new oilers and two gas condensate wells.

At McComb in Pike County, Sun Oil completed the Lampton-Wallace No. D-1, sec. 22-3n-7e, which flowed 269 barrels daily from perforations at 10,917-23 feet.

Sun and J. Willis Hughes completed the Hart No. 1, sec. 10-3n-7e, Pike County, which flowed 204 barrels per day from perforations at 10,377-79 feet.

In the Diamond Field of Wayne County, Skelton Operating Co. completed the Evans No. 1, sec. 36-10n-7w, which pumped 225 barrels daily from a sand at 9,477-81 feet.

In Marion County, Moon and Hurley completed the Merritt No. 1, sec. 30-2n-14e, which flowed 2,-530,000 cubic feet of gas per day and 50 barrels of condensate from perforations at 9,173-80 feet.

At Pistol Ridge in Pearl River County, Lee and Ladner completed the unit No. 11, sec. 13-1s-14w, which flowed 2,050,000 cubic feet of gas per day and an unestimated amount of condensate from perforations at 8,038-42 feet.

GOP Head Asks View On Platform

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man who will preside over writing the Republican platform invited Americans Saturday to present their views on what the document should say.

New ideas will be the keynote, he said.

Charles H. Percy, Chicago businessman and Platform Committee chairman, asked representatives of national and regional organizations to submit statements at public hearings before eight subcommittees in Chicago July 20 and 21. The GOP convention will open July 25.

Individuals were invited to submit their views in writing because pressure of time will permit the subcommittees to hear only group testimony at the public sessions.

Percy said the Platform Committee will organize Tuesday, July 19, in the Crystal Ballroom of the Sheraton-Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, and begin preliminary work on the document. Public hearings start the next day and will be open to news media.

"We urge and will welcome suggestions from individuals and national and regional groups," Percy said in a statement. "We want to consider a wide range of opinion from every segment of American life.

"As we move into the decade of the 60s, the challenges and opportunities require us to encourage, examine and consider every possible new idea, and this is to be the spirit of the development of our 1960 platform.

"In fact, we suggest that organizations and individuals do not limit their presentation only to immediate goals.

MANY FAILITIES BUILD WITH NEW HOMES

New Subdivisions Are Including 'Extras'

NEW YORK (AP) — Today's homebuild is being forced to diversify by the increasing competition in the home - buying mkt.

These builders are including bowling alleys, super markets, schools and numerous other extra - sidential facilities in their le colonies to attract their - increasing number of tential home owners.

In the past, ho purchasers frequently had to travel miles to find such facilities or wait several yea until commerical exploitation of the area caught up with dential construction.

Families looking for mes no longer are satisfied h a dwelling place only - matter how substantial or gracious the construction. Thus residential builders are finding themselves investing heavily in non - residential construction with their projects.

EXTRAS

Builders also are installing extras in many instances to beautify their developemnts or make things more convenient for the home owner. Trees are being added along roadways, sidewalks constructed and storm sewers put in.

At least one builder has gone so far as to erect schools at his development without waiting for federal or local aid. In a colony of 2,000 homes, three schools have been put up by the builders at a cost of more than $750,-000, and donated to the community.

And there are some builders who have taken it upon themselves to make sure their development isn't plagued by a problem that long has troubled many suburban communities - sewage disposal. They have built sewage disposal. They have built sewage disposal plants which make it possible to eliminate septic tanks, usually troublesome and relatively expensive to maintain.

OUTLOOK

House & Home, professional magazine of the house industry, says the outlook for new house sales in 1960 has been brightened by the easing availability of mortgage money.

Builders in many cities are reporting an increase in sales although houses started during the first four months of 1960 still are 18.5 per cent below the 1959 level.

Norman P. Mason, housing and home finance administrator, predicts America will produce more housing units in the last six months of this year than in the like 1959 period.

He cautions, however, that the housing market in the second half will be pretty evenly balanced between buyers and sellers.

Reliable Records Aid Taxpayers In Filing Returns

Chester A. Usry, district director of the Internal Revenue Service, has reminded taxpayers that keeping reliable books and records during 1960 will make filing a Federal Income Tax Return an easier task next April.

He stated that keeping books and records are required by law in order to help you file an accurate return and to permit IRS to determine whether your tax has been correctly figured.

"It isn't necessary to keep an elaborate set of books just as long as your records systematically and accurately show your income, deductions, credits, and other items required to be shown on your return," he said.

Usry also said it would be helpful in preparing future returns by keeping copies of all tax returns you file.

Louisiana Oil Activities Are Higher In May

BATON ROUGE (UPI) — Louisiana Petroleum activities last May ran substantially higher than in May 1959, the state conservation department reported today.

The department said the increase in May reversed a downward trend seen in April.

Well completions in May reached 370, compared with 341 a year ago, and included 201 new oil wells and 66 new gas wells. The new wells had initial daily production of 16,272 barrels of crude oil and 6,293 barrels of condensate.

Drilling permits last month reached a 1960 high of 436, compared with 410 in May, 1959, and included 59 for exploratory wells and 75 in areas offshore.

At the end of the month, the department reported, there were 394 active drilling rigs, including 52 on wildcat locations.

Last month also saw the apparent discovery of four new fields; Point Chicot in Lafourche parish, Deep Bayou in Cameron parish, Righthand Creek in Beauregard parish and West Rosedale in Iberville parish.

There are also proved extensions of two known fields, Bell Isle in St. Mary parish and Opelousas field in St. Landry parish.

Russian Plans Aggravating Oil Surplus

HOUSTON (AP)—Russia's ambitious oil expansion program is aggravating the current world surplus of oil.

There is suspicion the desired immediate objective of the Russians is a needling effect on the oil economy of the free world.

A series of new trace agreements post threats in some areas to existing markets for free world oil.

The barter agreement proposals have popped up rather frequently the past year. Countries involved include Cuba, Canada, Ethiopia, Brazil, and Sweden.

Whatever the desired effect, the situation can be expected to draw increased emphasis in Moscow in the future.

The Russians hope to boost current crude production of about 3,-173,000 barrels a day to 4,500,000 by 1965. They are shooting for 7,-000,000 barrels a day or more by 1972.

GOALS

Coupled with the long-range production goals have been persistent reports of Russian plans for a 160,000 - mile pipe line system. Among other things, the system would place the Soviets in a much stronger position to grab a larger share of the Baltic area market.

Recent Russian maneuvers designed to boost exports may have been bolstered by the reported major oil discoveries in Siberia and the Colga-Ural region. One objective apparently is to boost Russian reserves as rapidly as possible.

An article written by Russian scientists and published last month by the Independent Petroleum Assn. of America said Soviet explorations in new areas last year exceeded development drilling for the first time.

The most recent maneuvers involve Cuba and Canada and, if carried out, would affect oil now coming from Saudia Arabia and Venezuela.

REFINERS

Three refiners—Texaco, Royal Dutch Shell, and Esso—have rejected a suggestion by the Cuban government that their Cuban refineries process Russian oil. The question involved over one-third of the combined capacity of about 80,0 for the three refineries.

The new trade agreement with Cuba involves about 72 million barrels of Russian gasoline. The proposal has prompted protests from oilmen in Alberta. Government officials indicate no Canadian crude would be replaced but acknowledged the iron curtain gasoline would force some Middle East and Venezuelan oil to search for markets elsewhere.

The negotiations in Brazil have hit a snag. Brazil said the Soviet oil is too salty. About 3,500 barrels a day are involved.

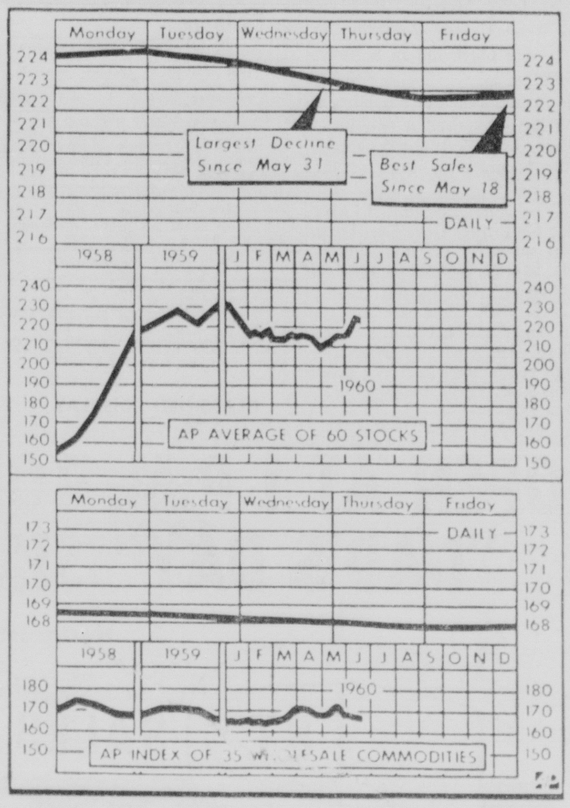
Cotton Features Somewhat Mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The cotton futures market seesawed in a lazy fashion again last week. Contracts closed 30 cents a bale lower to 50 cents a bale higher.

Sustaining factors were confined to a small amount of trade and mill price fixing, some short covering, and scattered demand from commission houses.

Meanwhile, offerings were furnished through scattered liquidation and most hedge selling. Bearish sentiment was influenced by generally unfavorable reports about the prospects of the new crop.

Domestic mill consumption last month was in line with trade expectations. The Census Bureau reported that 7,000 bales were used against 7,000 a month earlier and 703,000 a year earlier.



THE ASSOCIATED PRESS average of 60 stocks declined for the first time in three weeks when it closed at 222.9 from 224.5 a week earlier. The commodity index continued to decline for the fifth week in a row, closing at 168.0 from 168.5 in the preceding period. Livestock and grains were big losers. (AP Wirephoto)

$122 MILLION HIGHER

Balance Of Trade Shows Large Gains

NEW YORK (UPI) — America's balance of trade in the first four months of 1960 ran 122 million dollars higher than the balance for all of 1959.

And if the rate of trade gains continue, the year will see a big reduction, in our balance of payments deficit which last year set a record high at $3,700,000,000.

This deficit which has been growing steadily for years has been a thorn in the side of the economy. It represents the difference in what we buy abroad, foreign aid, military costs abroad, services, and spending of American tourists, and the amount we take in in the way of exports, foreign visitors here, and services for foreigners.

Experts, examining the prospects for reducing the deficit, have concluded that the best way to bring it down is through increased foreign trade. Hence a drive on the part of the government and industry to promote our exports.

RISE

At the same time we are benefitting through a smaller rise in imports. These were swollen last year by steel imports during the strike. This year also the shipments of foreign automobiles have been at a reduced rate of increase because of the competition with our own compact cars.

Our exports for the first four months of the year amounted to $6,307,000,000, up 22 per cent from 1959. At the same time our imports increased only 6 per cent to $5,053,000,000. This left a favorable trade balance of $1,249,000,000, against a balance of 399 million dollars in the corresponding period last year, and one of $1,127,-000,000 for all of 1959.

EXPORTS

A large amount of the increased exports in the first four months was made up of cotton and commercial airplanes. But there were gains also as a result of a drive spearheaded by government and industry to speed our sale of goods to foreign nations.

The success of our drive so far has disproved the statement that we have priced ourselves out of the foreign market. Industry has shaved costs of production wherever possible to keep prices down. And sales have been helped by the prosperity in Europe, which is seeking American goods in greater quantity.

TRADE

Some trade barriers against us have been removed or eased in foreign nations. More aid from this source is looked for and the United States anticipates there will be tariff adjustments in the not distant future which should help boost our sale of goods abroad.

Another point that pleases the experts on our showing in the first four months of this year is that it was made without our placing any impediments in the way of free trade. It is pointed out that we easily could impose restrictions that would quickly wipe out our foreign payments deficit but these, it is held, would bring on new and perhaps more serious complications.

Business Boosted During Past Week

By JACK LEFLER
Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — More jobs, more personal income and more industrial production heartened business the past week.

Even so, some economists felt that things ought to be better.

Employment rose by one million to 67,203,000, a record for May. Unemployment, in a normal decline for the month, went down by 200,000 to a total of 3,459,000.

Another record was set when personal income climbed to an annual rate of $399,400,000,000, a gain of $1,600,000,000 over the April rate. This occurred despite continued decline in steel production, which caused widespread layoffs.

For the first time since January, industrial output increased in May. The Federal Reserve Board reported that production of factories, mines, and utilities advanced to 110 per cent of the 1957 average. This was one per cent above April.

Dr. Evan Clague, commissioner of the Labor Department's Bureau of Statistics, discussing the economic situation, said: "Employment has not advanced in proportion to production, production is not rising as rapidly as we would like it to, and unemployment has remained at higher levels than we have usually experienced in a prosperity year."

The stock market found nothing to inspire it to maintain the romp of the previous week but slowly slid downhill.

Congress was busy on legislation which it was hoped would stir up the economic stream. The Senate added more than a billion dollars to the defense budget. A House committee approved a $1,-365,000,000 housing bill which would eliminate down payments on FHA homes costing up to $13,-500 and reduce them on more expensive homes.

Steel production inched up to an estimated 62.3 per cent of capacity the past week, but most industry authorities expected it to drop close to the 50 per cent level in July. Because of declining demand, Pittsburgh Steamship Co., a subsidiary of U.S. Steel Corp., laid up 13 of its Great Lakes ore carriers.

New car sales chalked up another increase in the first 10 days of June, when about 184,500 were delivered. This was 1.3 above the comparable 1959 period.

Production dipped to an estimated total of 137,000 cars from the previous week's 139,557, partly because of a wildcat strike at Ford Motor Co.'s Falcon - Comet assembly plant at Lorain, Ohio.

Strikes and threats of strikes upset other industries.

In the aircraft industry about 70,000 workers were striking, threatening to strike, or going back to their jobs after walkouts. Settlements included a strike at Convair which crippled or halted construction of facilities to launch the Atlas missile.

Long Island Railroad trainmen agreed to resume negotiations after setting a strike for this weekend. There were signs of a crack in the strike of Eastern Air Lines jet pilots.

Northern Pacific and the Great Northern were reported close to an agreement which would create the country's largest rail system.

The Chesapeake & Ohio asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to acquire control of the Baltimore & Ohio. The New York Central moved to get into this combination after urging the ICC to reject new applications for Eastern mergers until a thorough study of consolidations is made and new rules set up.

Improved weather helped retail trade to gains of up to four per cent over a year ago.

Briefly around the business scene: Americans will spend more than 2½ billion dollars on foreign travel this year. . .B. Altman Co. of New York, offering short-sleeved suits for men, concedes the style may be ahead of its Time. . .Prudential Insurance Co. agreed to lend 30 million dollars to Kobe Steelworks, Ltd. of Japan . . .President John W. Remington of the American Bankers Assn. said commercial banks will spend 300 million dollars a year on advertising by 1965. . .Horizons, Inc., of Cleveland developed a new fiber which it says is as hard as sapphires and can withstand temperatures up to 4,750 degrees.

Wildcat Wells Being Tested In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) (AP) — Two wildcat wells now undergoing production tests brought prospects this week of new oil fields in Franklin and Amite counties.

In Franklin County near Bude, Larco Drilling Co. was testing the USA No. F-1, sec. 36-5n-3e, from perforations at 10,940-52 feet.

The well, reported to be swabbing an unestimated amount of oil, was drilling to 11,158 feet, with oil sand logged at 10,940-47 feet.

Justiss-Mears and D. C. Latimer started tests at the Campbell No. sec. 27-3n-53, Amite County, after logging oil sand at 11,214-19 feet. It is located nine miles northeast of Liberty.

Also in Amite County, C. F. and H. Oil Co. continued tests on a wildcat, the Crosby No. 1, sec. 29-3n-5e, with no gauge available. Tests were from a perforated interval at 11,284-95 feet.

Justiss-Mears and Latimer were below 12,000 feet in another Amite wildcat, the Furlow No. 1, sec. 9-1n-5e, with 500 feet to contract depth.

Sun Oil Co. continued testing a Pike County wildcat, the Fernwood No. 1, sec. 36-3n-7e. Operators perforated casing at 10,925-30 feet and swabbed oil and salt water. The zone was cemeted to shut off the salt water and was being reperforated.

In Marion County, Texaco-Seaboard completed a wildcat, the board of supervisors No. 1, sec. 16-2n-12e, as a dual gas producer.

Texaco-Seaboard was also drilling below 13,260 in he Padge No. 1, sec. 14-2n-123, Marion County. No informaion was released.

Barnwell Drilling Co. was below 9,300 fee in a Pike County wildcat, the Illinois Central No. 1, sec. 12-3n-7e, located in the city limits of McComb.

Also in Pike County, Offshore Drilling Co. and Jett Drilling Co. were below 9,100 feet in a wildcat, the Federal Land Bank No. 1, sec. 27-2n-9e.

In Amite County, Drilling and Exploration Co. set surface casing in the Lemon No. 1, sec. 32-4n-6e, and Larco Drilling Co. was below 10,980 feet in the USA No. 1 1-15, sec. 15-4n-3e.

Field drilling the past week brought three new oilers and two gas condensate wells.

At McComb in Pike County, Sun Oil completed the Lampton-Wallace No. D-1, sec. 22-3n-7e, which flowed 269 barrels daily from perforations at 10,917-23 feet.

Sun and J. Willis Hughes completed the Hart No. 1, sec. 10-3n-7e, Pike County, which flowed 204 barrels per day from perforations at 10,877-79 feet.

In the Diamond Field of Wayne County, Skelton Operating Co. completed the Evans No. 1, sec. 36-10n-7w, which pumped 225 barrels daily from a sand at 9,477-81 feet.

In Marion County, Moon and Hurley completed the Merritt No. 1, sec. 30-2n-14e, which flowed 2,-530,000 cubic feet of gas per day and 50 barrels of condensate from perforations at 9,178-80 feet.

At Pistol Ridge in Pearl River County, Lee and Ladner completed the unit No. 11, sec. 13-1s-14w, which flowed 2,050,000 cubic feet of gas per day and an unestimated amount of condensate from perforations at 8,038-42 feet.

GOP Head Asks View On Platform

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man who will preside over writing the Republican platform invited Americans Saturday to present their views on what the document should say.

New ideas will be the keynote, he said.

Charles H. Percy, Chicago businessman and Platform Committee chairman, asked representatives of national and regional organizations to submit statements at public hearings before eight subcommittees in Chicago July 20 and 21. The GOP convention will open July 25.

Individuals were invited to submit their views in writing because pressure of time will permit the subcommittees to hear only group testimony at the public sessions.

Percy said the Platform Committee will organize Tuesday, July 19, in the Crystal Ballroom of the Sheraton-Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, and begin preliminary work on the document. Public hearings start the next day and will be open to news media.

"We urge and will welcome suggestions from individuals and national and regional groups," Percy said in a statement. "We want to consider a wide range of opinion from every segment of American life.

"As we move into the decade of the 60s, the challenges and opportunities require us to encourage, examine and consider every possible new idea, and this is to be the spirit of the development of our 1960 platform.

"In fact, we suggest that organizations and individuals do not limit their presentation only to immediate goals.

MANY FAILITIES BUILD WITH NEW HOMES

New Subdivisions Are Including 'Extras'

NEW YORK (AP — Today's homebuilder is being forced to diversify by the increasing competition in the home - buying market.

These builders are including bowling alleys, super markets, schools and numerous other extra - residential facilities in their new colonies to attract the ever - increasing number of potential home owners.

In the past, home purchasers frequently had to travel miles to find such facilities or wait several years until commerical exploitation of the area caught up with residential construction.

Families looking for homes no longer are satisfied with a dwelling place only - matter how substantial or gracious the construction. Thus residential builders are finding themselves investing heavily in non - residential construction with their projects.

EXTRAS

Builders also are installing extras in many instances to beautify their developemnts or make things more convenient for the home owner. Trees are being added along roadways, sidewalks constructed and storm sewers put in.

At least one builder has gone so far as to erect schools at his development without waiting for federal or local aid. In a colony of 2,000 homes, three schools have been put up by the builders at a cost of more than $750,-000, and donated to the community.

And there are some builders who have taken it upon themselves to make sure their development isn't plagued by a problem that long has troubled many suburban communities - sewage disposal. They have built sewage disposal. They have built sewage disposal plants which make it possible to eliminate septic tanks, usually troublesome and relatively expensive to maintain.

OUTLOOK

House & Home, professional magazine of the house industry, says the outlook for new house sales in 1960 has been brightened by the easing availability of mortgage money.

Builders in many cities are reporting an increase in sales although houses started during the first four months of 1960 still are 18.5 per cent below the 1959 level.

Norman P. Mason, housing and home finance administrator, predicts America will produce more housing units in the last six months of this year than in the like 1959 period.

He cautions, however, that the housing market in the second half will be pretty evenly balanced between buyers and sellers.

City Celebrates 350th Birthday

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP)—The city celebrating its 350th birthday claims Santa Fe was:

The "ancient city of the Holy Faith," a melting pot of three cultures, is observing a 10-day anniversary festival.

Old Santa Fe, famed in song and story, will be marking its founding in 1610 by explorers from Mexico. It became the capital of the vast Spanish territory of New Mexico and is the oldest capital city in the United States.

Both adobe and stone were used in the building of the city's many fine, ornate churches and mansions. Despite the population of 43,000 it's hard to preserve the foreign flavor in the older sections, built of narrow, winding streets lighted by mud-walled homes.

The adobe Palace of the Governors, erected in 1610 to serve as the seat of government, is the oldest public building in the country. The city also is said to have this country's oldest church and oldest house still standing.

It was founded as La Villa Real de la Santa Fe de San Francisco de Asisi. Five governments have ruled the town — Spanish, Indian, Mexican, Confederate and the United States.

Its origin involved men of the cross, the Pueblo Indian revolt of 1680, the bloodless reconquest of 1692 by Captain-General Don Diego de Vargas Zapata Lujan Ponce de Leon, then 150 years under the Spanish crown.

The promise of gold was part of the lure that led to exploration and colonization of the area. But Spain also wanted to protect her rich holdings in Mexico and Central America from the threat of French expeditions from the north and east.

Catholic missionaries also trekked into the new land seeking to convert the Pueblo Indians to Christianity. They were followed by soldiers armed for the wild Apaches of the Rio Grande Valley.

The Vargas procession, to be held in June on the two Sundays following Corpus Christi Sunday. The wooden statue of Our Lady of the Assumption — La Conquistadora — is carried from its chapel at St. Francis Cathedral through the streets to another chapel about a mile away.

The statue, carved in Mexico, was carried to Santa Fe by De Vargas as a symbol of the blessed Virgin's patronage.

La Conquistadora was singled out for special honor during the 50th anniversary year. Papal coronation was authorized by Pope John XXIII, and a crown was fashioned of precious metals and

Louisiana Will Keep Penalty Of Death

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Louisiana will keep the death penalty.

Rep. Jesse McLain, St. Tammany Parish, said Saturday he will let his move die in a House Committee.

His constitutional amendment would have required a two-thirds majority vote in House and Senate, and public approval at the polls.

The onetime assistant floor leader for former Gov. Earl Long, now a supporter of Gov. Jimmie Davis, said he reluctantly reached his decision after testing legislative sentiment.

Louisiana has not operated its electric chair in 20 months, although condemned men still sit in various jails. Various appeals have caused delays.

SANTA FE

City Celebrates 350th Birthday

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP)—They're celebrating their 350th birthday down Santa Fe way.

This "ancient city of the Holy Faith," a melting pot of three cultures, is observing a 10-day anniversary festival.

Old Santa Fe, famed in song and story, will be marking its founding in 1610 by explorers from Mexico. It became the capital of the vast Spanish territory of New Mexico and is thus the oldest capital city in the United States.

Both admirers and critics agree Santa Fe is a different kind of city. It staunchly resists change and jealously guards the old world charm that draws tourists.

Santa Fe claims it is unlike any other city in the nation, disdaining straight streets and uniformity, the population of 40,000 fights hard to preserve the foreign flavor in its older sections, born of narrow, winding dirt streets tightly bordered by mud-walled homes.

Its adobe Palace of the governors, erected in 1610 to serve as the seat of government, is the oldest public building in the country. The city also is said to have this country's oldest church and oldest house still standing.

It was founded as La Villa Real de la Santa Fe de San Francisco de Assisi. Five governments have ruled the town — Spanish Indian, Mexican, Confederate and the United States.

Its often turbulent way of life saw the Pueblo Indian revolt of 1680, the bloodless reconquest of the city in 1692 by Capitan-General Don Diego de Vargas Zapata Lujan Ponce de Leon, then 150 years under the Spanish crown.

The promise of gold was part of the lure that led to exploration and colonization of the area. But Spain also wanted to protect her rich holdings in Mexico and Central America from the threat of French expeditions from the north and east.

Catholic missionaries also moved into the new land, seeking to convert the Pueblo Indians to Christianity. They were followed by settlers attracted by the rich farmlands of the Rio Grande Valley.

De Vargas' reconquest of Santa Fe from the Indians has given birth to two annual rites observed by townspeople, both largely religious in nature.

The first of these, the annual De Vargas procession, is held in June on the two Sundays following Corpus Christi Sunday. The wooden statue of Our Lady of the Assumption — La Conquistadora — is carried from its chapel at St. Francis Cathedral through the streets to another chapel about a mile away.

The statue, carved in Mexico, was carried to Santa Fe by De Vargas as a symbol of the blessed Virgin's patronage.

La Conquistadora was singled out for special honor during the 50th anniversary year. Papal coronation was authorized by Pope John XXIII, and a crown was fashioned of precious metals and jewels donated by New Mexico parishioners. At ceremonies June 26 the statue will receive its crown.

The second tradition observed yearly in the capital city is the annual fiesta, the oldest community celebration in the United States. It is held during the Labor Day weekend and traditionally signals the end of the summer tourist season. This year's fiesta is the 248th. It also commemorates De Vargas' return to the city in 1692.

The ancient city also received an official niche in American history when its most famous landmark, the Palace of Governors, went on the face of a U. S. postage stamp. The new 11-cent stamp is part of the Postoffice Department's "shrines of America" series.

New Orleans Man Flies For U.S. Senator

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — William Dane of New Orleans said Saturday he has filed as a candidate for the Republican nomination for U. S. senator.

Dane, a former real estate salesman, said he and Vice President Richard Nixon had been firm friends since the 1952 Republican convention in Chicago.

If nominated, Dane said, he will wage an aggressive campaign for election.

Why feed 'em when you don't need 'em

Volkswagen Trucks need less horsepower because they have less dead weight. Their rugged, unitized steel bodies are braced and balanced like the fuselage of a plane. Their rear-mounted air-cooled engines are all muscle—No fat.

That's why they can climb 25% grades fully loaded—and still deliver more gas economy than usual trucks. They do twice the job at half the cost.

The Volkswagen Panel Delivery shown here carries 1,830 lbs. in 170 cu. ft. And it cost only $1895 p.o.e.

Why feed 'em when you don't need 'em

Volkswagen Trucks need less horsepower because they have less dead weight. Their rugged, unitized steel bodies are braced and balanced like the fuselage of a plane. Their rear-mounted air-cooled engines are all muscle—No fat.

That's why they can climb 25% grades fully loaded—and still deliver more gas economy than usual trucks. They do twice the job at half the cost.

The Volkswagen Panel Delivery shown here carries 1,830 lbs. in 170 cu. ft. And it cost only $1895 p.o.e.

SUMMER INSTITUTE

Dr. Edward Amis Northeast Speaker

A University of Arkansas professor of physical chemistry who won an award last year for distinguished service to chemistry in the South will be guest speaker this week at Northeast Louisiana State College.

Dr. Edward S. Amis, a leader in the field of physical chemistry, will give talks Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings.

Amis is one of seven guest scientists who will address the Summer Institute in Biology and Chemistry being held at Northeast. The nine- week institute, financed by a National Science Founaation grant, is designed to bring the 30 participating high-school science teachers up - to - date on current trends in biology and chemistry.

Dr. Aaron Seamster, chairman of Northeast's biology department, is director of the institute, which lasts through Aug. 6. Dr. William K. Easley, chairman of the Northeast chemistry department, is in charge of the chemistry section.

Dr. Amis will talk on the general topic of kinetics of chemical reactions. He will speak at 8 a.m. on each of the three days in 100 Administration Building on the Northeast campus.

Amis was the recipient in 1959 of the Southern Chemist Award, which honors distinguished service to chemistry in the South and is designed to focus national attention on scientific progress in this region. The award is supported by the Southern Chemistry magazine, publication for local sections of the American Chemical Society in the South.

The Arkansas professor received his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Kentucky and his Ph.D. from Columbia University. He has been a member of the faculty at the University of Kentucky, Columbia University, Louisiana State University and the University of Arkansas.

Amis' research in chemical kinetics and on the physical and chemical properties of substances in mixed solvents has made him a recognized leader in the field of physical chemistry. His book, "Kinetics of Chemical Change in Solutions," is widely used in this country and abroad as a reference text in kinetic courses.

Amis is the author of more than 80 technical papers, and he has participated in many physical - chemistry symposia.

Cuba Bank Head Warns Oil Firms

HAVANA (AP) — Maj. Ernesto (Che) Guevara, president of the National Bank of Cuba, told a TV audience Saturday "another great power has the oil, the ships to carry it in, and the disposition to supply us with all we need."

His statement was regarded as another warning to the American and Dutch-British oil companies who refused to accept Soviet crude oil processing in their refineries, that the Castro government is taking steps preliminary to confiscation of their Cuban plants unless they cooperate.

Guevara did not name the power but he plainly referred to the Soviet Union with which a Castro commercial mission signed an agreement to trade sugar for crude oil and petroleum products in Moscow.

Prime Minister Fidel Castro attacked the three foreign companies—Esso Standard, Texaco and Shell—earlier this week for their refusal to process Soviet oil in their Cuban plants.

Guevara said a lack of petroleum here could "bring our revolutionary program to a halt."

"But fortunately we are not faced with that dilemma," he went on, "Because we are not alone. We have friends who have the oil we need and the resources to deliver it here."

Discussing the foreign tours of Cuba's President Osvaldo Dorticos and President Eisenhower, Guevara said of the latter: "That poor President—his situation is most critical."

3 Killed, 10 Hurt As Fire Sweeps Rooming House

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Three persons were killed and 10 others burned Saturday in a fire that swept a four-story rooming house in South Philadelphia.

One of the victims was identified tentatively as Charles Tabb, 55. The others—a man and a woman—were not immediately identified.

Some 40 other roomers in the dwelling fled to safety.

SUMMER INSTITUTE

Dr. Edward Amis Northeast Speaker

A University of Arkansas professor of physical chemistry who won an award last year for distinguished service to chemistry in the South will be guest speaker this week at Northeast Louisiana State College.

Dr. Edward S. Amis, a leader in the field of physical chemistry, will give talks Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings.

Amis is one of seven guest scientists who will address the Summer Institute in Biology and Chemistry being held at Northeast. The nine-week institute, financed by a National Science Founaation grant, is designed to bring the 30 participating high-school science teachers up-to-date on current trends in biology and chemistry.

Dr. Aaron Seamster, chairman of Northeast's biology department, is director of the institute, which lasts through Aug. 6. Dr. William K. Easley, chairman of the Northeast chemistry department, is in charge of the chemistry section.

Dr. Amis will talk on the general topic of kinetics of chemical reactions. He will speak at 8 a.m. on each of the three days in 100 Administration Building on the Northeast campus.

Amis was the recipient in 1959 of the Southern Chemist Award, which honors distinguished service to chemistry in the South and is designed to focus national attention on scientific progress in this region. The award is supported by the Southern Chemistry magazine, publication for local sections of the American Chemical Society in the South.

The Arkansas professor received his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Kentucky and his Ph.D. from Columbia University. He has been a member of the faculty at the University of Kentucky, Columbia University, Louisiana State University and the University of Arkansas.

Amis' research in chemical kinetics and on the physical and chemical properties of substances in mixed solvents has made him a recognized leader in the field of physical chemistry. His book, "Kinetics of Chemical Change in Solutions," is widely used in this country and abroad as a reference text in kinetic courses.

Amis is the author of more than 80 technical papers, and he has participated in many physical-chemistry symposia.

HARVEST DOUBLED

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) —Virginia hunters killed 3,575 wild turkeys in the 1959-60 season. This was more than double the number birds killed the year before.

DR. EDWARD S. AMIS

Cuba Bank Head Warns Oil Firms

HAVANA (AP) — Maj. Ernesto (Che) Guevara, president of the National Bank of Cuba, told a TV audience Saturday "another great power has the oil, the ships to carry it in, and the disposition to supply us with all we need."

His statement was regarded as another warning to the American and Dutch-British oil companies who refused to accept Soviet crude oil processing in their refineries, that the Castro government is taking steps preliminary to confiscation of their Cuban plants unless they cooperate.

Guevara did not name the power but he plainly referred to the Soviet Union with which a Castro commercial mission signed an agreement to trade sugar for crude oil and petroleum products in Moscow.

Prime Minister Fidel Castro attacked the three foreign companies—Esso Standard, Texaco and Shell—earlier this week for their refusal to process Soviet oil in their Cuban plants.

Guevara said a lack of petroleum here could "bring our revolutionary program to a halt."

"But fortunately we are not faced with that dilemma," he went on, "Because we are not alone. We have friends who have the oil we need and the resources to deliver it here."

Discussing the foreign tours of Cuba's President Osvaldo Dorticos and President Eisenhower, Guevara said of the latter: "That poor President—his situation is most critical."

3 Killed, 10 Hurt As Fire Sweeps Rooming House

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Three persons were killed and 10 others burned Saturday in a fire that swept a four-story rooming house in South Philadelphia.

One of the victims was identified tentatively as Charles Tabb, 55. The others—a man and a woman—were not immediately identified.

Some 40 other roomers in the dwelling fled to safety.

THIS IS A VIEW OF CAMP SWAMPY. IN ARMY TERMS, IT WOULD BE CALLED "THE BIG PICTURE." THAT MEANS YOU CAN SEE ALL THE UNPLEASANT THINGS AT ONCE, INSTEAD OF JUST ONE OR TWO.

CAMP SWAMPY IS NOT A VERY GOOD PLACE TO LIVE, WHICH MAKES IT A PERFECT ARMY CAMP. YOU CAN SEE EVERYTHING FOR WHICH IT IS FAMOUS EXCEPT THE U.S. ARMY PING-PONG AND POKER TROPHY... ITS ONLY CLAIM TO MILITARY FAME.

ONCE NAMED A PERMANENT DISASTER AREA, THE CAMP HAS SINCE DETERIORATED SHARPLY. BUT ITS MEN RETAIN A HIGH SENSE OF PURPOSE, GOING INTO TOWN EIGHT TIMES A WEEK, RETURNING ON AN AVERAGE OF SIX.

FOR THE TIME BEING, NO ONE MAY VISIT CAMP SWAMPY. THE PENTAGON HAS CLASSIFIED IT TOP SECRET. THEY DON'T WANT TO LULL THE COUNTRY INTO A FALSE SENSE OF INSECURITY.

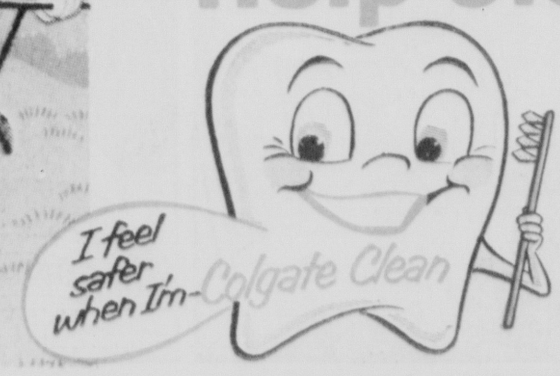
FIGHT TOOTH DECAY WITH COLGATE
Help Stop Bad Breath All Day!



Brushing your teeth right after eating is the best-known home method to help fight tooth decay. Of course, nothing completely stops decay. But, of all leading toothpastes, only Colgate contains Gardol. So, if you'd like fewer cavities, brush regularly with Colgate with Gardol. And remember! For most people, brushing with Colgate stops bad breath originating in the mouth—all day.

Yes, you fight tooth decay—help stop bad breath all day—when you brush regularly with Colgate Dental Cream with Gardol.
